NEWS and GOSSIP

WASHINGTON

Doorkeeper at the Capitol Stops President Wilson

While this was going on, Neal, the news messenger, who was mentioned in the article of the Capitol Police Force, was seen by the doorkeeper at the entrance of the president's office. "What do you want?" he asked the messenger. "I have a letter for you, Mr. Wilson," the messenger replied. "You may give it to me now," the doorkeeper said. "I will be glad to do so," the messenger replied. "Then you may go," the doorkeeper said. "I will be glad to do so," the messenger replied. "Then you may go," the doorkeeper said.
