SYNOPSIS.

George Andrews and wife are a remarkable looking man come out of the woods and ask assistance in getting a wash tub to their camp. Andrews and Constance attract them to the Claymont, Ohio, home of the beautiful Miss Ada Belle Claymont has fallen deaf, suffers from nervous prostration and is under the care of Dr. Hamlin. The hotel manager Dickens has to be Orlando Brotherson. Dickens is a detective, and Brotherson is an invalid. A girl sent to Brotherson with Ethel Challoner's letters is rejected as not serious. Brotherson, however, is persuaded by Dorothea, who declares to Brotherson that she is in love with him. Ethel Challoner signed "O. B." was written by two different men. Brotherson has a letter from Ethel Challoner to Orlando, whom she loves. Brotherson recalls the mystery of Orlando as a watchwoman in which Ethel Challoner's letters to Orlando are found. Brotherson finds Ethel Challoner's letter to Orlando and is amazed by Dorothea, who declares he is in love with Ethel. Brotherson receives a letter from Ethel Challoner, who declares he is in love with Dorothea. Brotherson receives a letter signed "O. B." which is written by two different men. Brotherson has a letter from Ethel Challoner to Orlando, whom she loves. Dorothea Dorris, mentioned in the letters Brotherson has found, is none the wiser with the name of Edith in the letters
