STOMACH TROUBLE FOR FIVE YEARS

Majority of Friends Thought Mr. Hughes Would Die, But One Helped Him to Recovery.

I suffered with stomach trouble for five years, taking other medicines. I decided to take Tanlac, although I did not think any otherwise at all.

I have now been using Hunt-Draught in their results, and it has cured me. I haven't had those awful sick headaches since I began using it.

Pomeroyton, Ky.—I am convinced as I can, as Hunt-Draught has been vices from this place. Mr. A. J. Hughes, Drug Clerk, writes as follows: "I was down with stomach trouble for 3 years, and found a very valuable medicine for dyspepsia would have sick headache so bad, as symptoms of the stomach and liver. If times, that I thought surely I would die. A composed of pure, vegetable herbs. I tried different treatments, but they could not do dangerous ingredients, and did not seem to do me any good. Its quality, put nearly. It can be verily I got so bad I could eat either of sizes, and is very bad off, and should be and all my friends, except one, thought I kept on every Lenoy check. would die. He advised me to try Thedford's Black-Draught, and got Only a quarter. Get a package today.

Twenty Thousand at Educational Barbecue

CONFIGURATION was the keynote of the great Camden barbecue, which was held in the huge wooded grove outside of Lyon ville on the 26th. Many noted orators were duly part of the program, but the real features of the occasion were informal features, and the stirred point of this social and educational event was that the host and his wife's friends and his friends were an example of co-operation that accomplish.

Co-operation Helped.

Our correspondent was engaged in the discussion of the great question of educational barbecue when he turned and interrupted him by saying: "I don't believe you feel as you do about this affair just for the thing you say. You are interested in the accumulation of my good friends and neighbors. Proving a moment to point toward the big tent where the barbecue being carved and ready, where distributed he continued: "A number of those white scattered fellows that you see in that tent keep their eyes and waiting on the people are my neighbors, who are helping me make this a real success. So here that I would have been able to hire for many months would have created the splendid atmosphere that these good friends have. And the mayor and the sheriff of Lyon ville have agreed that all stores shall be closed from 10 until 2 today. It be all outgoing. Tell your paper that this barbecue is on

Each Woodford county's success as the success of a town, because of neighborly co-operation."

Neighborly Atmosphere

That the huge crowd that began to arrive as early as 8 o'clock felt this atmosphere of neighborliness and co-operation of which Mr. Camden had spoken was evident. It was a happy throng of people who were thinking of the good that had come to us and hoping that the day would be a success. Everybody was glad to see everybody else. Greetings were exchanged and hand clasps were given and taken. Old friends met and renewed their friendships. Old acquaintances were renewed and new ones made. Everybody was in the wonderful old state of mind and heart.

Kentucky Has Arrived.

It was not many hours until everybody who visited this feeling that seemed to be in the very air of the place. Those who had traveled long distances to attend the barbecue and those who had never faced a Kentucky audience before, seized at the opening of the barbecue three of the speakers gathered in Mr. Camden's home and that over the heads from the day. Tidwell was depending among the trees in the town and the one fact he say out was leaving with the strangers from the barbecue when one of the speakers turned to the others and said: "I'm going to make a statement that I want you two fellows to say what you think of it. You like me, laugh at me from a far northern state, and you should be able to judge if it is true or what I say." He stopped talking, looking out among the shadows that grew among the trees as the sun began to set, and continued: "I came down to this barbecue with a feeling that I had been, and of course that Kentucky was going to think about co-operation, advertising and many other things. Well, she isn't bothering; she has begun. It was written large all over the barbecue of the day. Things will happen in Kentucky from now on, and happen fast. KENTUCKY HAS ARRIVED. If I should leave here and be gone ten years I would not be able to recognize the state. I'm sure I would have to have changes so instantaneous as that time. Am I right, fellows?"

"Right you are," they said, and the others in a breath.

Jeff Gordon then had something to say. By 3 o'clock the afternoon of the 19th a crowd loaded with choice beef began to arrive, and old Hedge Hanbert barbecued to see that the meat in the trenches were as warm as they should be and that the fires in the pits at the west were ready for such a mighty load.

Preparing the Food.

Hickory fires colored men set on ready brown-clothing while they pool and old Uncle Billy Smith, of politics that were to be used in the making of the feast. When the fires pooled down and were in their over the glowing coals four hundred pounds of beef were placed in the trenches to be prepared for the 10 o'clock. It required much to fix the list above that were to feed the 20,000 that. The fires were full of genuine good and alight had settled down and the barbecue was ready to cover a score of shifting gridirons and knives. Nearly 1,000 men gathered in. It were handling the fires and the barbecue while others were building roaring fires with which to boil feathered forgings. Others were in charge of enough coffee to feed an army.

Then the carving began, while standing in front of the numerous pinks that had been filled with hot and tender for the hungry crowd. At about nine o'clock the feast began. Then an hour and a half to drink that ended at about 11 o'clock, when the tents and all the streets were crowded with people.

Water Was Analyzed.

The men were still hesitating when one of Mr. Camden's friends stepped up and announced recently: "I find that we can make you comfortable about the water. Mr. Camden usually does things before he does. He thought that there might be some danger, so he had this water analyzed to be on the safe side."

Each of the many tents were provided with ice and cooling drinks and looked much relieved.

A Crowd of 20,000.

The crowd? Oh, it was estimated all the way from 10,000 to 30,000. There must have been more than 20,000. There was plenty as the handling for this six or eight barbecues, but when the boundaries were marked on the grounds and more than that number were in sight.

Autos were just flocked there. Among the advantages of the people to the vehicles and automobiles given house. The interesting thing was their figures as 5,000. Add to this 15,000, those that walked, those that came on foot and back, on bicycles and motorcycles, and you will find that 20,000 is about right. These figures may be low or in another manner. In preparing or serve the barbecue to the people 10,000 tin cups and saucers had been provided, and they did not go around. Anywhere, it was told me by a friend as any one had hoped for.

Thirteen Speakers.

As there were thirteen speakers during the day, it would be an impossible to give any idea of what they said. It would be a waste of space, and very little was also almost as to lose. Just the same, all of the speeches were delightful and the talk it might be well to call Hamilton's address of welcome to which. He seems to have caught and fingered every one present and the feeling that would show itself in the crowd at the barbecue. the feeling which the speakers and your correspondent caught the feeling that is home and the way forwardness how to say something gracious. The address was as follows:

Mr. Camden's Address.

Mr. Chairman and neighbors—My friends, I don't know what to say to you, nearly welcome. I am truly delighted to have you here.

I hope you will allow me to tell you briefly what we have to do and when I do idea to have this barbecue. We have a great people in Kentucky. We have a great laughing steam. I have been in both of the states of the union and have traveled in many lands, but I am not afraid to state or say the wise that has such unlimited potential fine, variety of soil, diversity of products and other blessings as our age has increased and Kentucky.

In ten years time she will lead in the production of tobacco in the production of coal and what is more as the citizens of a state we should be proud of. for she has a greater deposit of high grade coal than any other two states of West Virginia. It was Kentucky and Virginia (I am almost say other county), that if we have a population of one-fifteenth of the world we have within ourselves the natural resources to make every person of a most advanced and prosperous people. Let us do our part and insure the raw materials—iron ruling ore, coal, oil, gas, timber, clay and phosphate deposits, oil, gas and an inexhaustible water supply, grazing lands and a beneficent climate.

Great Farming State.

"Yet, while the mineral wealth of the state is a vital thing and means much to us, and what we can do with it, to my mind the very soul and spirit of the state is the crops that grow in her fertile lands and pastures. Some years ago Kentucky was proud to be known as the sun shine upon and greatest tobacco state. Well, she is today will ever be a great farming state, but the character of her crops will continue to determine the character and development of her people. Not one has well said that a people cannot be greater or stronger than their food. What a man eats will draw attention to today and to emphasize it we need only recall that the kaiser does not like pork. The great source of power in the world today is the city population is decreasing and the rural population increasing, owing entirely to its advanced school system.

"Notwithstanding these adverse and harsh natural conditions the export of cattle in 1911 was about 225,000,000 pounds and to Great Britain alone it amounted to $31,142,735. The total value of all cattle exported amounted to $4,121,500.

"The money value of eggs exported in the same year amounted to $7,306,000.

"The export of horses from Denmark in the same year amounted to 29,275 and mules, over a thousand, to 2,252. With making a total cash valuation of exports of $60,000,000. In addition to what was consumed at home.

Denmark's Example

"Now, the point is, our country is so flat and wet that the dressed food and such diseases practically unknown to us, has to be unceasingly watched.

"Ten years ago the agricultural wage was brought about by education, cooperation and governmental aid. It was hardly enough to afford a subsistence and the farmers worked on and on, and their lives were a wonderful people. In 1903, when Hon. Asle J. Gronna, of Devils Lake, North Dakota, Denmark was in the blackest depth of poverty. He was amazed to find that it was then determined to try to lift the people. And that enterprise led to establishing the rural schools which in a few years spread to the country.

Individualism Harmful.

"With us the chief obstacle to organization and co-operation, to my mind, is the intense individualism of the Kentuckian. That spirit of self reliance and independence is a virtue, to stand alone and sufficient, which leads him to the greatest pioneer that would have known, is to a measure a handicap in the way of further progress and material development. We are not to live in the spot of the earth where there is more individualism and less co-operation and co-unity under stand the destructive quality of waste and extravagance and individualism.

"We must establish team work and co-operation. We must trust one another. If we are to prosper further we must have faith in the solidarity of Kentucky interests.

Future of Kentucky.

"I have no unbounded faith in the future of Kentucky and in the ability of Kentuckians to do things when their situation and interests are centered upon those things. It is because of my optimism and hope in personal help in quickening this movement that I am glad to be with you today. I want you to get all of the pleasure it gives me in having you here today. I want you to get the proceedings of this day to the countries."

COMMENT.

A recent visit to the mountains of Eastern Kentucky, over the L. & E., and the extension beyond Jackson made by the L. & N., proved a revelation to us in the rapid progress that has been made in that section of the State since the coming of the railroad. We have always held that there were in Eastern Kentucky opportunities for the young men as great as could be found in the West. Lying here, at our very door, this section of Kentucky, rich in possibilities, has long been overlooked, as it were. But the day of the Mountains is here. The coming of the L. & N. has opened a territory rich in mineral wealth; has placed the thriving mountain towns of Hazard, Whitesburg and McRoberts within a day's ride of the Bluegrass capital; has given to Lexington and Louisville a new trade territory of unlimited possibilities. If rumor may be credited, the L. & N. will, before long, through trains to the Atlantic coast in operation over their new road within a few years. We repeat, we are certain that they are spending thousands of dollars in the improvement of the property, as well as in the construction of the new coal road, which taps the old L. & E. line at Hazard. If you are a business man with money to invest, or if you are interested in the industrial growth of Kentucky, a trip to the mountain section will be worth while to you.

The Flemingsburg City Council has passed an ordinance, providing for the submission to the voters of that city, on October 7, looking to the issuance of $25,000 bonds for the purpose of installing a system of waterworks. Hurrah for Flemingsburg! They may not get 'em, but they have started the ball rolling, at any rate. And in the meantime, we, the citizens of a town which is one of the best loose leaf tobacco markets in the State, continue to go to the branch for a bucket of water. That is, we do, when there is any water in the branch.

It isn't a remarkable that Harry K. expressed his willingness to go on Jerome's bond, when the latter was surprised in a little private room at the "penny ante," over in the Dominion. The wonder of it is that Thaw should have the money, after hiring lawyers for the past ten years.

H. F. Hillenmeyer Writes Of Duroys Of Past Years

Mr. H. F. Hillenmeyer, the Fayette nurseryman, writing to the Lexington Herald, relative to the protracted drouth, from which we are suffering at this writing, says:

"I am sure that at this time many of our people (30) have an interest in the dry and distressful years of the early '70's. Mr. H. F. Hillenmeyer, of Lexington, Ky., has shown himself a faithful keeper, and many times have been in this time season about as unfavorable for crops. A copious rain fell May 4, 1874, and a few light showers of about 20 hundredths more was rain enough to stop the plows for the afternoon, and plenty of equal volume on the night of July 28. Showers in September, May, and fall November were merely dust layers. It is needless to say that there was no grass in the pastures, little millet, and such like, that usually abounds in midsummer and corn small, shaffy and high priced. Wheat was a back. Tobacco was hardly at that time a whisper.

"In 1904 the drouth began in May and continued through September, with the exception of about three months below 2 inches. It is needless to comment on the misery that then set in on fields brown as a brick. From the fall rains of that year, later than ever by the calendar, from the first of November to record second August 31, 1861, making the most fine-ly-eight days.

"In 1912 is before us and less. The rainfall from May 1 to September 1 has been 16.25 inches, a trifle more than the average in 1903. It has fallen in spells of a week or more, from the 4th of July to record second August 31, 1861, making the most fine-ly-eight days.

Will Memorialize The Founding Of Masonry In Ky.

The 125th anniversary of the introduction of Freemasonry into Kentukey and the "West" is to be celebrated in Lexington November 17. Lexington Lodge No. 1 was chartered by the Grand Lodge of Virginia on that day a century and a quarter ago, and four other lodges were established by the same authority before the dawn of the nineteenth century. A joint session of Lexington Lodge it is expected will be held on the occasion, and the Grand Master of Kentucky, his successors, will gather on that date and attempt to show the Blue Grass by word and deed the original intent and purpose of the pioneer Masons in organizing the first lodge in this city.

Our Little Tale Of Woe!

THE QUESTION of collecting subscriptions is a very serious one for the country papers and it has been the cause of "brain fag" for many editors who are trying to make both ends meet in the newspaper game.

Many newspaper subscribers do not realize what the little amount they owe means to the editor. If they would only stop to think what a sum it would make if five hundred subscribers were indebted for the same amount, they would realize that it would be very many of them per se, get mad and stop their papers if the editor reminds them in any of their indebtedness.

We shall send out statements shortly to all who are in arrears on their subscription. If you do not like to be reminded of the fact in this way, you can save us a two cent stamp by remitting promptly. The date on your paper shows when your subscription expired.

New Salary Plan Is Suggested By Hamlett

In a letter to county superintendents of schools in Kentucky, State Superintendent Barksdale Hamlett discusses the salary schedule under the new law.

Mr. Hamlett declares that the old per capita system was too rigid and unadaptable to local conditions, and that the small districts suffered on account of the disparity of appropriations compared with the big districts. The present law gives the county boards the right to fix salaries, and during the past year two great things were accomplished, the addition to the salary fund of the entire State, and an increase in attendance of approximately 50 per cent in the rural schools of the State.

Under the new law the teacher's salary is fixed by the quality as well as the quantity of her work, conditions by actual attendance in school.

It appears, continues Superintendent Hamlett, that last year the law as administered favored the small district to the detriment of the large district, but this is not the spirit of the law, and in order to accomplish what the framers of the law contemplated Mr. Hamlett suggests the following plan:

SALARY PLAN SUGGESTED

Make the salary schedule as usual, making a little difference between the initial salary of the teacher in the first class school, and the same teacher in the second class school, but add a condition similar to the following: Each teacher whose school averages over forty pupils for the term, shall receive a stated monthly increase in the salary, say 50 cents, or whatever local conditions may justify, for each student above forty in general average.

Fate Of Tobacco Crop Sealed Says Robards

E. T. Robards writes as follows of the condition of this year's tobacco crop:

"Lexington, Ky., Sept. 6, 1913

Beyond doubt the fate of the 1913 crop of Burley tobacco in Central Kentucky is sealed. Another hard week of dry weather without even any local showers of consequence has crossed a great portion of the crop and added materially to the hardening of the soil, until there is no other hope or remedy save to cut and house the crop, and this is being done as rapidly as the limited labor will permit.

In this connection we find a large part of the crop has fired at the bottom up four to six inches and sometimes even further up the plant. These, owing to youth far below the age of military service, be willingly, bravely and constantly performing the duties incumbent upon an active member of that most active arm of the service, the cavalry of Gen. John H. Morgan.

"Returning home when the war was ended, he was in civil life as he had done in the army, the respect and confidence of the people, and while yet a very young man he was twice chosen to represent his native county of Bourbon in the House of Representatives, where he worthily served his splendid constituency. Later in life he once more held a seat in the House from another constituency. He was the author of the original bill pensioning worthy Confederate soldiers and the widows of those who had died.

"Though by reason of many changes made in the bill by the House it failed to meet his full approval, he voted for its final passage.

"Resolved, That the loss of our comrade is keenly felt by all of the association and an engrossed copy be sent to the venerable mother of our comrade to whom attaches the honor of being one of the only two living mothers of a Confederate soldier in Kentucky.

Songs Of South Are Sung As The Re-Union Closes

Enjoyable Meeting Of Morgan's Men Held At Olympia

H. M. TAYLOR ELECTED SECRETARY

Lofty Tribute To Memory Of The Late G. R. Keller

With the singing of the old songs of the Southland, the annual reunion of Morgan's Men which was held last week, at Olympian Springs, came to an end, Thursday, after one of the most enjoyable meetings ever held. The reunion began Wednesday with an attendance of about seventy-five veterans, and the "boys", continued to come in during the day, and on Thursday morning.

The final session of the reunion was held Thursday morning, when the following officers, for the ensuing year, were elected:

Others for Sunday Year.

The officers elected were:

Horace M. Taylor, secretary and treasurer, Carlisle, Ky.

Judge J. W. Alchery, first vice president, Stanford, Ky.

Major Otis S. Tenney, second vice president, Lexington, Ky.

Dr. Edwin O. Guerrant, chaplain, Wilmore, Ky.

Lev P. Young, commissary, Lexington, Ky.

Executive Committee—H. M. Taylor, Carlisle; W. L. Robb, Helena; J. O. Alchery, first vice president, Stanford, Ky.

The afternoon session Wednesday, was featured by lofty tributes to the memory of the late Mr. Green P. Keller, whose death occurred since the last meeting. The resolutions follow:

RESOLUTIONS ON GREEN E. KELLER

"Whereas, Green P. Keller, ten years the secretary of the Association of Morgan's Men, passed from the scene of earthly labors September 18th, 1912. Therefore be it

"Resolved, That in his death there was lost to the active roll of this association an official than whom none was more faithful; none more courteous to his comrades; none who felt more warmly the bond of sympathy and love which bound together the old soldiers of the Confederacy. Entering the service as a youth far below the age of military service, he willingly, bravely and constantly performed the duties incumbent upon an active member of that most active arm of the service, the cavalry of Gen. John H. Morgan.

"Returning home when the war was ended, he was in civil life as he had done in the army, the respect and confidence of the people, and while yet a very young man he was twice chosen to represent his native county of Bourbon in the House of Representatives, where he worthily served his splendid constituency. Later in life he once more held a seat in the House from another constituency. He was the author of the original bill pensioning worthy Confederate soldiers and the widows of those who had died.

"Though by reason of many changes made in the bill by the House it failed to meet his full approval, he voted for its final passage.

"Resolved, That the loss of our comrade is keenly felt by all of the association and an engrossed copy be sent to the venerable mother of our comrade to whom attaches the honor of being one of the only two living mothers of a Confederate soldier in Kentucky.
