SOIL FERTILITY WITHOUT STOCK IS POSSIBLE THROUGH CROP ROTATION

When Residue are Returned to Land Properly and Legumes are Shared With Nature in Fair Proportion, Productivity can be Maintained With Comparative Ease

(E. J. Risher, Assistant Agronomist, Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station, Lexington, Ky.)

Generally the most profitable type of farming for Kentucky is one in which the soil is kept in a state of high fertility...

With the high prices which crop and stock have had, the farmer has been tempted to increase his production...

It is not necessary to use a large amount of fertilizer to maintain the soil in a state of high fertility...
