SYNOPSIS.

Minnie, aspiring house girl at Hope mansion, falls in love with Dick Jennings, secretary of Miss Patty Jennings, who is the sister of Mrs. Hope. Dick's father is dead and he and Mrs. Hope, the old doctor who cares for the aristocratic family, and Miss Patty, the eccentric spinster, look after him. Dick has had support on a certain date and Miss Patty has promised him a check in a few months or further assistance. Minnie has a stormy desire Dick's arrival. Mr. Thomas Darcy, a wealthy old bachelor, is visiting the family. Mr. Jennings, Miss Patty's brother, a college man in hard luck is presented to Darcy as a man who is looking for a job. In the meantime Dick has been ill and take charge of the association until Jennings arrives. Then Dick leaves for Arizona, and the secretary sends Jennings to the ranch. Jennings is a failure there, too, and he returns to Hope. Darcy, who is at the association, finds Jennings a job as a clerk and Dick as assistant in the management of the ranch. Phillis Summers, leading lady of Darcy's company, is also visiting at the Hope home. Phillis is using Darcy's automobile to run up stumps during Dick's arrival. Mr. Thomas Darcy, Jr., arrives from Europe and leaves for the Jennings' ranch. Tom Darcy
