SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

State Association To Meet At Lexington On October 20th To 23rd, 1914

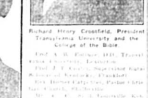
OVER ONE HUNDRED SPEAKERS

An Excellent Program Has Been Prepared and Large Attendance Expected—Roll Call of Counties Will Be Interesting Feature and Every County Should Be Represented.

Louisville, Ky.—(Special)—It would not be possible for us to give space for the entire program of the State convention of the Kentucky Sunday School Association which will be held in Lexington Oct. 20-23, as it extends over four days, with more than twenty sessions and over one hundred speakers. Every one who is connected with the Sunday School will find something of interest, and should be present and help. The pastor, the superintendent, the teacher and the people will all find something of especial interest. Every one will be there. Tuesday night there will be a reception tendered to Rotary Lewis by Rotarians of Lexington. Dr. Rotary, followed by addresses from the President and

Richard Henry Counsling, President Transylvania University and the Rev. [illegible]

Mr. C. F. Kahlon, President Kentucky Sunday school



Dr. William A. Brown, Missionary for Kentucky, Tennessee and Southern Indiana

Apply Steam Freely For Lumbago

Your attitude—of lumbago—is not nearly so helpless as it seems. The most painful in a simple inflammation of the muscles of the back and loins. Lumbago is a form of rheumatism. It will yield perfectly to Sloan's, which penetrates quickly through the skin to the nerve, lender muscles, loosens up the back and makes it well. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25 cents at any druggist, and have it in the house against colds, sore and swollen joints, rheumatism, neuralgia, sciatica, gout, etc. "I have known it off and on for years and it has never back if not satisfied." The Secret of Lonesome Cove.

A boy, my the most desolate, the most reckless, sound that Sodgwick had ever heard from human lips, issued from the air. Before he could gather his senses to resort and deny he had drawn himself to his feet and the two hastened window framed only the

It is possible that you really believe it," Sodgwick exclaimed.

"It possible that but for the sounds I would do what I cannot describe to you. But I do and exact life for life. Leave town and I find you with my own rifle."

"Where were Wife? The cry burst from Sodgwick's lips

"Dying, the dead of night at a two distance," concluded Blair

"That is a lie," said Sedgwick very low, for which I shall kill you if you repeat it even to your own thoughts. It was no rendezvous. Is it mad or vicious that you can't believe in innocence? Stop and think! How could it have been a rendezvous when I came here, as you know, for a

"Shut up, true," said the other fiercely. "That still remains to be established.

By now returned the artist. "You speak of your son's wife. To carry out the farce of the main hostile shouldst you have said his 'widow?'"

"The wife of my son," he was told answered Mr. Blair bitterly.

"Then I am sorry for you, but I think I begin to see light. The conclusion on the dead woman's neck her features. But helps to clear it up. The dead woman was none past light of Wilfred Blair's. She came here either to reconnect her away over into or to blackmail him. He gave her his wife's jewels. Then he followed her to the cliffs and killed her, perhaps in a drunken frenzy. And you, Mr. Alexander Blair to save your son's reputation, hid somewhere, bribed the coroner and the medical officer, carried off the false death and burial and are now trying to make me a party to it. I know to be innocent further to fortify your position. But what damnable lie have you told her?"

Following the exposition Alexander Blair's face was a study in changing emotions. At the close his features resolved in the suggestion of a sardonic smile.

"I have you to the company of your lawyer, sir," said he and he turned shortly after him.

Then Blair's better nest and looking out but with a fire at his heart, the unfortunate came to his former and was kept from slumber on the studio couch.

In brief outline Sedgwick told of the [illegible]

"Do you know, Kent said, "I would not swallow a single word of Alexander Blair's statement. There is a very interesting and incisive theory in the fact is that Wilfred Blair was dead when he was supposed to be at the tragedy at Lonesome Cove."

What Would You Do?

There are many times when one man questions another's actions and motives. Each acts differently under different circumstances. They question is, what would you do right now if you had a severe cold? Could you do better than to take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy? It is highly recommended by people who have used it for years and know its value. Mrs. O. E. Sargent, Peru, Ind., says, "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is worth its weight in gold and I take pleasure in recommending it." For sale by All Dealers.

"TURNING THE TABLES"

By PHIL S. CAREY.

Up in the mountains of east Tennessee, or, rather, in a peaceful little valley nestling [illegible] by nesting trees, [illegible] church ranges [illegible] the year 1900 a [illegible] stood, 40 miles [illegible] length, known [illegible] the Knoxville [illegible] Bristol. [illegible] of the [illegible] of the road was at [illegible] 17 miles [illegible] Knoxville, a [illegible] little village of some thirty [illegible] souls, not counting the ticket agent. Morristown was the other terminus, 89 miles from Bristol, as the name "Knoxville and Bristol" was more significant of the hopes and aspirations of the little road than of its achievements.

The inhabitants along the thinly settled mountain slopes had three seven-falling sources of supply—the occasional tan bark and summer boarders.

The K. & B. first started out of Carter's each morning and for several years in the capacity of postal clerk, shared its many and varied vicissitudes. Its joys and sorrows, failures and triumphs, wash-outs, wrecks and accelerated the time of arriving mostly where on schedule time.

The engineer was a big, raw-boned, good-natured individual named Bill Allen. In a little story of his own, which I am about to tell—

It was late one summer evening, as we were winding our way down the little valley and got word that several heavy white a section gang about ten miles above had been caught off by the side of its engine and to see that the train crew assisted in getting the train over, several of them stood on the pilot and others on the tender.

"There is something about this affair," said Bill, "that I don't like. I've got a kind of long ago, a day that I shall never be able to efface from my memory. It happened a number of years ago, when I was pulling a passenger train on the Birmingham district.

"On the run I had one of we had on a couple of extra coaches—Sunday excursion coaches, I guess—and, anyway, the station train was crowded full of women and children.

"Every time [illegible] a stop I could hear the excitement and the laughter of those children up in the engine.

"Well, we pulled into a little station, and I sat there in the cab watching the switching movements of the station master, who had gone in after orders. He was gone some time, and, in fact, there was no siding, just a single track and a [illegible] and [illegible] seldom used. Directly ahead for half a mile was one of the steepest grades in the division. Just at the top of the grade a bridge, and, on the other side, several miles, loading to the coal mines.

"Directly, in examining the cab, I came around on three at the top of the grade that afternoon a big heavily loaded car suddenly got loose and started down the grade straight at us. I knew that there was no time to lose. I turned perfectly weak as I saw that black demon of destruction coming down upon us, gaining speed at every second!

"I thought of the merry laughing children back in the coaches, of the mothers all unconscious of the awful danger, and I thought of the fearful and certain result that seemed inevitable.

"Faster and faster it came, with a roar, and a shower of black sparks streaming about it! I tried to think of some way to escape, but my brain refused to work and the power of my brain re-

"But, suddenly there was a better idea that struck at least my despairing brain, a quick, action-using fellow, I sprang to the throttle in the fireplace threw it wide open, and made a wild dash for the station.

"I knew that it would be a matter of time I guess!

"Then I looked back and saw the coming like a streak of lightning, tumbling and rolling and leaping and flying from the wheels. Then it struck the turn also, and with a crash that seemed to shake the earth—and we were saved!

"For the flagman quickly turned the switch, and the car went on and kept back up the grade.

"Saved!" said Bill reverently, as we proudly, as we all his innocent little ones!" "If you don't believe it, you can—the turntable and the engine at Arrow, if you don't believe it, you can see the branch to the coal mines."

Exchange Suggested.

One evening, as he sat gloomily reading the paper, the editor, the dog, the baby, the cat and the parrot were all making a noise, his wife made a suggestion.

"Why don't you," said she, "write a good thing to encourage your business?"

Yes, I might encourage it into a collection," he replied, "if I didn't quite see how to do it!" he concluded, concentrated sarcasm.

"I didn't mean exactly," she answered, sweetly, "as would you not write a few lines for us at the office instead of at home?"

Happiness.

Happiness has a way of hovering around those who are not trying to make others happy.

Although it seems strange the ivory imported into London has decreased, the falling off has been caused by a new market having been created by the increased use of the plastic materials. The ivory coming from that region is now used for billiard balls, and when the quantities sent to both markets are taken together the total imports actually show an increase.

COMMENT

We had the pleasure of hearing, for the first time, a speech made by the Hon. William Jennings Bryan, at Lexington last Tuesday. Never particularly exacting to sit through political harangues, and, we'll admit, always inclined to be puzzled at the adoration awarded the peerless Nebraskan by his countless admirers, we entered the Auditorium expecting to hear the usual stock in trade of the usual campaign spellbinder, accompanied, of course, with an interest attaching to the speaker by reason of his great fame.

Despite the rain, which had fallen unceasingly since the night before, the great hall was packed, and one wondered how tremendous would have been the gathering had the weather been propitious.

Dear old "Pres" Kimball, that wheel horse of Bluegrass Democracy, introduced the speaker, briefly and not long.

Thirty minutes later we realized that we were standing, and had not moved an inch in that time. We looked about and there were men prominent in the political and business affairs of the Bluegrass. Evidently they had not planned a word. It was splendid—as all a Democrat can be—and as one sensed it from the first sentence Mr. Bryan uttered. One felt it as keenly, understood it as perfectly, as would a Kentuckian, first seeing Dan Patch trot a fast heat, as would a music lover listening Walter Johnson pitch for the first time. The "clean" of the man, as our friend said, is unmistakable.

What did he say? Why, just what hundreds of campaign orators are saying every day and will say every day until November; what every Democrat knows, and what, one may well believe, every Democrat will say. Nothing startling, nothing new in tone, that would Woodrow Wilson can only be elected by Democrats; that the way to endorse him at the polls is to see that his hands are not tied by Republican Congress; that the best interests of the Nation demand that the splendid work of the present Administration be continued.

This, coupled with a review of the accomplishments of the Administration, illustrated with a few apt anecdotes, and Mr. Bryan's speech was finished—finished with his audience just as expected it at the psychological moment, so to speak.

Simple, direct, without rant; concise, forceful, carrying conviction, the usual stereotyped phrases left out, the speech had the force of immortal truths. And we should be soon to him, temporarily at least, in the days while sound of his voice.

He did not say much that is debatable quality, perhaps, call it personality, personal magnetism, or what-not, but he knows well when Nicholas county man said afterward, "There's no use talking; he's a class by himself." And he is.

With the Louisville people, who have been eating choice cuts from Democratic hams, it looks like a case of "a horse in form," to revise the reception version a bit.

Joints Stiff From Rheumatism! Hot Springs Failed To Cure, Andes Medicine Does The Work

Montgomery, Ala., June 10, 1914.—Old Rheumatism, Arkansas, has a world-wide reputation as the mecca for the cure of all forms of rheumatism. Invalids are there every season, and are in rolling chairs. Every train brings some who are drawn and joints have become stiff, and they come to take the health-giving waters, with hopes of being restored to their normal health again. People of all walks of life are to be found there, all seeking that coveted boon, the unassuming of all good and great things.

However, these health-giving waters with their wonderful fame as to their curative powers, some timer fail to give the sufferer any relief whatever. This is proven from the statement of Mr. J. D. Rosenbaum, living on the corner of Mildred and Mobile streets, who has been a sufferer from rheumatism of the worst form for the past 1914—[illegible] years, during which time he has tried almost every remedy that was recommended, but without relief. He finally decided to try Hot Springs, Ark., and went there and remained for [illegible] months, but instead of getting relief he got worse. He returned home and was confined to his bed for [illegible] months, suffering the most excruciating pain. He was induced to try Andes Medicine, and after taking [illegible] bottles he was entirely relieved of his rheumatism, and is able to be up and around and attend to his business affairs. He says he cannot say too much in praise of Andes Medicine, and will always recommend it to his friends.

Andes Medicine is a scientific combination of Sarsaparilla, Blood Root, Stillingia, Yellow Dock, Iodide of Potash, Lithia, Nux Vomica, Cascara Bark, Cardamon Seed, Coriander Seed, Juniper Berries, Caraway Seed, Fennel Seed, Anise Seed, Glycerine, Pure Rye Whiskey, Pure Distilled Water, Sugar and Aromatic. Andes Medicine is sold by druggists everywhere, or direct from the Andes Medicine Co., Montgomery, Ala. Price $1.00 per bottle.

No Sunday Train On New Schedule Just Issued

The new time card, showing the change in schedule on the local branch of the L. & N. was received last week.

Not only is the daily train, reaching Carlisle at 6:32 and returning at 9:35 taken off, but the Sunday train, reaching here at 12:42 and returning from Maysville at 5:00 is discontinued.

It was the understanding of THE MERCURY, as stated last week, that the Sunday train would not be taken off. In fact the information was given out by Mr. Anderson here so understood it. Mr. Anderson stated to a representative of THE MERCURY Saturday, however, that the removal of the Sunday train was not taken up at the meeting here last week, it was through an order sent out, as the matter was taken up at the meeting held at Paris and Cynthiana.

Mr. Anderson stated that it was the policy of the road to discontinue as many trains as possible—that the necessity of the remaining one existed in having worked a hardship on the train crew to stand up a while half-hourly tobacco. He had in twenty days over last season which yielded $1,500 pounds to the acre, and which sold for high, passing about $450 an acre. The fall sales was grown in new land, and a number of acres averaged a full ton per height. The mammoth stalk was sent to Lexington to be placed on exhibition.

Dear Sir:

The case of Mr. Garrard Morvan will be of interest to you and probably help you in your work. It is my understanding that the policy had lapsed and had been [illegible] which occurred a short time ago.

It happened, however, that the Company was then engaged in systematically investigating all the cases of policyholders with whom they had been out of touch for a number of years, advertising and through the assistance of the Courier-Journal here. Mr. Morgan's widow was thus located and informed that she did not know we owed.

This investigating campaign resulted in the Company paying out approximately $250,000 and in many cases the policyholder had died and no one knew anything of the policy having been in force.

Big Tobacco Plant.

Lancaster, Ky., Oct. 16.—The tallest stalk of tobacco ever seen in this part of the State and probably the tallest ever grown anywhere, was raised by Capt. C. C. Logan on a farm near here. The stalk measured eleven feet in height, and although Mr. Logan had not topped it, he got from it ten large leaves of the finest texture. The tobacco grown by this planter is a cross between Burley and white burley tobacco. He had in twenty acres last season which yielded $1,500 pounds to the acre, and which sold for high, passing about $450 an acre. The fall sales was grown in new land, and a number of acres averaged a full ton per height. The mammoth stalk was sent to Lexington to be placed on exhibition.

CONSUMPTION TAKES 350 PEOPLE DAILY

Over 350 people succumb to consumption every day in the United States. Science knows that the germs only thrive when the system is run down by colds or sickness, overwork, combining to form a weak and weakened condition. Scott's Emulsion nourishes the body during these conditions and builds up the system so that it can throw off disease. Try Scott's Emulsion after meals. The cod liver oil in Scott's Emulsion warms the body by enriching the blood; it positively checks the wasting away of tissue and the hypophosphites in Scott's Emulsion tones the nerves to avoid colds and prevent consumption.

If you want to know more about Scott's Emulsion write for free sample, and be sure to say you saw this in the Carlisle Mercury. Scott & Bowne, Chemists, 409 Pearl street, New York. Large size 50c and $1.00 at all druggists.

Rankin Resigns As Secretary Of Burley Co.

After six years of service, J. M. Rankin, secretary of the Burley Tobacco Society, has tendered his resignation, effective Nov. 1. Mr. Rankin was elected secretary of the Burley Tobacco Society upon its organization in 1900 and remained with it until its disbandment. Mr. Rankin was then selected secretary of the Burley Tobacco Company, the big concern that is now operating seventeen loose leaf warehouses in the Burley district and operating the Strater Main factory in Louisville.

Mr. Rankin resigns to take a much needed rest and will then engage in other business. he having several propositions under consideration.

When seen last Friday afternoon President Clarence LeBus, of the Burley Tobacco Company, was asked if any applications for the position made vacant by Mr. Rankin's resignation, had been received. He said: "You will have to excuse me."

Vice President L. J. Ferguson, of the Burley Tobacco Company, commenting on J. D. Clark, the former manager of the Farmers' Burley Loose Leaf Sales Company, of Owingsville, this county this morning, to look over the tobacco situation there.—Lee Herald.

Kentucky Crop Report

The crop report as of October 1st, is in circuit now to summarize. Corn is rarely out of condition and partly in the shock. Tobacco is housed and part of the crop is in the house. The wheat crop is in and but is unfinished. The facts ascertained by the December 1st report show the condition of corn to be 74 per cent., which would practically three-fourths of a corn crop. The crop will not be as large as expected in September 1st on account of the dropping of 9 points. A great many complaints in regard to there not being out well on the ear have been received. The figures to early planted corn not being matured in most instances.

The condition of Burley tobacco on 91 per cent., as compared to 91 per cent. on September 1st, 1914, with 77 per cent of the crop housed by October 1st. The condition of Dark tobacco is 89 per cent., as compared to 72 per cent. on September 1st, 1914, with 67 per cent. of the crop housed by October 1st. The crop is only about
