Venerable Citizen of Carlisle Celebrates 81st Birthday

THE MERCURY is in receipt of the following letter:

Ryan, Ky., Sept. 30, 1914.

Mr. W. B. Darnaby, Carlisle, Ky.

Dear Sir:—Please publish in the gentlemen of Carlisle, who have been with us visiting Dad and Mrs. E. B. Pitt, of class, enjoyed his eighty-first birthday here yesterday at the home of Lawrenceburg, Ind. He is enjoying good health at this great age, and with his hair and beard almost as white as snow, has the step of one in youth. He has been a life long farmer and a farmer with the exception of a few years he was in business in Cincinnati. He has been twice married and has three children, two sons and three daughters, and eight grandchildren, the first wife died in February, 1866, and his present wife, who is in her 67th year, is the mother of all but the 79 years of age on October 1st.

He moved to Kentucky in 1851 and has lived in the State ever since.

He has one son who is a minister of the gospel and one who is County Attorney of Nicholas, the daughters have always lived in this part of the county, one the wife of W. B. Darnaby, Commissioner's Landing, and one the wife of E. B. Pitt, a prosperous young merchant at this place.

Mrs. Ryan, herself, has and his venerable wife an excellent dinner which was much enjoyed by all present.

Here's hoping that Mr. and Mrs. Ryan may have many more happy days in this life and enjoy God's blessing in the future.

A Sufferer From Rheumatism For 25 Years Tells What The Great Andes Medicines Did For Him.

When anyone has suffered from an ailment for 25 or 30 years the disease has become chronic and in many cases affects the entire family so to Rheumatism, as it is a well known fact that there are many new sufferers that will eliminate uric acid entirely from the system. Andes' Great Prescription, where properly used and given a good, fair trial will relieve and positively remove all uric acid from the system by its action on the kidneys.

And where the joints have become stiff or swollen Andes' Oil used externally with the Great Prescription, will cure any case that is curable.

Mr. J. W. H. Jennings, of 507 Columbus street, has been a chronic sufferer from Rheumatism for 25 or 30 years. He says: "I have spent many a dollar for medicine that has done me no good whatever, but after using Andes's Prescription and Oil about two weeks and it had done me more real good than any medicine I have ever taken."

Andes' Prescription cures all forms of Rheumatism, Backache, Liver troubles, Weak Back, Pains over Kidneys, having frequent desire to urinate, Sediment in yellow or saliow, losing flesh, appetite poor, tongue coated, bad taste in mouth on arising, weak spells, dizzy and lightness of head, shortness of breath, palpitation of the heart, bloating and fullness after meals, constipated, sick nervous headaches and hot flashes. Price, Andes' Great Prescription, $1.00 per bottle, 2 for $2.50, 6 for $5.00.

Order by mail if you can't call at Drug stores and information enclosed with each shipment. Also for the valuable book, "Health and Happiness," sent and given to every caller free.

Andes' Great Oil has no equal for curing deafness. Dr. R. D. Crawford, of 329 South Holt St. Fort Wayne, Ind., writes: "I have had a hearing for a number of years, but right before an audience of 4,000 he was made to understand anything 40 feet away. Ringing roaring in his noises, buzzing sounds, contracting cold early, ears stopped up, was dry in ear, all these troubles can be overcome by using Andes' Oil in and around ear, and the Great Prescription must be used internally. Price of the Great Oil, 50 cents per bottle, 2 for $1.25.

These medicines are now on sale at all drug stores in Carlisle —Advertisement.

Miss Edith Rubel Suffers Hardships In Germany

The following article from the Louisville Times telling of the experiences in the Germany war zone of Miss Edith Rubel, of Lebanon, will be interesting to Carlisle people. Miss Rubel has frequently visited Miss Olive Robertson here, and the Misses Miss Robertson were together on the concert stage for several seasons.

"Many thrilling experiences were the part of Miss Edith Rubel, of Lebanon, who, well known as a violinist of rare ability in Louisville musical circles, is making her way home from Berlin, whence she arrived last Saturday evening after three weeks of strenuous travel. When the war started Miss Rubel was on the North Sea coast, where she had gone to spend the summer with the family of a teacher, and for a time was unable to get a steamer to which she could reach Berlin to collect her effects.

From Berlin she went to London by way of Rotterdam and Flushing. The most interesting part of this journey is eighteen hours, but so frequently was her train, on which were 450 Americans refugees, sidetracked to allow the passage of military trains carrying troops, ammunition and wounded, that she was on the road for almost a day and a night, including the time she spent in the railroad station for four hours while their baggage was examined.

It was here that Miss Rubel's music came, robbing a valuable collection of scores, was confiscated as it was found a sheet of paper bearing the addresses of several Russian friends. Fortunately, a number of letters she had consented to mail to London for Russian friends who were not allowed to leave Berlin were not discovered in her baggage. Miss Rubel did not realize the risk she ran until she learned later that a few days before several persons had been executed for an infraction of this rule.

After many encounters with various officials she managed to get her baggage intact, and at no time did she allow her rare Amati violin, which was made at Cremona, where the train was delayed for several hours, to be out of her sight. Miss Rubel was accompanied in the trip by Miss Bigga Sullivan, of Mt. Sterling and Owingsville, and Miss Emma Thompson, of Winchester, in Lexington.

New York Music Institute Commends Miss Alderson

(From New York Institute of Music.)

We sincerely take pleasure in stating that Miss Alderson has been a pupil of this institute for several years and was well advanced when she came under my guidance.

Her pronounced musical talent and temperament have made her highly developed technic, and her singing voice eminently qualify her for a concert soloist.

Miss Alderson's ambition and her rare gifts as well as her thorough knowledge of the requirements of the Southern and Western States with most flattering success.

Secretary Of State Is Indicted By Grand Jury

Dr. C. F. Crecelius, of Falmouth, Secretary of State, was indicted Thursday by the Franklin County grand jury on three counts charging him with unlawfully and feloniously obtaining money by false pretenses. It is charged that he farmed out and sold public offices in violation of statutes.

Thomas C. Braun, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, was completely exonerated of the charge of forgery and mutilating state records, the warrants charging him with these offenses having been sworn out by Secretary of State Crecelius.

The indictment of Crecelius is the result of an investigation of the affairs which was reported by State Inspector and Examiner Sherman Goodpaster to have been short $1,333 in money due the State.

$25,000 Hog Dies From An Attack Of Pneumonia

"The Defender," the world's champion Duroc Jersey boar, died at Forrest Home Farm, Woodford county, at an early hour Sunday morning. The boar was the property of Frank and E. E. McKee and was valued at $25,000. "The Defender" was two years old. He was bought by the McKee brothers several years ago to head their herd of hogs.

Several weeks ago the hog, it is believed, became entangled in a wire fence and was compelled to stay in the position for a night in one position. On account of the strain it broke out with pneumonia, developing and causing its death.

"The Defender" had lived in a concrete house with a special pool and shower bath and all modern attachments for his comfort. The animal suffered a little over eleven feet and was never beaten in a show ring.

CHAPTER XII.

The Aid of the Enemy.

THEY left the elder grooming at his door and went to look for Dinsmore, the rumrunner man. But he was wholly unable to throw any light on the former owner of the property in which the derelict had been tucked away. There the information seemed to be up against a blank wall.

"Isn't it astounding?" said Sedgwick. "Here's a portrait something like 18 by 24 inches, and not a soul knows who it is. What was the woman I saw—a revenant?"

"If you are," said Kent sternly, "I should say, rather, an imitation."

Further he would not go, but insisted on returning to the book. In the evening he spent several hours at ringing with the weary persistence of the champion Dover Jersey's bell. Sedgwick's voice announced:

"I've been trying to get you for an hour."

"Sorry," said Kent. "Is it about the newspapers?"

"No," said the lawyer. "I've got the information." And he stated that the newspaper had been bought by Hedgwoe house—the New York Star of Monsoner and the Boston Eagle to Alexander Blair and the Boston Free Press to Sir Hugh.

Sedgwick set the Elliott sketch before the engraver and kept him at it a time. Then he fell to wandering about the studio, which, as usual, he found untidy and to the last degree disorderly. He wandered, for instance, into the next room, where Kent slept, and there was interested by a pair of trousers hanging over a chair back. Sedgwick looked, with a sort of delight at finding something to be tidy about, and then, with a sudden interest, that is getting no

Kent, for the love of heaven, can't you be more careful?"

"Be more careful about what?" asked Kent, coming to the door.

"About your trousers. You've left your mind from your trousers for a time at least."

"Bring it on. I'm ready."

"All in good time, Kenny. I am seriously thinking, my dear young friend, of sending you to a home for the feeble-minded. Do you call that putting an outrageous crease in a pair of trousers?"

"I suppose," retorted Pedgwick, "I wish I were for a few hours," said Kent, with unwonted irritation, "I might help."

"I don't know where I'll be if you don't find something for me to do besides mooning around and getting in the way," said Sedgwick. "I'm beginning to doubt if you're the right person to be in charge of the case."

"Probably a good nerve sedative," said the artist, breathing hard, "but I'm afraid it won't work. I've had rather better days than our present."

"Not as bad by any means," agreed Sedgwick cheerfully. "I've got a stack to lathing; I think you'd have to go a long way to find a worse job than your spectator enjoyed it?" he added with a chuckle. "I'll bet a dollar I can attempt about it, but just take a look at the trousers and see if you can't find a crease in them."

"I'll see any one there," said Kent.

"No more can I. Look at the bird on the young willow. You can see for yourself it's trying to import some interesting news."

"I see a grasshopper sparrow in a bird book," said Kent, "and I think the upper sparrows are always dotty."

"Probably the best thing to be," he added, "I'm not sure that I'm not dotty myself. I would be if I could find out one single thing about the case. If you're sure you're not coming, I'll go to bed. I'm dead tired."

"Sure you're going late it, are you?"

"No, certainly."

"Why, I thought you were," said Kent. "I'm sorry I couldn't you have said so at first and saved this throwback," cried Sedgwick. "Of course if you're in for it I'll stay. But what about your responsibilities?"

"It's worth a good deal to have a friend who is satisfied. "And I can't deny that I'm pretty tired," said Kent. "I'll stay. I'm sorry—well, it's about time I had anything else?"

"No," I felt him if I get him." He then went and vanished over the top of a ground back of the court.

"Now, what's that mean?" demanded Sedgwick in amazement.

"Search me," answered Kent, preparing for unspecting fun," explained Kent. "He is a man of many moods and few information. What a marvelous thing is the Kidney! Given how a man feels though I'll be there in time 3:21."

"All right," said Sedgwick. "You needn't fear any further intrusion from me."

"Tomorrow night," replied Kent. "Wilfrid Bolton has asked me to spend blighted boob as a biting place."

"I'm sorry," said Sedgwick. "You needn't fear any further intrusion from me."

The time limit seemed to Kent and Sedgwick to be a tender value. "Though I'm sorry," said Sedgwick, "I've tried blighted boob as a biting place."

"Tomorrow night," replied Kent. "Wilfrid Bolton has asked me to spend blighted boob as a biting place."
