NEW WORKMEN'S BILL APPROVED

NEW MEASURE IS MORE LIBERAL TOWARD WAGE EARNER THAN THE OLD.

MUTUAL INSURANCE PLAN

Four Thousand Maximum for Death—Attorneys Making Final Draft of the Measure.

(Special Frankfort Correspondence.)

Frankfort.—Provisions of the workmen's compensation law to be submitted to the next legislature have been unanimously agreed upon by the voluntary commission of ten men representing labor and capital, and Robert T. Caldwell, of Frankfort, as assistant in the attorney general's office, who is also secretary of the commission, began the final draft of the measure.

The act will be elective for both employers and employe, the court of appeals having declared any other kind of law would be unconstitutional. It is largely compulsory upon employers, however, because if they do not elect to go under its provisions they will be deprived of the three common law defenses—that is, accepted risk, contributory negligence and the fellow-servant rule. The workman is required to make an act of favorable election, else otherwise when he sues for damages it can not be assumed that he has accepted the provisions of the measure.

The maximum penalty recoverable for death under the measure is $4,000, thirty-four per cent of average wage is collectable for six years for partial disability and eight years for total disability. The minimum amount which may be paid for partial disability is $5 a week and the maximum $12. The provisions governing the exact amount of damages to be paid in specified cases, and fixing the manner of arriving at the average wages, varied before accident, are numerous.

The local game warden in Kentucky is open and Executive Agent J. Q. Ward, besides ordering his district wardens to tour the state in search of violators to prevent illegal hunting, has sent to them cards for hunters to fill out, showing game they killed this year and last. In a letter to the wardens he directs them to request hunters to mail the attention of other hunters to the cards. He desires to get as close estimate as possible of the game killed this year and last. Next year cards will be left with the county clerks to give to the applicants for hunting licenses.

The secretary of state of Kentucky is the only office still in doubt as a result of the election held on November 2. With McCracken county out, J. P. Lewis, Republican, leads Nowlandet Hamlett, Democrat, for secretary of state, by 87 votes. Lewis claims victory and said to be very good, an error having been discovered in Christian county. In that county Hamlett was accredited 100 votes that were cast for him.

LORD KITCHENER HIT

CHURCHILL PUTS RESPONSIBILITY FOR ANTWERP EXPEDITION ON WAR SECRETARY.

FRENCH OFFICIALS BLAMED

Quoted Sea Lord Says Whole Cabinet Decided on Expedition—Londonderry Replies—Violent Attack on Kitchener by Sir Arthur Markham.

London, Nov. 16.—Winston Spencer Churchill, former first lord of the British admiralty, against whom more bitter criticism has been launched than any other man in the English government since the war began, made his speech of defense on Monday in the house of commons.

Mr. Churchill put full responsibility for the disastrous Antwerp expedition upon Lord Kitchener, the secretary of state for war, and the French government.

Denies Responsibility.

The former first lord of the admiralty also denied personal responsibility for the Dardanelles enterprise. "The proposition to send an expedition to the Dardanelles to open up the way to Constantinople was profoundly, naturally and laboriously considered," declared Mr. Churchill.

It had been charged against Mr. Churchill acted too quickly and too much upon his own initiative in sending the expeditions to Antwerp and the Dardanelles.

As to the Antwerp enterprise, Mr. Churchill said:

"The idea of sending a relieving army to save Antwerp from capture by the Germans originated with Lord Kitchener and the French government. The Belgian government acted too late to save the Belgian city was not my fault.

Mr. Churchill declared that he always considered the fate of Antwerp the admiralty before making any official move.

"Not Victory With Kitchener."

Following Churchill's sensational speech Sir Arthur Markham made the most violent attack on Earl Kitchener in the house.

Markham told members of the commons he was convinced Kitchener was responsible for both the Antwerp and the Dardanelles "disasters," and that he also was guilty of withholding information. "I am convinced," added Sir Arthur, "that while Kitchener, who accepts no advice, remains at the war office we will not win this war."

"I think I ought not to leave the house without referring to certain incidents at the admiralty in the direction of the war which occurred during my period at the admiralty, said Mr. Churchill.

He declared that the Dardanelles enterprise was framed not by a hysterical technical minds. The attack was decided on by a war council held on January 28, at which Lord Fisher was present.

"It was a legitimate war gamble for a prize of inestimable value, which had a reasonable chance of winning on that basis."

Mr. Churchill declared there was no reason to be discouraged with the progress of the war.

"We are passing through a bad time," he said, "but it will probably be worse before it is better."

Chicago Physician Declared That Infant Was Deformed and Braves Criticism for His Act.

Chicago, Nov. 18.—The little one month-old baby of the German-American hospital here, just after being christened.

The water of baptism shrieked through the exact tissue hair of the child while science, withholding the easy gift of life, stood by, waiting. While the mother wept over the bed, accustomed to the death penalty; while the father cursed; while cancers in and the living, waited for the end.

"John J. Sapitza then in the name of the Father, of the Son and of the Holy Ghost".

As the words were spoken by a new leader god arose. Miss Catherine J. V. Wald of the Catholic Church of St. Ann de Brighton, the baby quietened out of the cradle-race. Pains of death was in the even. Miss Walsh stepped back a little pace.

"God grant that this child's life shall not have been lived in vain."

Even as the prayer was spoken it was being answered. Science by a deliberate, unmoment millions of men and women all over the world reading the story of little John Follinger, were search- ing their souls, examining, weighing a mighty problem, preparing to render an verse odder than civilization.

Dr. Harry Haiselden. When a child is born defective, when its infant body is deformed that is has little prospect in an existence of helpless- ness in an existence of helpless- ness in an institution for the mentally weak—then shall that child die by the hand of society and science and civilization.

The verdict was death in the case of Joan Follinger.

Doctor Haiselden willed of the death of the child. It was he who consented to the baptism that gave life to the baby, refused to do so. By a simple operation he declared, the life would have been saved.

But it would be wrong to save this baby, he said. And science, through he braved the frantic denunciations of those who thought otherwise.

"I may be accused of murder," he said, "and I am willing to defend my conscience."

The principal physical deformities of the infant are the closure of the intestinal tract, the paralysis of the nerves on the right side of the face, the absence of the right ear, deafness on one ear, the malformation of the shoulders. There is no evidence of neck to the baby and its shoulders touch its ears. The brain itself is only slightly achieved, but the cranial nerves are absent, or undeveloped. The head is well formed except for the lower part : the back. The child is abnormally large in places, its thighs being overdeveloped.

DYNAMITE PLOT IN CANADA

The exploits of the provincial bull in the china shop have been emulated if not surpassed, by the raid of a sheep on the Rigby (Eng.) branch of Lloyd's bank. The sheep dashed in to the rear of the bank premises with two drovers in hot pursuit, gaining entrance to the kitchens. It made a terrific clatter among the pots and pans, and then leaped through a window and turned on a water tap. The drovers were captured in the struggle which ensued, and the sheep bolted through another door and got into the main office. As doors and bank were sided by ruler., induced the animal to return to the kitchen, where it was eventually cornered, trussed up, and unceremoniously carried away, after having kept the bank staff busy for nearly two hours.
