PREVENT RABBITS FROM INJURING TREES

April 10, 1917.
 Rabbits are a major pest in many parts of the country, and they can cause serious damage to trees and other vegetation. To prevent rabbits from injuring trees, it is important to take certain precautions. One of the most effective ways to prevent rabbits from eating trees is to use wire mesh fencing. This fencing should be made of wire that is at least 1/2 inch in diameter and should be at least 3 feet high. The fencing should be placed around the base of the tree, and it should be buried in the ground at least 6 inches deep. This will prevent rabbits from getting under the fence and eating the bark of the tree. Another way to prevent rabbits from eating trees is to use repellents. There are several types of repellents that can be used to deter rabbits from eating trees. These repellents work by making the taste of the tree bark unappealing to the rabbits. Repellents should be applied to the bark of the tree at regular intervals, and they should be reapplied after it rains.

The researchers recommend that people who are prone to kidney and back problems should limit their intake of meat. They also recommend that people should eat a diet that is rich in fruits, vegetables, and whole grains. This diet is lower in purines and cholesterol, and it is also higher in fiber, which can help to reduce the risk of kidney and back problems.
