The Facts In The Case

The coloring of political dishonesty which is fixed in many political debates has been particularly in evidence in Mr. Roosevelt's discussions of the foreign policies of the administration. Mr. Roosevelt seems to be so utterly carried away by his enmity toward the Democracy and its leader that he has permitted it himself, time and again to be misled into a disregard of facts in launching his attacks. It is possible that the high point of unserious political misrepresentation in this campaign was reached by Mr. Roosevelt in his article in the Metropolitan Magazine this month, when he said:

"As the administration has debated the sinking of the Lusitania for over a year without achieving any result or coming to any conclusion."

It is a saddening exhibition of the facility with which an ex-President disregards the responsibilities of his utterances in order to produce personal amusement and political satisfaction, saddening because the facts are so plainly written where every man may read. The facts are, as the hearts of American mothers rejoice to know personally, that on May 30 last the German Government announced its acceptance of the demands of the United States that its unlawful submarine operations be discontinued and that in the intervening months there has been no instance of the torpedoing of a merchant vessel bearing American passengers.

Both "recall" and "conclusion" are represented in that statement, "recall" in the express demand of the United States, has served upon a permanent abatement of her submarine outrages. The Imperial Government has lived up to its promise. The days that pass without extra editions of the newspapers telling of merchant ships being sent to the bottom with their human cargo are unmarred by a threat of war being necessary in order to maintain the right of Americans to unmolested travel on the high seas. They are days of peace with a continuing certainty that peace is not to be disturbed by a reopening of the submarine controversy.

Col. Roosevelt has harped so long upon his disapproval of the President's failure to go to war when the Lusitania was sunk, that he is now incapable of measuring his utterances on the President's policy evolved to meet the Lusitania crisis. Can he not realize that all the end this policy of the President's succeeded, that finally in the May note from Germany the President's wish to preserve the peace and honor of the nation without imparting either was given an assurance of success. Americans are free to come and go upon the high seas, safeguarded by the protection which their Govern ment has thrown around them. Each day of peace in which they retain this freedom is a vital and living answer to the assertion of the Colonel that the policy by which it was established has had no result nor conclusion.

WINCHESTER SUN AND MANY DEMOCRATS.

The trouble in this country is not with the "peace-at-any-price" advocates, but with those who apparently are for war at any cost.

The people of the United States do not wish a war of conquest in Mexico. If Wilson is President their wishes will be respected.

Wilson has opened the way for the business man to prosper. He is prospering. Under Wilson he will continue to prosper.

The New Freedom will not be long continued if we are to turn the country over to such trustees as Penrose and Smoot.

Will the millions of Americans who want peace turn out of office the man who has kept the country out of war?

The great unanswered question of the campaign is: What would you have done, Mr. Hughes?

Outside of considerations of mere partisanship, what is the reason for Hughes?

Prosperity Notes

At least there is one item in which Democratic prosperity shows a falling off. Bradstreet's reports a decline of 80 per cent in commercial failure liabilities.

For six months of 1916 Bradstreet's finds that bank clearings have averaged approximately $50,000,000,000 per month. Call for tall Mr. Fairbanks prove that this is less than the 1912 Republican record of $14,000,000,000 for 6mUth!

Against a four year gain of more than $2,000,000,000, or 20 per cent, in the country's bank clearings, Republican leaders and writers have been able to point to only the pools and ramps, two banks and a trust company in the whole country can not prosper under Democratic administration.

Bradstreet's building record shows that in the second quarter of 1916 the country invested in new lumber and the latest process in the United States, which is only per cent above last year. Republican leaders will have a hard time to explain away that prosperity upon war.

There is only one business record Republican days which Democratic prosperity has not equaled, and that is the $175,000,000 of failure liabilities brought about by Wall Street and Republican administration in 1907-'08—which still stands as the world's panic record.

This first six months of 1916 show new industrial and floating corporations of $1,800,000,000. This is 70 per cent of the record of 12 months record under the Republican administration. More-over, like the chief Republican campaign slogan, that Democracy fears the approach of peace.

Tomatoes On Potato Vines

Raising tomatoes on potato vines is something entirely new in the way of gardening in this section of country, but this is what L. Conner, of Crutchfield, is doing this year. The potato vine with tomatoes and potatoes on it was brought to the office for inspection and is an actual fact. The vine with the potatoes and tomatoes clinging to it was pulled up and placed on exhibition for Government inspection. If Mr. Conner will tell the Governor how he can meet just exactly how to raise this crop it will be a great help to him. A top crop with a bottom crop on the same vegetable is going some.—Fulton Leader.

SCENIC BEAUTIES OF UNITED STATES BEST ON EARTH

Department of Interior Finds Our Nation Parkland of World

That the Americans who have been spending $150,000,000 a year in Switzerland tours have been paying a heavy penalty for their error in not knowing, and have been going to the wrong country, is the effect of, it is the discovery made by the United States Department of Interior in its inventory of the scenic assets of this country. In exposing the self victimization of our citizens in no uncertain terms, and is preaching the set aside of home resumption of American scenery.

"Our nation is richer in natural scenery of the first order than any other nation," declares Stephen Mather, assistant secretary to the Secretary of the Interior. "It possesses an empire of grandeur and beauty it has scarcely found."

The discovery of this grandeur and beauty by the motorists of this country is the sermon set forth by National Touring Week, the automobile movement that has aroused our nation from the Atlantic ocean to the Pacific strand. The inquiry for a general outpouring of United States motorists to visit the natural beauty about them which follows and the inception of the movement is well illustrated that the country is ready for a widespread appreciation of the scenic wonder of our homeland.

When the sun rises on August 6, the date set for the official outpouring week of the motorists of this country, the greatest motoring tour this land has ever seen, will start. Many thousands of automobilists will be hitting the highway on a vacation tour.

"See America first by seeing your own state first," is the sentiment nearest to the heart of this movement. Each state has its natural beauty, of which its citizens have a right to be proud. The treasurers of National Tour-Week-end are also in that they not only do not need to go across the ocean to enjoy scenic grandeur, but that they can get all they want within reach of your garage.

Mrs. Bell's Cottage at Baddeck, Nova Scotia, is the date of the real estate deal.

Land Bank Will Sell Farm Bonds

The rural credit needs of the south are great. Farmers have to pay more for money here than in any other part of the country, whether the loans are for a short time or long time. Interest on home farm mortgages.

The extent to which rates may be reduced and money made easier among farmers for the better-ment of their farms and homes will depend largely upon the extent to which the new federal farm bank system is applied in the Southern States.

In each district there will be a federal land bank with $750,000 paid up cash capital. These banks also have the privilege of securing notes from farmers, secured by mortgages on farm lands, and of issuing bonds against the notes. The land bank will farm loans at 6 per cent, discount the notes and first mortgages for the farmers it has made to get still more money to lend on long time and at reasonable rates.

Experience has shown that the credit of one of the largest interest on mortgages on farms is nearly always paid; that they always are amply secured; and the principal is usually paid when due.

Not only is the security good, but it is constantly increasing in value. Whereas in 1890 the average mortgage was for only over 40 per cent or more of their value. By 1910 the average amount of each mortgage has been decreased to 33 per cent and had so increased that the mortgage was only about 25 per cent of the average value. In other words, the average southern farm is worth three times the mortgage on it.

To advertise those facts will be one function of the new system. Its bonds secured by first mortgages on good southern farms, should gradually become a popular investment for small sums or large. They are tax free, and should become the people's savings bank. They are safe, and should be quickly salable when need, and yield an assured income.

Vacancy Well Filled

On Friday last Judge C. W. Lilly appointed Duke Judge R. J. Rabbitt as County Attorney to fill the vacancy left by the death of Alvin S. Kendall. This is a fine appointment, we think, as Judge Rabbitt is well qualified for the place and a man of honor and integrity. His appointment and his resignation as Police Judge and this place will be filled by appointment from Gov. Stanley.—Flemingsburg Times-Democrat.

An Unromantic Lover

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Henry Strong was a farmer's boy born, strong and raised and used to work from sun to sun without a complaint. If any one had asked the farmer about his hired man he would have said that Henry was all right. So it would have been with every one who knew him, even with Jerusha, except Nettie White, the daughter of another farmer a mile away. Her complaint would have been that he hadn't a spark of romance in his nature.

After courting Nettie for six months the time came when he felt called to himself that she would make a good wife for him. Nettie White was not entirely satisfied with his courtship, but she got to like Henry Strong for his steady and steady.

Henry's wife often had been asked at a little country entertainment. Once in awhile he would pick up the weekly paper and read for an hour, but he had never read a book of any kind. On the contrary, Nettie was quite well educated and had read every book she could get her hands on. She had been all of elsewhere, kiddies and heroes and love and that kind of stuff, and that Henry would come rolling with a load of wood and she would be all interested. What was the old farm to her? She wanted the city, and in time was a well worn fact in her mind that she would go there. On summer nights, when they sat on the front steps and looked at the moon and the stars, and the whip-poor-will sang in the woods, Nettie would sigh and Henry would ask her if she wasn't feeling well. But what Henry said was:

"I wonder if it's time for the moon to be mostly composed of limburger."

At last Henry proposed marriage. Nettie for one or consider it seriously. At last she found her self in his arms and he was kissing her. Then she went home and told her mother that she was going to be married soon as Henry got a little more ahead.

On Sunday Lemuel Forbes, what a farmer's boy, called on Nettie and Henry was not there. Lemuel had been married some years and he wanted her to know what he thought of Henry. Nettie was quite well educated and had read every book she could get her hands on. She had been all of elsewhere, kiddies and heroes and love and that kind of stuff, and that Henry would come rolling with a load of wood and she would be all interested. What was the old farm to her?
