

Under Fire

By Richard Parker
Roi Cooper's 'Fiebre' 'WAS CALLED' 'IT RAN AS A SHOT' 'AT PAUL ADVERTISER'

THE CARLISLE MERCURY

On the night of the 21st, 1938, the Carlisle Mercury was the scene of a most unusual episode. It was the only time in the history of the paper that it was the target of a direct attack by a prominent citizen of the town. The attack was made by Roi Cooper Sargent, who is well known to the readers of the paper as the author of the 'Fiebre' column.

The incident was the result of a dispute between Mr. Sargent and the management of the paper. Mr. Sargent, who is a well-known writer and journalist, had been writing a series of articles for the paper which were highly critical of the local government and its officials. The management of the paper, feeling that these articles were defamatory and damaging to the town's reputation, decided to discontinue them.

Mr. Sargent, however, refused to accept this decision and continued to write and submit his articles. This led to a series of angry exchanges between him and the management, which eventually culminated in the attack on the newspaper.

The incident was reported in the following day's issue of the paper, and it has since become a local story. It is interesting to note that Mr. Sargent, who is a well-known figure in the literary world, was so angry at the management's decision that he resorted to such a course of action.

WIFE TOO ILL TO WORK

IN BED MOST OF TIME Her Health Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

My health was so poor and my condition so bad that I was unable to work. My wife was also too ill to work. We were both suffering from a severe case of weakness and were unable to do anything but sit in bed. My doctor said that I had a nervous system disorder and that I would have to be in bed for a long time. My wife's doctor said that she had a similar condition and that she would also have to be in bed for a long time.

I had heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. I bought a bottle and took it according to the directions. After only a few days, I began to feel better. My strength was slowly returning and I was able to get up and walk around the house. My wife also began to feel better and was able to get up and walk around the house. We were both very pleased with the results and decided to buy another bottle to make sure we were completely cured.

I can now go to work and my wife can go to work. We are both very happy and grateful for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Turning Garbage into Fuel

How cities and towns can convert this troublesome waste product into practical profit: An enterprise which promises to yield 75 cents per ton

Garbage is a waste product which has long been regarded as a nuisance. It is a source of pollution and a health hazard. However, there is a new way of dealing with garbage which is both profitable and sanitary. This is the process of converting garbage into fuel.

The process is simple and easy to carry out. It involves the use of a special furnace which is designed to burn garbage. The garbage is fed into the furnace and is burned. The heat from the burning is used to produce steam, which is then used to drive a generator. The generator produces electricity, which can be used for a variety of purposes.

The process is highly profitable. It costs very little to operate and it produces a large amount of electricity. In fact, it can be made to produce 75 cents per ton of garbage. This is a very attractive proposition for cities and towns which produce large amounts of garbage.

The process is also very sanitary. It eliminates the problem of disposing of garbage. The garbage is burned and the only waste product is ash, which can be used for a variety of purposes. This is a much better solution than the old way of dumping garbage in a dump.

Cities and towns which are looking for a way to deal with their garbage should consider this new method. It is a profitable and sanitary way to deal with a major problem.

A Way Out

By Victor Radcliffe

The idea of a new way out of the current economic depression has been suggested by a group of business leaders. They believe that the solution lies in a combination of government and private enterprise.

The group believes that the government should take a more active role in the economy. They believe that the government should provide a variety of services which are currently provided by private enterprise. This would include the construction of public works, the operation of a national bank, and the operation of a national insurance system.

The group also believes that private enterprise should be encouraged to expand its operations. They believe that the government should provide a variety of incentives to encourage private enterprise to expand its operations. This would include tax breaks and other financial incentives.

The group believes that this combination of government and private enterprise is the only way to get the economy out of its current depression. They believe that this is a way out of the current economic depression.
