New York.—Woodrow Wilson has been re-elected President of the United States.

He carried California, California settled the thrilling race that kept all America enthralled for nearly 60 hours. If the final returns to be received from the Golden State do not alter the total enough to change the result.

President Wilson, 272.

Charles E. Hughes, 251.

Hanging by a thread for more than two days, the contest narrowed down to the 13 votes in the Pacific Coast state. Friday the Republicans conceded that California had gone Democratic. It will be by a close margin, probably not more than 3,000 and not more than 5,000 which has held the nation almost breathless, 3,000 votes is almost mountainous.

Were in Doubtful Column.

As the fight closed in its last period, the states of California, Minnesota, New Mexico and New Hampshire were in doubt, with the President having a slight edge in all except Minnesota. Last one, with the exception of New Mexico, normally a solidly Republican state.

DEMOCRATS RETAIN MAJORITY; SENDS FLASH TO WILSON

New York.—With both Democratic and Republican managers asserting that their parties will control the next National House of Representatives the latest returns from close districts give the Democrats a shade the better of the argument. Reports reaching here made little change in the figures. The Republicans have made another gain in Indiana through the election of Miller Kenna, Republican, who ran against Representative George W. Rauch, Democrat, in the 11th district, apparently is safely held by Wilson.

California, the home of the New radical of all the Progressives, showed a strong leaning to the President from the start. The women and the Progressives are flocked to the Democratic standard.

Yesterday it showed a partiality in the counting for the Republicans. But the tide turned. They began it with a steadiness, which to the Republicans was heartening, for a battle lost.

The counting sections in the South carry shreds of hope to the Hughes managers, but they are slight. The hope had all but disappeared, when the last of the counting districts reported possible show a majority for the President.

Republican votes in Imperial county, California in a despairing bid for their candidate failed largely when counted. They were confident that the state of Arizona, which had been hovering over them for days, would swing over to Hughes on them.
