Think Before You Speak.

It has come to our knowledge that considerable wild talk is being indulged in—we hope thoughtlessly—by some few of our citizens concerning the selective draft law, in which they do not hesitate to score President Wilson and this country in general because of the drafting of young men to carry our flag to European battlefields.

We prefer to believe such talk is born of ignorance, for surely no thinking man can doubt for a moment that this war is a battle for those ideals for which this country has always stood and without which the liberty we enjoy would be but a hollow mockery.

We have enjoyed the benefits of a free country so long that we are prone to forget that in order to preserve our liberties, we must make some sacrifices.

Less than anyone would THE MERCURY overlook the bitterness of broken family ties incident to the drafting of our young men. No one realizes more keenly than the writer what it will mean to him, personally, should the call come. Yet no one feels more surely that we entered this war in defense of that liberty and for the salvation of those ideals for which our forefathers fought and died.

When a man of the integrity and standing of our Ambassador Gerard tells of the plan of Von Tergitz, the German Admiral, by which he hoped to bring England to her knees through the unrestricted use of the submarine, then with the combined fleets of England and Germany sail for this country and collect an indemnity to pay for the entire war, how can a man wonder, "what we are sending our boys to Europe for"?

Aside from branding one as unthinking, treasonable utterances, despite the almost limitless freedom of speech allowed in this country, are rather dangerous these days. Mental assent is often best shown by keeping quiet.

As stated above, fifty of the men who plead exemptions Monday and Tuesday are not to be passed on by the board and no exemptions are denied them, they will, according to the draft law be required to go before some of the men who did not claim exemptions on the above dates, on account of the fact that the numbers of some of those men who plead exemptions came first.
