TO ERADICATE HATCHERY.

The Benoni Macklin State Fish Hatchery, at the Forks of Elkhorn, four miles from Frankfort, is about to be formally delivered and presented to the state. The visitors to the extensive plant of the Kentucky Game and Fish Commission will be rewarded, not only with entertainment and instruction, but a view of one of the greatest parks and the most remarkable and interesting fish hatchery in the country. Here they will learn the nature of big and small-mouth bass and the familiar guide are also have the species are propagated. Governor A. O. Stanley and Edwin P. Morrow will be the principal speakers. Governor Stanley will accept the hatchery in behalf of the state, and Mr. Morrow, an ardent fisherman, will speak on "Fishing and the Conservation of Fish."

J. C. Sachs, of Louisville, chairman of the Kentucky Game and Fish Commission, will preside while J. Quincy Ward, secretary and agent of the commission, will introduce the speakers. Ward is also and built the plant, will represent the commission as host at the noon day luncheon.

The Elkhorn is declared by experts to be the best bass stream in the United States. It is rocky and limestone, so its native fish are game and strong, and it is the natural home of dayhnia, the minute crustaceans, as well as the bug-like larvae of the bass, bass are its mother's milk to an infant child. Here the fingerlings of game fish and the other dainties which give the bass their fighting edge and bass.

The Benoni Macklin hatchery employs a force of 15 men. The Benoni Macklin millrace and its waters flow through the hatchery. The millrace is the main Elkhorn, furnishing the water supply for the hatchery. It is a beautiful and scenic stream.

The hatchery is named after the old Macklin dam, first built by an early Macklin, in 1816, and rebuilt in 1845. The old dam still stands, and the state will construct a monument to its memory.

May Test 1916 Act.

The constitutionality of the act of 1916 which requires corporations organized before the adoption of the present Constitution, to pay to the commonwealth 1 per cent of one-tenth of 1 per cent on their original capital stock, as shown by amended articles of incorporation, may be tested in the case of the Ohio River Valley Railway Company, which paid a tax of $1,000 under the act, but which later under protest and reserved all rights to test the validity of the act.

Secretary of State Hager increased its capital stock $4,000,000 and tendered the company a charter, which it refused with its amendments to the articles of incorporation. Suit was filed in the circuit court by Lewis declined to file the amendments, and the Ohio River Valley Railway company paid the tax on its original capital. The Ohio River Valley Railway company never had been required to pay the tax, and the case involves the validity of the adoption of the present Constitution and the validity of the act which converted a check for the amount with a request for a receipt.

Under the old law three companies have been required to pay the tax, and two when they filed amended articles, but the case of the one dropped for this revenue.

Circuit Court is Reversed.

The court of appeals has reversed the circuit court and ordered the case dismissed. The case was brought by Mrs. Mary Belknap, secured a reversal of the 2d circuit court in which she sued to recover out the suit on demurrer. The court sustained the demurrer, and Mrs. Sampson held that the revenue agent's report to the state auditor did not prove the value of the estate.

The estate of Mrs. Belknap's estate had been appraised at $111,442; constituting stock in the Belknap Hardware company, of Whitley county. The executors of the estate refused to pay the tax, the circuit court and alleged that the report of the revenue agent proved the value. The court of appeals held that the report was not competent evidence of the agent's opinion as to the appraised value of the estate.

Increased Tax Income Shown.

The state auditor's office books for not yet reported the state tax of 15 cents on the $100 for 1917, but the receipts of $115,127.48 more than the tax of 15 cents on the $100 for 1917, but the receipts of $115,127.48 more than the tax of 15 cents on the $100 for 1916 collected by Chairman W. M. Logan, of the State Tax Commission, and the tax of 15 cents on the State collected $1,942,148 on deposits with the state treasurer, and with the receipt not to report, the State will collect $2,057,275.48. The state banks will not probably will bring the total collections to $2,100,000. The state banks collected $141,226,553.22, of which $1,586,342.22 are expected.

REVIEWING WORLD FOOD SITUATION

WHEAT AND HOGS ARE GREAT NEEDS OF ALLIES, ACCORDING TO HOOVER.

Fight Can Be Won From "This Side of Ocean if America and Canada Stimulate Production," Food Is Vital, He Adds, For Body Needs Fat.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Washington.—In a statement reviewing the world food situation, Food Administrator Hoover declared that the fight against the submarine would be won if the United States and Canada could stimulate production and effect economies so as to feed the Allies and this continent without sending a ship further afield than the eastern and Canadian seaboard. Ships, wheat and cattle ashore and the fight will represent the commission as host at the noon day luncheon.

USE FOR OLD PACKING BOX

One Woman Found That It Made an Altogether Satisfactory Desk for Her Typewriter.

The important thing about it is the fact that if she had not had to sell her comfortable outdoorage typewriter desk she never would have discovered what a satisfactory sort of typewriter desk a packing box may be. The box, of course, must be, of course, of convenient size and of some stability. Then, with the open side toward you, the typewriter on top and your knees under the box, you have comfortable fixed. It is plain to be seen, of course, that when you are done writing you remove your knees from within the box and the typewriter is in their place. It is the same idea as a typewriter desk with a top that closes in shut when not in use. The thing is in itself a wonderful discovery, and, the most remarkable discoveries, it runs in the nick of time. A truck is the sort of place for a typewriter at all, and a chair is not any better. There are always possibilities in a dining-room table, but one can never find that a dining-room table is all one's own, and then where would you be putting the typewriter at meal times—all covered? Of course that there was a dining-room table and not just a kitchen table, however, restricted as fate or a dairy-lunch chair?

The best part of the discovery thing about the discovery was, as has been said, the fact that it was the necessity of selling the mahogany desk that made the discovery necessary. The sale made it possible. It is only by necessities that we can discover the best things that we can discover the best by which we are to answer the world's needs.

"The production of fats is today a matter of supreme importance because of these people (the allies) and the submarine campaign has made it so," says Mr. Hoover. "Every pound of fat is as sure of a market as wheat. There is no chance of greater value to the winning of the war than to increase the fats. I ask the Administrator said the allies demand 1,000,000 tons of fats, 2,000,000 bushels, with imports of 277,000,000 pounds annually for domestic consumption. He estimated the agricultural production of Canada, Australia, Indian and Argentine export surplus at 1,000,000 tons. Mr. Hoover declared that lack of shipping made it necessary to "conserve the wheat and fats to have the burden of meeting the allies' needs.

PREVENT POTATO WASTAGE, IS PLEA

Growers Urged to Reduce Loss Resulting From Use of Bad Storage Methods.

EXPERT MAKES SUGGESTIONS

Address Delivered at Horticultural Division Tells How Many Causes of Damage Can Be Eliminated.

Washington.—In order that the enormous waste in the potato crop which was raised during the year may be prevented, the United States administration is appealing to small growers throughout the country to take every precaution to prevent damage to the surplus crop during the coming winter through improper storage methods. In a statement just issued Leo D. Sweet, head of the potato division of the food administration, calls attention to the chief causes of wastage and outlines the best storage methods. The statement follows:

"Reports received indicate that the potatoes raised this year should be kept with every precaution to taken during the coming winter if waste is considerable; under bad conditions 50 per cent may be destroyed.

"In order that the best methods may be adopted by the small growers, those who have the best experience in the storage of potatoes, should bend their efforts to the reduction of the present waste.

"Sweating and heating occur if the freshly dug potatoes are put in bins or piles too large piles, so that the air cannot circulate freely through them to remove the heat in the interstices of the tubers. The heat is then given off, and the moisture condenses on the cool walls of the storage house and drops back on the potatoes, causing them to decay.

"Freezing, due to potatoes getting wet at the time of putting them in storage.

"3. Injury from frost.

"4. Shrinkage and disease in the tubers at the time of storage.

"5. Sprouting in the spring.

Losses May Be Reduced.

"It is not possible to prevent altogether losses from these causes, but they can be largely reduced by the best methods of storage, which are simple and can be used economically.

"This may be done by taking care to guard against losses from each of the causes.

"Sweating and heating occur if the freshly dug potatoes are put in bins or piles too large piles, so that the air cannot circulate freely through them to remove the heat in the interstices of the tubers. The heat is then given off, and the moisture condenses on the cool walls of the storage house and drops back on the potatoes, causing them to decay.

"Freezing occurs when the potatoes are stored at too low a temperature. Potatoes are easily damaged by freezing, and a few degrees of frost below zero will cause considerable damage.

"Injury from frost is caused in the tubers at the time of storage.

"Shrinkage and disease in the tubers at the time of storage.

"Sprouting occurs when the potatoes are stored at too high a temperature. Potatoes are easily damaged by sprouting, and a few degrees of heat above zero will cause considerable damage.

"There are several diseases of the potato which cause rotting in storage. The diseased tubers are mixed with the sound ones in the storage house and bin; therefore, it is necessary to sort out the diseased tubers before storing. Most of the disease, the cuts, culls and dirt should be removed before potatoes are stored for the winter. All of the diseased tubers should be removed. It is also important that the potatoes should be fed to the poultry and the pigs, but should be destroyed. Potatoes should be fed to the poultry and the pigs, but should be destroyed. Potatoes can be held at from 34 to 40 degrees Fahrenheit, but they will keep better if the temperature can be held at from 36 to 40 degrees. The storage house should be well ventilated during the winter, so that the potatoes may be kept dry. Ventilation is important in preventing the quality of pits potatoes, in preventing the development of fungous diseases.
