COLONEL KIMBALL'S SELF-SACRIFICING SPIRIT

(Lexington Leader)

Reading Colonel William Preston Kimball's letter to the Democratic voters of Kentucky, advising them to vote en masse for the renomination of Governor Stanley, one feels that he would suppress the overwhelming emotions of his soul, which flood the pickers of even the innermost recesses of his being and spread all over the countenance of him.

Thus inspired, the mind's eye easily pictures the grief under which Colonel Preston labored when he appeared at the door of the Secretary of State with the bundle of petitions, the four-stained nominating papers—the only Democrat in all the lots of time who ever ran for an office he didn't want—a Democrat who was willing to be Governor if he could get it, but who, in his own mind, if need be, to the end that wicked and designing men might not rape the fair form of "the people" in Kentucky.

The spirit of Colonel Kimball's card is in the following paragraph:

"My only purpose in filing my petitions for governor was to see if I could, that not only the Democrats but the spirit of the Seventeenth amendment to the federal constitution, requiring Senators to be elected by the people, could be executed. I want to see the Democratic nominee for Senator receive his commission direct from the people, and not by automatic succession by the action of a committee facetiously referred to in the statute as the 'governing authority' of the party."

Colonel Kimball wants to see Governor Stanley receive the Democratic nominee for Senator—regardless of commission "direct from the people"—if Mister Stanley is willing to accept.

Which is the spirit that has made the nation what it is.

It carries in a flood of 100 good Democratic votes for Stanley, and is believed by the ancients to be the second of a sort of subliminal fire, where nothing impure or unclean could get even a toe-hold.

We have it well-fully right—don't you know it.

HALF THE PEOPLE IN AMERICA TO FOLLOW WAR WORK IN YEAR

Washington—Half the American nation will be actively engaged at the war in another year, if the administration sends two million soldiers to France.

Only about half the actual army can be sent abroad.

With 2,000,000 men in Europe, a similar number will be needed in the factories and the military organization.

Ten workers are needed to keep each soldier armed, fed and clothed. This would mean 10,000,000 men and women would be working to support the army of 1,000,000.

On the basis of 110,000,000 people now, that's half the nation.

And the other half will be indirectly engaged in war work.

These figures give America a fair conception of the oft repeated phrase: "There is a war on!"

AMERICANS HOLDING TM.

Retired Americans are helping the French and Italians stop the first attempt of the Austrians to break through the line which started this week. Austria hopes to break through the line of the 3rd Army of the Kaiser's leaders, after a preliminary bombardment, with such a force that they can march to Paris in a few days. Should they succeed in this the Germans would then be free to turn their forces against the New York Army and the British. Should the Austrians succeed in breaking through the line, military experts say it probable that with an army of victorious Austrians and Germans in the field, what is still our western front would be untenable, and we know that we should be in the fight for a short, somewhat bitter time, and all to be conquered.

SPEEDER ARRESTED

(Goodnow News)

If Scott Moore's fellow-citizens had only heard what an auto officer says on the witness stand in Judge Gaines' court, Mr. Moore would have been hauled to jail pronto through the streets of Pipes.

Scott was taking a big chance when at a lively clip Sunday afternoon he was driving his car through the town and his number and speed were duly noted. He was released under $100 bond to appear before Judge Ernest Martin in Pipes Court.

LAST MINUTE NEWS

ALLIES WINNING.

GERMAN LOSSES 100,000.

A telephone message from the Lexington Leader at 3:45 o'clock stated that the situation in the great battle raging on the Marne was still satisfactory.

Latest dispatches indicate that the Allied forces are still winning and that the German losses are estimated at 100,000. The Leader stated that there was no truth in the report that 15,000 American soldiers had been captured.

Today's casualty list contained 38 American names. The names of 8 Kentucky boys were in the list.

The French losses are reported to be small and no guns have been lost by the Allied forces.
