"Fred Buttered Jacket a Novelty. Save in the jacket that buttons straight down the front. Sometimes it is called the coat jacket, and sometimes the front button is omitted, the buttoning from under a waistline seems to break the single small line suggestive of the Eton, but most of the short jackets are shielded away at either side of the center front the new valuable fabric) and the space is filled in by a waistcoat of contrasting material. These waistcoats make the short, open jacket extremely useful and they offer a variety to a single suit; one waistcoat, for example, may be rich cloth, another of white piqué, another of linen, and so on through the entire list. Of this type is a delightful little model of dark blue tricot serge.

Outbreak in Ireland Was Planned by Bernstorff

British Press Bureau Bares Details of Series of Conspiracies.

GOT AID FROM AMERICANS

Germany's Purpose Was to Obtain Submarine Bases on Ireland's Coast.—Documents Disclose Connection Between Sinn Fein and Germany.

London.—Germany's "plotting efforts to foment revolution in Ireland with the aid of the Sinn Fein party" are laid bare in a statement from the official press bureau, revelations from the Irish political situation which the British government has been studying.

Following the outbreak of Easter week 1916, plans were made for a revolt in 1917, but this miscarried because of America's entry into the war and Germany's inability to send forces to help the Irish.

An uprising in Ireland was planned for this year, the statement says, to synchronize with a German drive that was successful and when Great Britain presumably would be weakened.

Concerning the recent arrests in Ireland, the statement says, the British government considers the documents found for obvious reasons cannot be disclosed at this time. It is added, however, that the seizure was made in London. The documents are understood to be in English.

One phase of every plan was the establishment of submarine bases in Ireland, the statement says, and the success of communication between the movement and the Germans, as disclosed by documents in possession of the British government, falls into two periods—that during the year 1915 and that since the abortive Irish rebellion of 1916.

The events of the first period, the statement says, are set forth in detail, but the second period, which contains the most important documents, is dismissed with a few words, as the result of the expedition with sufficient success to render it unnecessary.

Bernard Shaw Quoted.

"On this occasion the German government appears to be possessed of the fullest information as to the state of public opinion in Ireland," the statement says.

"In the beginning of 1914 the German consul at Cork reported that the Irish priest should be sent to Germany for the education of a message from Sir Roger Casement (later captured in the submarine) and a message from George Bernard Shaw, who was then in Germany, to Ireland with word that everything in Germany was moving and which it would not be to the public interest to reveal at present.

American Carried Messages.

"The story begins as early in the year as November 1, 1913, when Capt. Zimmermann transmitted through Washington Casement's message from Sir Roger Casement (later captured in the submarine) and a message from Shaw, a passenger, to Germany, advising it that everything in Germany was moving well and which it would not be to the public interest to reveal at present.

Mrs. Adolphus Busch of St. Louis, widow of the late beer king in that city, has been appointed a Red Cross worker, and now serving a prison term, was released from the state penitentiary after a move to collect a fee of $10,000.

Three soldiers were killed and 17 others were seriously injured when an automobile overturned on the road between Fort Sill and Lawton, Comanche county, near Atlantic, Ga. All the men were members of the Fifth cavalry.

Jeremiah A. Sullivan, a fugitive from justice since the eve of the date he was to have been inaugurated for the second time as governor of, was arrested by the police of Tela, Honduras, according to a dispatch from Amapala.

"On April 19 the arms and ammunition were sent from Lubeck. On April 20, 21 and 22 the ship of arms for the coming of Easter Sunday, according for the landing of German troops and using for a air raid on the Kingsbridge railway station in Dublin, and a naval attack on the Kingstown harbor. These attacks were to take place between April 24 and 26.

"A letter from Von Igel to the rebels and their German end showed that the Germans were aware that Captain Faithful and established bases in Ireland for German submarines.

"The Aud[illegible] never reached Ireland, but was then scuttled, on Easter Monday, April 24, but the crew was saved. A German support miscarried and it only remained for the Irish to make the most of their rebellion on the defensive.
