DAPHNE RESOLVES THAT SHE WILL NO LONGER BE DEPENDENT UPON A MAN

By Rupert Hughes
Daphne, a young girl, was sitting on a bench in the park, looking at the flowers. She was thinking of the man who had just left her. She had loved him so much, but now she was free. She was going to be a doctor. She was going to be a woman. She was going to be a woman who was not dependent upon a man.

"What you mean to do, Daphne?"
"I mean to go to college and study medicine," she said.
"You mean to be a doctor?"
"Yes, I do. I want to be a woman who can take care of herself and other people."

"That's a very noble ambition," said her mother. "But you must be prepared to work hard and to face many difficulties. You must be a woman of strong character and a woman of high intelligence."

"I am ready," said Daphne. "I will work hard and I will face all the difficulties that come my way. I will be a woman who is not dependent upon a man."

"I am proud of you, Daphne," said her mother. "You are a woman of high character and high intelligence. You are a woman who is not dependent upon a man."

"I am proud of you, Daphne," said her mother. "You are a woman of high character and high intelligence. You are a woman who is not dependent upon a man."

"I am proud of you, Daphne," said her mother. "You are a woman of high character and high intelligence. You are a woman who is not dependent upon a man."

"I am proud of you, Daphne," said her mother. "You are a woman of high character and high intelligence. You are a woman who is not dependent upon a man."

"I am proud of you, Daphne," said her mother. "You are a woman of high character and high intelligence. You are a woman who is not dependent upon a man."

"I am proud of you, Daphne," said her mother. "You are a woman of high character and high intelligence. You are a woman who is not dependent upon a man."

"I am proud of you, Daphne," said her mother. "You are a woman of high character and high intelligence. You are a woman who is not dependent upon a man."
