By VICTOR ROUSSEAU

Blind man buff, a man who had been blind for several years, had just been cured of his blindness. He was now able to see and was very happy. He had been blind since he was a child and had never seen anything before. He had been told that he would never see and that he would be blind for the rest of his life. But now he had a chance to see and he was very happy.

He had been told that he would never see and that he would be blind for the rest of his life. But now he had a chance to see and he was very happy. He had been told that he would never see and that he would be blind for the rest of his life. But now he had a chance to see and he was very happy.
