Book Newspaper Produces Proof That General Sherman in Speech Declared War Was "Hell."

In answer to the request for the [illegible] ren. William T. Sherman in which the famous speech is alleged to have been made and to refute intimations that he never said it at all, the Columbus (O.) Dispatch asserts that General Sherman said it in Columbus on August 12, 1880, and in support of the assertion produces from its files the story of the address as made there at that time, in which the now famous expression defining war was made.

The original news report of the Civil war speech of General Sherman [illegible] Hayes was a part of honor accorded [illegible] of the living generals of the Civil war were present. The [illegible] made to the toast at Lassalle parlor. It was raining [illegible] when General Sherman's turn came to speak, but he stood out uncovered and delivered his short speech. As published it contained but 308 words. Adhering to the fact that the soldiers did not mind the rain, he continued:

"Yes sir, we say that rain is not soldiers. [illegible] many a big horse today when [illegible] in six days, but boys it is all [illegible] You can hear that [illegible] coming on [illegible] I see upon it with [illegible] half it is [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
