CHAPTER XVIII.

—12—

Daphne ventured for the subway as a fugitive rabbit to its burrow. But she was not a rabbit and she was confronted in the tunnel She could not endure to be spied in the presence of so many people eyes like slinged bullets. She left the train at the next station and walked rapidly to Fifth Avenue, where up it burrowed.

She walked rapidly for the comfort of the restless motion, for the sense of comfortable destination ahead of her. She found Mrs. Cheevis at the door of her diamonded husband. Daphne stared not tell them just yet that she had lost her place. She would tell them when she got another one. For fear that they might ask why she was home so early, she went down to Rapaport's emporium.

She wanted to tell Bayard and Leila that it happened. It was safe, she felt sure. Bayard would never attack Gerry. It would be more likely to be Gail at Daphne for bringing the trouble on herself.

Leila let her in at the door, but she was in a sullenest humor. She said, "Hello!" grimly and stepped back for Daphne to enter. Daphne found Bayard still sullen with interrupted quarrel. He said, "Hello!" with a dismal enunciation.

"What do you suppose that brother of yours orders me to do now?" said Leila, whirling Daphne toward her.

"Your brother orders!" said Daphne, in resolution to Bayard's ordering Leila to do anything.

"He wants me to go to Dustin and get up a peace conference next week," said Leila.

Bayard snatched Daphne to him and cheered: "The foolish man doesn't know didn't she, without consulting me? She wouldn't set foot back as you and yours; she wore you out, paraded you before other men there in Newport while I was staring here. And now that Dustin misses so money that I haven't got, and can't get, she won't have anything to do with him. That's all right, but she has no right to ask him to do anything for me. And I won't be used. I've had enough of her and every other relation with her. I've had enough for debt. I ask Leila to go tell him about my hard luck and my fine prospects—play for with him—and with me. But will she do it? Not she won't do anything for me."

Daphne was swayed by his emotion. She pleaded: "Why don't you, Leila? You have such winning ways. I'll go with you."

Leila hesitated, then answered by her hand and arm and stepping it on her hand. She paused, took it off again, and went on to explain: "Bayard has got down on his knees to me, and he knows that is asking favors one likes to have one's back straightened."

Bayard grumbled: "How are you getting along at your office?"

Daphne felt unable to intrude her own troubles on him. She shrugged her shoulders. It is a kind of white flag.

"Hang on to your job as long as you can, and get, for your pains, as much as you can of it, I guess. You're the only one of us who has a job or earns a cent. That's the advantage of being a pretty girl."

Daphne almost moved to tell him some of the disadvantages of being a pretty girl, but she felt that it was useless. She refused to make excuses to them, to bat she withheld them. Leila rose, as, arranged in her own head. She was smiling in the consolatement of beauty at to-be-had. "Who you ask credit you've got to look as if you didn't need it," she said.

They found Dutch in a state of unusual excitement and exhaustion. There were few customers in his place, and he left them to the advice of his young partner. He advanced on Daphne, and gave her a hand to each.

"Why, oh why in the name of Fatal Fairies did you ever take to the stage? The pictures have taken every decent woman off the screen. You're too good for them to, but she withheld them. Leila rose, as, arranged in her own head. She was smiling in the consolatement of beauty at to-be-had. "Who you ask credit you've got to look as if you didn't need it," she said.

At such a time, as in an epoch of the past, there came a dissipation of a people from war's soldiers spy and the like, and the Chinese were all in my colony, festivals were held in the streets, and there was much feasting and drinking and gambling.

The shipbuilding industry in the Philippine Islands is assuming important proportions, vessels of 250 tons being turned out in at least seven different yards.

The name "mahogany" is said to be applied commercially to more than 50 different woods. The demand now greatly exceeds the supply. It is not surprising that the real wood is an expensive article. It is learned that it takes from 150 to 300 years for a mahogany tree to reach merchantable age.

Stating their calculations upon reflective phenomena, the British astronomers have advanced the theory that the world is at least 70,000,000 years old. Recent experiments have demonstrated the degree of condensation which exists beyond light. These readings show a distinct curvature which at the rate of 186,000 miles per second is a light of 100 candle power. The farther the light the longer it is time required to produce a reaction, but in no case the sending will curve toward the feeblest glimmer of light.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are so heavily advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the claims made for it—consequently the supplies more assuredly in a roundabout. A medicinal preparation that has real merit, that has almost solid fact, and has in endless chain system the remedy is recommended by one to another as it is benefited, to those who are in need of it.

WAS ONCE "WASTE LAND" Present Site of Great Bank Is Now York City So Described in Knickerbocker

In the office of George F. Baker, in this city, there hangs on the wall the original deed, dated February 4, 1686, for the land on which the First National bank now stands, thereto designated as "waste land," on the city plan of New York. It was leased to one Thomas Hall, who built a small sketch of the property, showing Wall street with the East river in the rear, through which trade winds blow.

When one considers that this "waste land" now contains some of the most valuable spots in the world one realizes how far-sighted were the men of two centuries here wrought in New York city.

What would Thomas Dongan have said if he had been told that on this "waste land" would one day stand a building in which millions of dollars would be handled?

ANSWERED FORGET REFUSED TO

When President, His Declined to House Where He Had Been Invited to Reside.

During President Grant's administration a movement was started to call upon Mrs. Grant for having been absent from Washington. The house asked him to purchase a residence in which she would be fitted and performed while away, and to furnish it in the form of Alexander Hamilton.

"I freely inform the house that from the time of my entrance into the presidency I have been in the habit, as were all of my predecessors, of having it continued to discharge all of the expenses of arts and entertainments which are required of me as president of the United States, and do not see that I can properly recommend to any one increase of my compensation. The expenses of my office in every case requiring their discharge, I am ready to approve all necessary elevation of rate in whatever part of the United States I may at the time be found."

Pictures of Christ.

All pictures of Christ now in existence represent the artists' imaginative ideas of what the Savior looked like, for no contemporaneous portrait or other description of Him has been handed down to us. Even the Bible contains no personal appearance. The works of Lysippus, Apelles and Polycletus are the earliest accurate ones.

Kaiser Might Have Remembered Roles Introduced to Americans at Chateau-Thierry.

The first American to meet the kaiser at Amerongen was Sergt. James Miller Kirkwood, formerly mayor of Cleveland.

Sergeant Kirkwood was attached to the American legation in Brussels and The Hague after serving at Chateau-Thierry.

"I had a little while to loaf while in The Hague," he said, "and since Amerongen is only two and a half hours' ride away, my sister and I decided to see the kaiser's home. We met him in the garden. He was strolling leisurely along in his slate-jagger business suit. He entered into conversation.

"'Are you Americans?' he asked, using perfect English.

"'Yes we are,' we replied.

"'Glad you're in the war!' he questioned further.

"'Yes,' you meet us at Chateau-Thierry we'll pressed back.'

Figures Never Lie.

At the same time there were 15,215 single women insane and 35,971 married women insane—which proves that in January, 1914, married life made more women crazy than it did men. Cruelty and City Boys.

By planning meals several days ahead you can avoid serving a dish once a night a balanced and varied diet. Meals should be not only of good food, but of food that will satisfy the appetite. Left-overs should be served in the dainty manner as when first prepared. Each person should be required to pay a penalty for being late for meals, the penalty to go for the upkeep of the nursery.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

Let us not do my work from day to day,
Nor waste in weeping over needless pain
The moments precious as the golden sands
In mystic hour-glass, or treasured gain.

WISDOM IN FEEDING THE FAMILY.

Food is not necessarily nutritious in proportion to its cost. Humanity, the appeal to the imaginative and they seem very desirable, but by stiffening the back with whalebone and drawing will power on the waist line and then by with but a laughing glance. Thoughtful housekeeper a family should, of all people, understand the food value of eggs and how to prepare them in delicious and appetizing ways. Hard boiled eggs, fried eggs, poached eggs, scrambled eggs, omelets, soufflés, are all simple, inexpensive ways to cook them. Hard boiled eggs are a good filling for sandwiches, and when combined with chopped celery, nuts, and mayonnaise dressing they make delicious salad.

Potato foods are those most expensive and complex, such as meat, fish, eggs, cheese and milk. Carbohydrates are the starches and sugars, potatoes, rice, macaroni and the various cereals.

It is important that we balance our meals, that is, that the meal of the day must should be; each day's dietary should contain protein, fats, carbohydrates in the correct proportion. Protein is the only food that contains the elements necessary for building tissue. Fats and carbohydrates furnish heat and energy.

Plant proteins, such as peas, beans and lentils, take the place of meat. When the meat allowance is small these vegetables should be used liberally, rather than cabbage, turnips and potatoes.

An excess of meat is especially bad, for it is not assimilated easily by the system and causes self poisoning. Meat is not necessary for children's food; muscle workers find cereal foods better suited to their needs. Fruit, raw, cooked and roughage (food that contains cellulose) are also a part of the daily menu.

Let us not forget that milk and butter fat, eggs and vegetable fats and proteins contain a growth determinant which is necessary for the growth of the child, without which he will be stunt of real human development. The child should be tatted as well as physically, for he is constantly exposed to fierce and nervous for pent-up energy.

Community Market Successes.

Our north central Pennsylvania town last year reports that 30 farmers and 1,900 customers went to its attend-ance in a single day, and the business done during the first month during which the market was conducted aided about $12,000. Another open market in the same state reports that 1,000 people attended the first day, and sales to the amount of $1,500. Prizes at the community market to encourage the production of the best vegetables and fruits are a feature of successful truck gardening or the farmer or the grower and markets a considerable amount of produce usually prefers to sell in wholesale quantities. He considers that the difference between wholesale and retail prices is not sufficient to offset the value of an equal amount of time devoted to his regular farm work. The small producer, however, can afford to do so and fully enjoyed with his farming operations.

HELPFUL SUGGESTIONS.

When replacing papers in drawers a little sand on a small piece of cotton will make it quite stable.

Salt, pepper and mustard stickers with an orange spoon or make a paper funnel, and they will be more quickly.

A piece of macerated gland in a berry pie when put in the oven will never let the juice boil over. Grease the rim of the pie plate and the edge of the pie to boil up in.

Grease the cork of the gas bottle, so that it will not be glued in when it is wanted.

A piece of raw beef in the mouth a few minutes before disagreeable odors are to be taken, will dull the sense of smell.

Keep on your desk a list of things to be done, note-writing and household tasks; as they are done, cross off. It will be a satisfaction to see how much is accomplished during the day and by no month. The same method is a good one to use in the kitchen; sometimes things are forgotten that, with the list one people will not suffer.

A camp stake that will slip under the ice is one of the very best to have from a hook, in a great convenience in a kitchen with small space.

A roomy market basket with a strong, well-fastened handle, makes a fine bed for the small child when traveling, and if it is lined with a pillow and a light blanket it is comfortable for the baby or sleeping size to the waiting.

Carry a package of courtplaster of different colors. This may be useful when traveling to mend a garment or anything in an emergency.

Transplant a few asters and other flowers from the garden after the first vegetables are gone. In the fall they will be pleasant to look at.

Kitchen aprons of unbleached cotton flannel are inexpensive and are a decided help as they may be boiled and kept white.

Cotton towels are fine to use when washing floors or porches, as they protect the hand from the moisture and are comfortable to wear.

RESULTS IN STRAINING MILK

Operation Improves Quality of Product, but Does Not Necessarily Improve Wholesomeness.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Experiments conducted by the United States Department of Agriculture to furnish the following facts regarding the straining of milk and proper ways of doing it:

Sediment in milk indicates carelessness in the production and should be kept out.

Straining improves the commercial quality of milk, but does not necessarily improve its wholesomeness.

Fine cloth and absorbent cotton between layers of cheesecloth are effective strainers for milk.

Cheesecloth alone, even when folded, is not a satisfactory strainer.

Milk should be strained as soon after milking as possible.

FRECKLES

Here Is the Time to Get Rid of Those Ugly Spots

There's no use trying to get rid of them until the weather gets warm, for they will only come back. But the moment warm weather appears you should get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from any druggist, and begin to use it according to directions. Even a few applications should show how easily you can remove the freckles, and a little more persistence should entirely clear your skin of them and prevent a return of the discoloration.

Don't be discouraged if some of the freckles do not disappear promptly. Keep on applying the Othine, for it is bound to win. Be sure to get the double strength, as the ordinary kind sometimes fails to remove freckles.
