ASK CHANGES IN WAR RISK ACT

Important Amendments in Bill Are Asked of National Lawmakers.

REVISE SCHEDULE UPWARD

Increased Compensation for Disabled Ex-Service Men Is Urged—Bureau Seeks to Give Fullest Possible Service to Those Affected.

Washington.—"Our work in conducting the affairs of the bureau must be guided by the counsel of the soldiers, sailors and marines throughout the nation is to be of the fullest possible service to those affected by the act."

Thus Colonel B. G. Chelmsley-Jones, director of the bureau of war risk insurance, in the course of a talk to ex-service men at Walker-Gordon hospital, Washington, D. C., epitomized the motives behind the action of the bureau in requesting congress, through the treasury department, to enact several important amendments to the war risk insurance act. These may be divided into two general classes—those affecting the compensation features of the act, and those concerning war risk insurance.

A very important proposed amendment, and one which meets with wide spread approval, is the upward revision of the schedule of compensation payable to disabled ex-service men. Under the present schedule a private totally disabled is entitled to $30 a month.

The amount is raised by $50, making $80 payable under these circumstances. If he has a wife but no child living he gets $45; the first child provides $10, the second $5, and one child, he draws $75 per month; $55; the amendment gives him $85.

Extend the Provisions.

The law now provides that if a man loses both hands, both feet, or the sight of both eyes, or becomes helpless and permanently bedridden, he shall receive $100 a month compensation. The amendment provides that those who have lost an arm and a leg, or one hand and the sight of one eye, or one foot crippled as men who have lost both feet or both hands, and who therefore are recommended that in addition to the compensation provided by law, such compensation at the rate of $100 a month, as the director may determine. The loss of one foot and one hand; the loss of one foot and the sight of one eye, etc., are specified "total and permanent disability" and would receive $100 a month. There is also a provision for a "double total permanent disability," meaning cases in which men are so severely disabled that they are entitled to two of these classifications, the compensation shall be $200 a month.

The bureau has found a very widespread sentiment among ex-soldiers in favor of having their policies made payable in a lump sum or in installments covering a short period of time, at their option. To meet this demand Director Chelmsley-Jones has recommended a modification in section of the war risk insurance act to permit holding persons in the contract for converted insurance for optional settlement on the part of the insured, making such insurance payable either in one sum or in installments for five, ten months or more.

The bureau has not exercised his right of election, under the proposed amendment, to become a beneficiary to receive the insurance in monthly installments covering a period of not more than three years.

Include Other Relatives.

Another very important item is the proposed enlargement of the permitted list of beneficiaries to include parents, child, grandchild, parent, brother or sister by insertion in addition to those enumerated, uncles, aunts, nephews, nieces, brothers-in-law and sisters-in-law.

All of the amendments described above, together with several other provisions of minor importance, are incorporated in the so-called "Sweet bill," introduced by Congressman Sweet of Iowa, in the house of representatives on August 26, 1919.

The general trend of the bureau's recommendations manifest its desire to be of the greatest possible service to those for whom it was created—the men who served our country during the Great War. Not only in recommending the adoption of additional benefits, but in every other possible way, the bureau is doing its best to carry out the letter and spirit of the act in behalf of men for whom it was prepared.

In the matter of the settlement of insurance claims the bureau is keeping fully current. Of over 123,000 claims, all but 2,000 have been settled, and upon her payments are being made. The 2,000 unsettled claims are those in which the beneficiaries live in foreign countries or for some reason or other cannot be reached. A diligent effort is being made to get action in this comparatively small residue.

Pay Premiums Promptly.

A great many people do not realize that the premiums paid by beneficiaries on the insurance feature of the act and the premiums paid by beneficiaries on insurance claims is paid immediately into the treasury of the United States. A claim for compensation a great many times is delayed because of the failure of beneficiaries that attaches to his claim because of the failure to pay premiums promptly as insurance claims. The bureau is constantly receiving every effort to determine these claims as quickly as possible, but unavoidable handling will persist. A large staff is employed in the bureau for the purpose of making compensation awards.

Another feature that has been completed a very trying and difficult task has been the classification of the disability ratings for different injuries and disabilities suffered in the war. Under the act $100 per month as compensation for a "double total permanent disability." Of 82,770 beneficiaries, all compensation ranging from $30 to $100 per month as a maximum instead of upon $30 as at present. This schedule is necessarily very complicated, being graded from practically total disabilities and degrees of injuries, and has been worked out with care to time in accordance with the bureau's experience in the handling of claims that have been done in all cases.

In addition, the government in the near future will be at least one man in the world whom the ex-service men will strictly despise, and distrust, and that will be the unscrupulous agent who is a time of test was found wanting."

New York—Both on the stage and in real life Gertrude Harrison, an actress playing in "The Kiss Burglar," is accused of pilfering kisses from her husband, Thomas F. Orr, by the latter's wife. Mrs. Ethel Carleton Orr, formerly of the Ziegfeld Follies chorus, who she served as host

Col. Edwin Jadwin, now in command of one of the engineer regiments in France, is the author of several well known red tape, formalities and regulations. It got his promotion over to France fairly equipped for work. The record made by the engineers in the war has been speedily ready for service and the efficiency of the army has always been the subject of widespread comment in every circle. It develops now that the reason for his success was primarily the fact that he ignored red tape incumbrances which are required by the law. Secretary Baker to decide whether Jadwin should be court martialed for his initiative and his success.

BRITISH BIRTH RATE GROWS

More Boys Are Born in Times of Hardships Official Figures Show.

London.—More babies were born in England during August than in any previous month since the beginning of the war. Official returns show the number to be 6,200, equivalent to an annual rate of 24 per 1,000, or 1,000 more babies than in the same month of 1918.

"I believe that during and after wars more boys than girls are born," said Dr. Mary Scharlieb, a specialist, when discussing the figures. "Nature apparently has a way of providing more men to take the place of those killed in war. The fact that there is a shortage of women after wars, and that the number of births is always greater than the number of deaths, also points to this conclusion."

"A baby three days is a very explosive addition to the average British family," said another doctor. "The greatest surprise of my life was when perambulators has practically doubled. Milk is a luxury, and yet I have seen three guineas a week. The infantry's expensive article is also a great item for these days, while his cot costs quite as much as his pram. Before the war millionaires can afford twins, much as we love them to repair the waste of war."

Strange Fish.

Venice, Cal.—A strange, yet apparently nine feet in length and counting mostly of mouth, head and tail, is arousing much interest here. The creature resembles a gigantic tadpole.

Investigating New Prunes.

San Jose, Cal.—Something new in prunes" is to be the subject of an investigation by government, state and university agriculturists, horticulture prune representatives and local fruit and canneryman. This is a French prune which is being grown in the Santa Margin Hill. The fruit is said to have many desirable qualities, and the investigation of the bureau of markets, at the season of the recent horticultural convention in Riverside.

Low-Priced Furs Worn.

As a result of the desire of the garment manufacturers to keep down the price of their merchandise, it is believed that low-priced furs will be extensively used this winter, says the New York Times. Officials of the Metropolitan Fur Exchange are predicting a very active market on reasonably priced skins. It is pointed out that the demand may be expected to broaden out and take in other furs that are in the popular-priced class. For instance, the second prices for nazia and skunk will
