Protect Your Property With Certain-teed Roofing

Certain-teed Roofing shelters your property ags nst the severest storms. Driving rain will develop no leaks. Melting snow and ice will find no cracks or crevices through which to enter.

Certain-teed keeps the interiors of your barns and other buildings dry. It protects their contents from damage by water.

For when Certain-teed is properly laid, it is firmly cemented together. It makes an impenetrable one-piece roof.

And Certain-teed has other advantages. It is fire-retarding and spark-proof. It is guaranteed for 5, 10 or 15 years, according to weight.

Yet Certain-teed Roofing costs less to buy, less to lay and less to maintain, than any other type of good roofing.

See you dealer about Certain-teed. He either has it or can get it quickly from a nearby Certain-teed distributing center.

As Clean Cut as a Thoroughbred

The clean-cut businesslike design of the "27" Engine results from efficiency as manufacturer. A farm engine, to be efficient, must be properly designed—may also have graceful lines—but must be rugged.

Immensely strong in every part—weight where weight is needed. Every vital interest—every contact part case hardened—all parts carefully, precisely made by accurate machine work—finished throughout.

Looks like a thoroughbred—acts. Delivers a steady flow of power—smooth—complete—economically. Used the service previous methods, and efficient design make it the perfect engine for the farm. Power is flowing engine to look at. Come in and look it over.

Other "27" features are: Run on kerosene, coal oil, tops, as well as gasoline; built in Bosch high tension oscillating magneto; more than rated power; every part interchangeable; long-lived cast iron.

IN LOVING MEMORY

Of my dear sister, Ethel Jane, who departed this life Feb. 5, 1919.

Farewell, dear Ethel; but not forever,
We shall meet to part no more
On that Eastern shore of heaven
Her picture now hangs on the wall
Her books are lying near,
And there is the vacant chair
Her fingers touched
And there is her vacant chair.
Around our home of evening gather
Sweet memories of her
Mostly they linger there.
The dear face we see no more.
Like ivy on the withered oak,
When other things decay.
Her love for me, dear Ethel,
Will stay and never fade away.
In the morning of the Easter we will meet.
Kneeling together at Jesus' feet.

A LOVING RECOMPENSE

By RALPH HAMILTON

Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union

A tramp passed by the little cottage on the hill, hurrying to obtain from the pelting snow, shelter for the night—lest and appetite-inviting with a savory flavor, and grew hungrier than ever. The general store delivery boy, tossing his package on the rear porch, paused ceremonially in at a window, slightly lowered for the use and the steam of cookery, and now on a table great bowls of freshly cooked doughnuts, noted Abbie Ford, sprouted, flour-covered and floury, disappeared into the mouth of her last. Then, rinsing out the pan in the kitchen sink, she dried it, and, folded on a kerchief, hurried over to Mrs. Trevor, came bustling into the house. "Why, Abbie Ford, I never knew you to drive out in the storm," she announced. "For mercy's sake, what's up? Are you not starting a hotel or a diner?"

"Pretty nearly," smiled back Alice. "There's been a sudden demand for two hundred and forty, and the flour is all used up," and Alice sat down in a chair, her dimpled elbows bared, with a sigh that was partial and satisfied.

Mandy's big eyes took in the bowls and the pans piled high with doughnuts, scenting a mystery. She knew of no local function where food donations had been asked for. "What have you cooked all those for?" she asked bluntly.

"I promised to have them ready for Roscoe at noon."

Mrs. Trevor flushed at the mention of Alice's brother, but exclaimed: "Is he to get a party?"

"Oh, no; he is coming here in his flying machine from the forest preserve signal station. Of course you have heard about the ship subsidy for the ice right miles out in the lake?" And then, as Mandy nodded impatiently: "It's held fast among the floes and can't budge, and between it and the shore it's a foaming field of loose ice. Three men from the station are to be patrol boat, and the crew wigwag out the mail every yesterday for help. There's a friend of Roscoe's aboard the steamer, and then he knew that reason and because the crew may be suffering from scurvy—" Mrs. Trevor interposed that he was coming to the house. "Why, you're a fine baker; a lot of fresh and salt meat, flour, sugar, and butter and lemon suggested that I contribute a bag of my famous doughnuts, as for them."

"I guess I'll stay and help you pack them, suggested Mandy, eagerly, and Roscoe. "Isn't it a risky trying to get the airplane aboard of that ship?"

"Oh, Roscoe won't do that," replied Alice, with a little laugh. "He's going to hitch his idea to circle above the ship and drop the package down to the deck. Mandy had been listening herself at the window. Her aerial mind switched into the vague distance and the way back to the cozy home of the Fords. The details of his venture were lost on her, and she was only half ranged to remain at home [illegible] spell, to remember every word of the story for its startling point, much to the delight of Alice.

"The meats donated landed all right on the deck, and one of the sea attendants, Mr. Carr, a crate of eggs fell into the water, and was rescued by the use of one of my doughnuts!" inquired Alice excitedly.

"I had put right among the pancakes and forgot to tell you. Roscoe said the crew cheered and stood mourning at the delicious treat. They threw out the stuffed sea weight between two [illegible] and [illegible] until [illegible]

It was the next afternoon when Roscoe came home from the station. "The ship got to port here," he explained, "and the passengers and crew are celebrating their rescue. Some of them are homes and they are sending the brother, the husband, the father, the son home to them so generously, and those doughnuts, Alice, they're the best ever!"

"Here they come!" cried the excited Mandy, a few minutes later, in great alarm, and a row motorboats down the river street a merry, united group.

Mandy's face had sold out his hide begs in oil lands in Warren county and the doughnuts had been connected in some way with the fortune. Mrs. Trevor's interest was [illegible]

Because the Telephone Company is a corporation does not necessarily mean that it is without honor or the desire to deal fairly; that it is not as anxious as any other business enterprise to serve you satisfactorily, at a fair price, and to merit your good will.

Corporations—even public service corporations—are simply associations of men and women, managed and operated by men and women, all of whom are just as human as men and women in other walks of life.

These men and women who are the Telephone Company have every reason for trying their best to make their management and service acceptable to you—their places, pay and promotion depend upon just that thing!

Forget the "soulless corporation" when you think of the Telephone Company—think, instead, of the men and women who compose it. Give them at least "the benefit of the doubt."

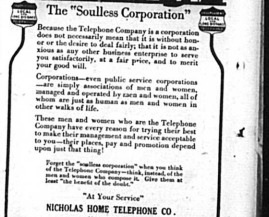
Seeing Life in the Army.
An English soldier who had enlisted in London for two years' service reluctantly described his duty as being "to ride a funeral pair." Further explanations showed that his time was spent in driving the gun carriage bearing all military funerals in London —soldiers, ex-soldiers, veterans, honored guests, and so on. And he naively added that the advertisements said, "Join the army and see the world. It's a man's life!"



The Ford Sedan, with electric self-starting and lighting system and demountable rims with a 7½-inch tire front and rear, is a family car of class and comfort, both in summer and in winter. For touring it is a most comfortable car. The large plate glass windows make it an open car when desired, while in case of rain and all inclement weather, it can be made a most delightful closed car in a few minutes. Rain-proof, dust-proof, fine upholstering, broad, roomy seats. Simple in operation, strong, handy can safely drive it.
