FARM CONDITION IS IMPROVING ACCORDING TO BULLETIN

In a bulletin issued by the National Union National Bank of Louisville, quite a lengthy statement of farming conditions in Kentucky is given. The bulletin says in part:

For the last two or three years our papers, magazines and other publications have been filled with articles of industrial activity, labor unrest, political turmoil and other things through it all the most important of all the intricate machinery of civilization has been working quietly and unobtrusively. Nowhere was this more apparent than in the American farmer. Nowhere in the world today does the farmer occupy the position he does in the United States. Nowhere else is he so independent. Nowhere else is he so prosperous. Nowhere else is he so free. Nowhere else is he so much a factor in the affairs of the nation. Nowhere else is he so much a factor in the affairs of the world. Nowhere else is he so much a factor in the affairs of the world. Nowhere else is he so much a factor in the affairs of the world
