

FOREIGN MARKETS FOR FARM PRODUCTS PRESENT PROBLEM

Final Tests of Exports in Past Fiscal Year—Reconstruction Gives Insight Into Aspects to Future Trade Abroad—Merchants Await Advance Nation's Commercial Interests

The final tests of the United States' export trade in the past fiscal year have been completed, and the results are being analyzed by the various departments of the government. The Department of Commerce, the State Department, and the Tariff Commission are all working to determine the extent to which the reconstruction program has affected the foreign market for American farm products.

The Department of Commerce reports that the total value of exports in the past fiscal year was $1,000,000,000, a record for the United States. This was an increase of 10 percent over the previous year. The most important factors in this increase were the increase in the value of exports to Europe and the increase in the value of exports to the West Indies and the Caribbean.

The State Department is also studying the results of the reconstruction program. It is particularly interested in the extent to which the program has affected the foreign market for American farm products. The State Department reports that the reconstruction program has had a beneficial effect on the foreign market for American farm products. It has increased the demand for American farm products and has opened up new markets for them.

The Tariff Commission is also studying the results of the reconstruction program. It is particularly interested in the extent to which the program has affected the foreign market for American farm products. The Tariff Commission reports that the reconstruction program has had a beneficial effect on the foreign market for American farm products. It has increased the demand for American farm products and has opened up new markets for them.
