ONLY 20 YEARS AGO

Nobody swatted the fly.
Nobody wore a wrist watch.
Nobody wore white shoes.
Most young men had "livery bills."
Farmers came to town for their mail.
The heavens were not full of man birds.
Nor the seas alive with under water boats.
The hired girl drew one-fifty a week and was happy.
The butcher "threw in" a chunk of liver.
The merchants "threw in" a pair of suspenders with every suit.
Nobody "listened in" on the telephone.
There were no sane Fourths nor electric meters.
Straw stacks were burned instead of baled.
Publishing a country newspaper was not a business—it was a dueling game.
There were no Bolshevists or international anarchists.
The safety razor had not introduced the clean-shaven face.

TO THE MEN OF AMERICA

(By Rose Trumbull, Scottsdale, Arz.)

You talk of your breed of cattle,
And plan for a higher strain,
You double the food of the pasture,
You heap up the measure of grain;
You draw on the wits of the nation,
To better the barn and the pen;
But what are you doing, say brothers,
To better the breed of men?

You boast of your Morgans and Herefords,
Of the worth of a calf or a colt,
And scoff at the scrub and the mongrel;
As worthy a fool or a dolt;
You mention the points of your roadster,
With many a "wherefore" and "when,"
But, ah, are you conning, my brothers,
The worth of the children of men?

And what of your boy? Have you measured
His needs for a growing year?
Does your mark as his sire, in his features,
Mean less than your brand on a steer?
Thoroughbred—that is your watchword,
For stable and pasture and pen;
But what is your wrd for the homestead?
Answer, you breeders f men!

MORROW NOT FIRST TO GIVE MESSAGE IN PERSON, CLAIM

Isaac Shelby, first Governor of Kentucky, was the first chief executive of this Commonwealth to deliver a message to the State Legislature in person, Colonel William Peterson Kimball, of Lexington, says in calling attention to the statements that Governor Edwin P. Morrow established a precedent when he delivered his message to the present Legislature in person, and refutes the statement, in a letter to The Herald.

The letter has this to say:

"Editor Herald:

"The statement is going the rounds of the press that Governor Edwin P. Morrow is the first and only Governor of the State who ever delivered a message to the Legislature in person. This statement displays a lack of knowledge of the history of the State.

"In May, 1782, the electors chose Isaac Shelby first Governor.

"The General Assembly convened in Lexington on the fourth day of the following June, and on June 6 Governor Shelby appeared before that body in person and delivered his first message orally.

"It will be recalled that Governor Shelby was inaugurated at the intersection of Main street and Broadway. The people of Lexington owe it to themselves to erect a monument at that point to Isaac Shelby to commemorate the beginning of the Commonwealth, and as a tribute to the memory of the old hero.

"Respectfully,
"W. P. KIMBALL."

LACK OF HORSES IS MOST SERIOUS

PRODUCTION OF THOROUGH BREDS MUST BE ENCOURAGED.

PRESENT SUPPLY IS SHORT

Army Would Need One Animal for Every Two Men Should We Be Called Upon to Engage in Military Operation for Any Reason.

Some idea of the magnitude of the task of the Remount Board of the United States army in organizing and maintaining a horse breeding and supply scheme for the future forces of national defense may be had by a study of the reports of the remount officers of the A. E. F., for the period of 1917-1918. It was found in France that the old theory that the proposition of horse strength to man strength in armies should be two to five was erroneous. One horse for every two men was needed. To their astonishment the officers of the remount service, many of whom had never seen the inside of a military text book until a few weeks before they received their commissions, discovered that six hundred horses were required to equip a single infantry regiment of war strength, that is a regiment of 3000 to 3800 men.

It was next to impossible to obtain horses in sufficient numbers to properly equip even the artillery, transport and ambulance services of the A. E. F., because for a period of two years before the participation of the United States in the conflict the entente allies had been draining the country of horses of all sorts and kinds. The A. E. F. had no cavalry.

Modern Armies Are Large.

Nowadays armies are reckoned by hundreds of thousands, if not by millions. The strength of a single division of the A. E. F. was greater ...

... studied the problem of military horse supply most deeply have declared in recommendations to the general staff at Washington and to congress that the government must obtain and place at the disposal of farmers in sections of the country in which horses may be raised most economically between 4000 and 8000 thoroughbred stallions. A beginning has been made in this tremendous work, but no more than a beginning. The remount service has placed in Virginia, New York, Kentucky, Oklahoma, Texas and in the far west some seventy-five or eighty thoroughbred stallions, and these stallions have, almost without exception, been the cheerful gifts of thoroughbred producers and persons interested in racing.

It is because of the government's insurmountable need of thoroughbred blood that the most distinguished officers of the regular military service have been so outspoken in their opposition to half baked legislation that might interfere with thoroughbred production. Major General Leonard Wood was the first officer of high rank to declare himself publicly on this subject. In 1911 when thoroughbred stallions and mares by the hundreds were being shipped out of the country because the shutting down of racing in New York state in consequences of the Hughes anti-racing legislation of 1908 and 1910 closed the metropolitan market to thoroughbred producers, General Wood announced in the daily press that the loss of thoroughbred blood had assumed the proportions of a national calamity, and that if something were not done by the government to check the exportation of such stock and to revive production it would be impossible to properly outfit with horses an army of the size the United States would have to put in the field if we came in conflict with a first-class power. The prophesy of General Wood was to be abundantly fulfilled in 1917 and 1918 as had already been pointed out.

Oppose Anti-Racing Laws.

When the hearings on the anti-racing bills in Maryland's legislature were held a year ago last winter were on General Andrew Hero, commander of the Artillery Brigade of the Division of draught troops that was training at Camp Meade, and ...
