WHEAT AND WOOL

Kentucky farmers should receive for their wheat the full quotation price at their nearest terminal point and they should not suffer the deduction of freight charges, according to Geoffrey Morgan secretary of the Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation. In a statement just issued Mr. Morgan says:

"A broad survey has been made of the situation and we find that there is a conflict of systems in marketing wheat in various sections of the State.

"In some sensible local millers for the price that farmers shall receive for their wheat, in other counties the price is based on quotations at St. Louis, Louisville, Cincinnati or some other terminal market, minus the freight. The last system mentioned is the one that should prevail in every county in the State. Last year farmers received Chicago or St. Louis quotations for wheat, minus the freight. This was unjust.

"There will not be enough wheat harvested in Kentucky this year to run the mills of the State for six months. Millers will have to buy large amounts of wheat from terminal markets, paying market quotations for same, plus the freight. It is only a square deal to farmers, therefore, to pay them terminal market prices without deducting the freight charges.

On the matter of wool, the Farm Bureau statement says:

"The main facts bearing on the price of wool market are: First, money stringency;

Second, difficulties in transportation both of raw wools to the mills and finished products to the retailers.

"According to the Bureau of Markets the mills of the United States consumed 66,000,000 pounds of wool during April 1920 as against only 45,000,000 during the corresponding month last year.

"There is no over supply of fine wools and prices for these grades should be as high as last year.

"Farm Bureaus in Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin and Minnesota are shipping their wool to the National Wool Warehouse and Storage Company at Chicago, Ills., and they propose to hold their wool until they receive a fair price. Thanks to the American Farm Bureau Federation, the Federal Reserve Bank has made definite plans for financing wool growers who want to hold their wool.

"If any Farm Bureau in Kentucky wants to ship their wool to Chicago this office will furnish you with full particulars as to the method of preparation and will explain how you can obtain loans from your banks on this

RESOLUTIONS

Orient Lodge No. 109 F. & A. M. adopted the following preamble and resolutions at their last stated meeting:

"He whom the Gods love dies young, while he is in health, his his senses and judgment sound."

Since the wonderful and mysterious laws of nature have deprived us in the loving heart of the inscrutable Jehovah, and since we know that the design of his laws is ultimate perfection, we realize that Death must be the golden key that opens the place of eternity and allows us to assume our destined place in God's perfected universe. It is thus we are led to view the untimely and unexpected death of our esteemed brother, James Foster Dunlavy, to whom memories more than still in his young manhood and seeming in the fruit of perfect health.

To the grief-stricken family we tender our heartfelt sympathies and pray-ing mere words too cold and meaningless to attempt consolation, we can only commend them to the keeping of the Divine Comforter, in whom their boy put his trust and to whom he looked for guidance.

Resolved, That the lodge be draped and the members wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days and that this feble tribute to his memory be spread upon our minutes and published in the Carlisle Mercury.

LOVING MEMORY

of Capt James Dunlavy

Supreme are all the rest, one day— Will greet us somewhere on the way, But when or how we dare not say.

So it may come when blooms the rose When fades the bowers or falls the snow

But when or how no mortal knows.

Look for it when the buds unfold— Or when the years grow staid and old, I will come, but when may not be told.

Be ready.

And when it comes, will it be known And prized as something rare and dear The sweetest day e'er called our own?

Then we look on the vacant chair The home looks so perfect day The future looks so perfect day Forever to the one gone missing.

If we turn forward to its dawn When it has set, and light with dream It shrinks to dust and long gone by— Regret.

But let us live with hearts attent, On hope that each good day as sent— "Will prove as useful as those gone spent."

Every Tire Is Signed

Two men sign every Miller Tire—the maker and the inspector. Both are penalized if a tire comes back.

Under this method, defects have become extremely rare. Not a tire came back for adjustment to many Miller dealers last year.

Over 1,000 tires yearly are worn out in Miller factory tests.

All the best rival tires are constantly compared with the Miller, with three results:

Millers now excel all rivals, both in average and in uniform mileage.

Miller treads outwear rival treads by 25 per cent on the average.

Miller Cords average 15,000 miles—Miller Fabrics from 8,000 to 9,000 miles—in rear-wheel tests under extreme conditions.

You will gain a new idea of modern tires when you test a non-type Miller. Get one now and watch it. The super-service of the Miller Tire is now everywhere discussed.

HATCHED CHICKENS
By MAGGIE BIRMINGHAM.
(c, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Not a peep? Not a peep," worried Aunt Priscilla, stooping over the chicken coop. "I wouldn't mind, Jane, but it always was my care and cousin to have the little chickens hatched out early. I no like them hatching late in spring."

"Oh no I," Jane answered eagerly. "And, oh, auntie, the young flowers and the blue sky. It would lose them well on me—like in a hat, sky blue, with bright flowers on the crown!"

Her companion straightened from her task.

"Just because it's spring," she admonished sternly, "you're not to think I should go sky-larking with foolish ideas."

"But, auntie," the girl protested hot-ly, "I'm twenty years old. I'm a—"

"I wouldn't care if it weren't for the festival. And Lenny will be there. They say that 'in the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns.'"

A blush and a girlish laugh halted her speech.

She had run down the stairs street and rushed pantingly into the store of the Hyde millinery.

"Miss Gardner," she called impetuously, "would a hat the color of the spring sky and very much out would you let me pay for it when my chickens are hatched?"

The little milliner turned smilingly from the mirror and presently, "Most assuredly," said the young dame. "Don't you think it has?"

With a puzzle bund the millinery assured her that it was.

"I know, dear," she encouraged the doubtful maiden, "chickens ought not to be honored, besides many others who love you. But, my child, don't have your gown too long."

"Too long," gasped the girl. "Why, I haven't any. Miss Vanetta, and re-gingerie of any, either."

"Now let me see," mused the friend-ly little librarian, and she turned from the table while her eyes glistened thoughtfully.

She crossed the room and drew a shimmering creation from the depths of a fragrant outer chest.

"Why, Miss Jane," Jone exclaimed, with a catch in her throat, "that's much worn! I just wore it today for the Cinderella game!"

"Then you must undoubtedly let finger to her lips. Then she tip-toed to the girl and whispered:

"Dear friend: Indeed, I would do that and more for you, after last year's groom of a gown. No French model in all the fashion magazines is to me as sweet."

Jane's grown it seemed from all the town was missing, for Lawrence Lane, the little librarian's assistant, was also a player at the guitar, was coming.

Miss Hyde's dress took her down in the audience with an unbending frown.

Yet after she had watched the participants in the concert she began to have troubled and unsure.

"I wonder if I dare to look," she murmured, finally, "after all. If I sit down in row, her mate is nothing to be ashamed of. Jane is to blame because her evil aunt is a tyrant."

Jane's aunt was the pastor's wife and guard. Not for little old Jane, and Miss Hyde stood there pretty with a fervid, happy smile, but a fairy from the stage, and she was not the sponsor sky for her gown and a fairy of forest roses for her hair.

The applause was tremendous.

Presidency, Miss Hyde was amazed that Priscilla was standing alone when her form was lost in the crowd. Looking up she saw Jane Gard-ner coming down the aisle.

"Priscilla," he pleaded, "will I run your home and see the sweet dress in your secret that I was entered back to-day? How I love you and that I have thought through the springtime feeling-ings? Will you accept me? Will you and I are today. Will you marry, dear, and make me the happiest man in all the world?"

With a half-hysterical gesture she lowered her head.

"I know perhaps I can," she whis-pered, "but—" My chickens are all hatched out—prematurely, I suppose, but Jane is keep in nest—"

As they entered he knew the girl appeared.

"Dear, I think we should not auntie," she said quietly. "Little Miss Vanetta helped me with my dress and I'm sure. My only payment was to play for her one night with Lenny. I'm sure that my heart used to sing together before they quarreled, and I'm sure that I shared those sweet melodies so well to night. They will cheer me sometimes again because I respect his address from her own lips. I'm sure that I'm content. They are sitting there. The spring time inspired poetry in the bride be-sides you dear auntie."

There was certainly a deep color by her side. "Dear! Priscilla, your Jane Gay has answered at last!" he cried. Lawrence Lane. Do you think that I am ashamed to have you see me with chicken?"

"Why, just the answer!" Buttered the bewildered woman. "You're Jane replaced by a fairy. Come, dear, the chickens—they're bound to hatch and no wonder!"

Peculiar Disease.

Arthritis is the medical name for another disease—is full of interest—but the thing the patient has the incredible impulse to count a certain number of times before doing any-thing. One case recorded is of a girl who had to say "Yes" to the parlor-maid at least nine times before getting into it; another to put on her stockings by twos; another to knock three times on a window sill. Then there is found to be a similar number of times on the door itself before it would latch.

MEAT PRODUCTION SHOWS DECREASE

Washington, July 19—Decrease of 400,000,000 pounds in the country's meat production for the last six months as compared with the same period a year was reported today by the Institute of American Meat Packers, the activities of the Agriculture Department showing that 2,000,000 fewer cattle, hogs and sheep were slaughtered at principal markets during the first six months were used by the institute as the basis for its estimate of decreased production.

"During nearly every month of 1920 producers have complained on cattle and many packers reported losses on beef," said the institute's statement. "Prices on hogs and pork products are substantially lower now than at this time last year, due largely to diminished exports. The decrease in slaughtering indicates that as a result of these losses, some producers have cut down their herds and may restrict production. Such a situation would be an economic misfortune for both livestock producers and for the public.

"Fast exportation has not been realized that higher prices for meat animals, and hence for meat, have followed restricted production, after which the consumer again restricted consumption."

Cattle prices in May, the statement added, were "down near the level prevailing when the United States entered the war," but in June the advancing price in Chicago of $14.85 for native beef steers "was, with exception of June, 1916, the highest June average on record."

INTERESTING REMINISCENCES

Of Great John Hunt Morgan As Told By Surviving Member of Thg Famous Organization

Fifty-eight years ago Gen. John H. Morgan was in Carlisle with his command at the head of his com-mand of valiant men, and issued the following proclamation of which the writer has a copy printed on glass:

KENTUCKIANS

I come to liberate you from the despotism of a tyrannical faction and to restore to the native state free men, fearless of your oppressors. Every man who has been forced into the army avenging arms. My brave army is composed entirely of Kentucky volunteers and marauders. Believe it not; I am rapidly augmenting my force by infusion to this foul aspersion. We have no conscripts in our ranks. Kentucky is to destroy private property, but guarantee absolute protection to all who are not in arms against us. We asked to meet only the hireling legions of Yankee despotism. The sons and brothers of the South are upon you. Join, gallant fellows, the band of hazing to our standard. Our armies are rapidly augmenting by your desertion. Then greet them with willing hands and welcome hearts. Remember there are-where is already with you a force that will punish every recreant to his sacred vow. Strike for your Oaths your fires, God and your native land.

John H. Morgan,
Brigadier Gen. C. S. A.
Georgetown, Ky., July 15, 1862.

One year later he crossed the Ohio river with two thousand men and rode twenty-five days and night, through Indiana and Ohio, fighting and capturing men, attempting to cross the Ohio at Buffington Island, but never having been in the night the regiment he commanded was captured by the command of Gen. Shackelford. Morgan's command at a given point, which he did not know, Morgan men captured them, and made them all prisoners, among them being under the command of Col. Cicero Coleman of the 8th Kentucky, who was in command of the regiment and went to the jail to see Morgan's men captured and they were put in the same cell. Coleman said to Morgan, "I am agreed as to the meaning and sufficiency of the Democratic platform as adopted by the Convention of the United States in 1864 and will vote for the ticket from top to bottom."

Morgan's cousin was to guard the prisoners in the jail and Coleman was to be guarded by Col. Moore. "They are to be guarded by Col. Moore. "They are going on our rear now I am sorry you have what you will need. You will be a prisoner for a long time." It is reported that Morgan in exchange prisoners for he said he would rather have them than to fight them. Col. Moore at a reunion of Morgan's Men in Lexington, Ky., several years ago told how Coleman was guarded by Col. Moore and how he was called to the jail to see Morgan, Lexington grocer, on the grave of an unknown soldier.

Farmers should spray their orchards immediately for the second brood of codling moth worms. The worms are the worms found in the apples in the fall. Spraying, as a statement is given out by the College of Agriculture, is recommended as a spray of 3 pounds of powdered arsenate of lead to 50 gallons of water. Bordeaux is declared preferable.

ESTIMATE OF ROAD FUND IS $2,750,000

Frankfort, Ky., July 18—Joe Rogers, State Highway Engineer, estimates that the road fund for this year will amount to $2,750,000, of which $1,700,000 will be derived from the tax on motor horse power, $450,000 from the tax on gallon gasoline and $600,000 from the 3 cent road tax. These figures show that the motorists of the State will pay $2,150,000 of the road fund, the remainder being derived from the ad valorem tax.

The plans of the Highway Commission for the next year call for the maintenance of about 3,000 miles of the State roads. The commission will ask the legislature when assigned by the last session of the General Assembly to make a further study of the matter and it is thought domestic troubles was the cause of the suicide. During the war Prince Joachim was a Captain in the army and served on three fronts. He was severely wounded in action and never fully recovered from his injuries.
