CONVENTION INSTRUCTS FOR GOVERNOR COX

At the closing session of the Democratic State Convention which adjourned at Louisville at 1 o'clock Wednesday morning it voted to send the entire Kentucky delegation of 26 persons to the Democratic National Convention at San Francisco and instructed for Governor James M. Cox, of Ohio, for the Democratic Presidential nomination.

County Attorney Foster V. Cox, of this city, was elected State Central Committeeman from the Ninth District, and C. W. Mathers, of the county, was elected delegate to the National Convention.

Johnson N. Camden, of Versailles, was elected Democratic National committeman from Kentucky.

Eight delegates including three women, to the National Convention, each with a half vote, were elected at the closing session of the convention. The eight delegates from the State-at-large include United States Senator A. O. Stanley and J. C. W. Beckham, Congressman Alben W. Barkley and Ben Johnson, Desha Breckenridge, editor of the Lexington Herald, Miss Laura Clay, of Lexington, Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, of Frankfort, and Mrs. Nora Lane, of Fort Thomas.

Judge Charles A. Dawson, of Hardyesburg, was re-elected chairman of the State Central and Executive Committee.

Major Scott Bullitt was elected temporary chairman of the convention without opposition. Major Bullitt criticised the Republican party and spoke disparagingly of its chances in November. He praised Governor Cox and Senator Stanley.

Below is a report of the Ninth District Convention:

At the Ninth district convention a resolution recommending Johnson N. Camden for National Committeeman was adopted.

W. J. Fields was indorsed for permanent chairman of the State convention.

Three district delegates to the national convention, who will split the vote, were named as follows: C. W. Mathers, of Nicholas county; Sandy F. Reid, Mason county, and E. L. Diamond, of Lawrence county. Alternates are Dan B. Caudill and C. D. Patterson.

On motion of Gordon Baker, of Mason county, voting by the delegation to the national convention for Cox as long as his name is before the convention was urged.

Miss Laura Clay, of Madison county, was recommended as one of the delegates-at-large to the national convention on motion by Miss Alice Lloyd.

District committeemen for the State convention were selected as follows: Paul Hoffin, Fleming county; Crelon Tisic; C. A. Bach, Breathitt county; Resolutions: Gordon Baker, Mason county, Organization.

For State Central Committeeman, Foster Cox, of Nicholas county, was named. Dr. J. D. Whittaker, Morgan county, was made State Executive Committeeman.

R. D. Kinnard, of Carter county was named elector, and Floyd Arnett, Morgan county, was chosen vice chairman to the convention.

George B. Martin, of Boyd county, was recommended for State Central and Executive Committees from the State-at-large.

"If you can have her as your guest of honor;

"Or, go back home and give her pleasure. Use at some time and in some way that will not necessitate anyone working for your convenience. We cannot honor mother while we dishonor God.

"Or, write her a letter of praise and gratitude; send a gift with it, or at least a memory flower. No one is too busy to send a letter home.

"Do something to show your mother that she is Queen of the May in your heart.

"If she be not living, perhaps you can plan on her grave the white flowers of love and fidelity, not as a moral sentiment, but in glad recognition that she was 'the best mother that ever lived.'

"On Mother's Day wear a white flower, or your mother's favorite. Give one to someone else to wear, and remember the sick or unfortunate in hospitals, homes, or prisons, or someone else with whom a little joy goes a long way. It may set the blood to tingling in the veins of those you think have no heart or that think you have none.

"While any white flower may be worn, the white carnation is the special Mother's Day flower. Its whiteness stands for purity; its form, beauty; its fragrance, love; its wide field of growth, charity; its lasting qualities, faithfulness." Morning worship, 10:45 a. m. The Most Welcome Tire That Ever Came to Market

Men Who Appreciate Superlative Values Prefer The Brunswick

In every great tire factory, the chief question is: "How much can we give for the money?" And the product depends on the policy adopted.

Every man who has become acquainted with Brunswick Tires knows that Brunswick standards are again evident. This famous concern—noted as a leader in every line it entered since 1845—has once more proved that its policy is right.

A perfect tire is simply a matter of knowledge and standards and skill. No secrets nor patents prevent making an ideal tire.

But standards come first. For in tire making there is vast room for skimping, for subtle economies, for hidden shortcomings. Makers without the highest standards don't build high-grade tires.

The Brunswick organization of tire makers includes a brilliant staff of technical experts. Not a man among them has spent less than 20 years in handling rubber.

Each is a master of his craft. And the new ideas they bring to the attention of Brunswick directors receive sincere consideration.

Every proved betterment is adopted unanimously.

The Brunswick Tire is a combination of acknowledged features plus Brunswick standards of manufacture.

The result is a super-tire, the like of which you have never known before. The kind of a tire you will gladly join in welcoming.

Yet Brunswicks cost no more than like-type tires.

Try ONE Brunswick. We promise a surprise. And we feel certain that you will want ALL Brunswicks.

Then good tires will have a new meaning to you.

When Allen Dayton left the train at Roseville his first move was toward a little store bearing beneath the sign "Peter Warne, Real Estate."

"I've come here on a flying trip," he announced, "and if you are able to sell some property for me I'll stay a week."

"That is my line of business," responded Warne, shrewdly sizing up the straightforward client. "Property has had been more active of late than the years of the world history. Step right this way, Mr. Dayton."

"Here's the property," produced Dayton from a pocket. "I've owned it a few months and don't know much about it. Is the water rights, and a good many plants are likely to go up in time."

"That is my name," agreed the other, touched with pride. "I recently read from the executors that the property is worth perhaps thirty thousand dollars. I am willing to take something less if I can dispose of it quickly and for ready cash, for I am offered an opportunity to engage in a promising business partnership if I can invest twenty thousand dollars.

A crafty expression crossed Warne's face as he quickly figured the interest. That a young and inquisitive client, a stranger, and a flying visit proposed upon.

"The best," he suggested, "suppose you let me drive you over and take a look at the property. You should you will be disappointed."

Dayton was indeed disappointed when the rattling old buggy driven by Warne reached a huge, dreary pond.

"There's your land," spoke the latter, pointing out a desolate stretch of low and swampy. Beyond in both directions was high land, and the special expanse made a deplorable showing in contrast.

"You talk of thirty thousand dollars," spoke Allen, "I'll give twenty years and after a fortune spent in improvements. Not a dollar more."

At the spite and ambition suddenly deserted Warne. He stood roefully viewing the property.

"I should say it was just as you say," he admitted gloomily. "I've been a fool to keep business life on a more modest work than I had thought out. You've got my address. See what you can get for the property. By the way there is no train o'clock for several hours. I understand."

"That's correct," nodded Warne. "You could make it by motor car in quite easy and striking a trolley," and he drove off with Dayton, who carefully proceeded on foot. He had gone about a mile when, spotting a wealth rabbit, he paused to view an old oaks trees, directing a pitcher of water to another, who was reading to him an official-looking document.

"I'm sorry to disturb, Mr. Marsh," spoke the latter, "but I've got only two fifty dollars and there's a July seven months yet. You can't pay it so I shall have to levy on your rig."

"Not that," spoke the owner of our months if you do!" sobbed Gabriel Marsh, and with trembling hands he held up to the official.

"Levy on your surplus rent," he said, "and this old man's present face is good enough for me. Write out your receipt, I will pay the taxes."

Then he told his daughter romeo," plended Marsh, who he had overcome with great arrows of gratitude and joy. "Peter is Mabel, and I want to see her soon and thank the stranger who has saved me from ruin. I can't get you have an old man's fervent blessing. There he Mabel now!" and the speaker ran down the road to meet a young girl. Dayton sought safety to escape the overwhelming gratefulness of father and daughter. For the latter, modest, refined, sincere, he formed an immediate attraction, drawn closer as he heard the story of their struggle to keep the wolf from the door.

He did not readily forget Mabel when he returned to the city. More than once he felt drawn to go again to Roseville, and was glad of an excuse when one day he received a letter from Warne, stating that he had found a purchaser of the river tract for four thousand dollars. Dayton was getting ready to go to Roseville when Mabel Marsh entered his office.

"I have come on a strange mission, Mr. Dayton," spoke the young girl. "We learned of your errand to Roseville after you had gone, and father overheard a conversation between Warne and his client. Warne told the latter that they had a plan to get the property from you. Warne never allowed you the land you really are worth a fortune. Father is not a man of money. Instead, he had planned to get your property from you for a song and sell it for ten times as much.

"I have come to close our deal for the forty thousand dollars," announced Dayton to Warne the following day. "Have you completed the papers?"

"That I offered," corrected Warne.

"That was as I would give only a quitclaim deed, for I understand the river has showed me some land there to me at all. Mr. Marsh has kindly consented to show me my rightful holdings, and I fancy you will be no more interested in its sale."

And then Allen Dayton, with a glad heart on his sheild my service to the Marsh home—and Mabel!

Hunting Alaskan Bear.

The Alaskan bears have been hunted with perfect safety from boats among the coastal islands, and they are also comparatively easy to kill along the streams where they come in the fall to catch salmon. In this hunting the bruin line is weak, and pots trots from a safe distance. But at that time of the year the fur is not prime. The true sportsman goes up into the mountains in the early spring, still-hunts his bear and kills him often at close quarters—unless he gets killed himself.

A CRY IN THE NIGHT

By GENEVIEVE ULMAR

Seated before the blazing grate in his lonely study, Philip Dorrance, surrounded in palatial comfort, was the picture of misery. Despite the appearing of flames, chilled his whole body.

He had known this misery in his life but once before, and that was when he lost his mother. Then he was only a boy, and he had not learned to control his emotions. But now he was a man, and he had to take himself in hand and control his feelings. He had to be a friend of one who could never be a friend to him again. He had to be a wife to Dorothy Lee, and he had to do it without her knowing. He had to do it without even suspecting that he was doing it
