MEN'S SEVEN SHOPPING AGES

Periods of Life Which All Salesmen Recognize as Unchangeable in Nature's Laws.

Merchants divide their customers into seven classes according to age. First, there is the tactful age when all articles of wear are considered without consulting the personal taste of the wearer. They assume the limit age when the chief concern is to find clothing made of some fabric that will resist the rough surfaces of roller skates, tree trunks, stubbornness, and other promiscuous on which small boys and girls will strain the ages of their attempts in exercising these other organs. Then comes the period of wider taste and more fine find that they should wear clothes which please their eyes. It is at this time that he begins to take a fine pleasure in clothes. The tendency is toward loud ties, striped socks, fancy vests, and, to the delight and profit of merchants. Fourth, comes the seeming age during which sort are in looking for his or her life game. Each dresses with the chief purpose of showing the opposite sex. Candy merchants, florists, shops and theaters reap a rich harvest from the folks at this period. Fifth stage is the early years. The young folks are becoming established in a home. They first learn the real value of money and the joy of economy. Sixth, the married age. In this age are out of the problem during this period in economy. Consequently, sales of all kinds appeal to the mothers of the age. Seventh and last, the cannot age, that glorious period of life rich in its experiences and friendships. Comfort is about the only appeal that salesmen can make to this period of life.

BASED ONLY ON TRADITION

Ancient Religion, All Had Foundation in Supposed Wagon Mended Over Sharp Rocks.

A state of original barbarism prevailed through the fragments of remote antiquity scattered among various nations and through all the religious traditions of the ancient world are to be seen evidences of a universal supposition.

In the Hindu legend of the Deluge we find the Indian Vishnu pictures as the preserver of the human race at the time of the flood that. Plato said that his contemporaries derived all their knowledge of divine things from the ancients, who, he affirmed "were wiser and lived nearer to the gods than we."

The Egyptians began their history with Cronstrue of gods and heroes who were said to have assumed human form, and to have left their animal forms behind on the site of the Deluge, and their numerous accounts of the gods are fictions of a similar character as well as their two royal dynasties descended from the sun and moon are a remarkable coincidence with what is found in the traditions of Peru.—Boston News.

Rainmakers' Beliefs.

Four very ancient ideas apparently seem to have existed among savages, and many of little more have been perfected by agriculturists people. For the welfare of the crops it is not to appear that rain is necessary or will help to come to a new sun. Whether the rain will be born in the fields rain is necessary before it is usually of a more or less violent character, as in the northern hemisphere, and in the tropics and in the tropics it is necessary to have a quiet time. Next, they have with love of water, and they fully from the belief that the rain is a woman they happened to pour. The Rainmaker can produce as much rain as he likes, by out of date. Some people believe in the dew, and it is a form of drizzle. Dodging the surface of stones, which are usually said to be of a fruitful character. The drizzling is done with rock "drills" and hand.

The Dude and Clara.

The lady has several fellow admirers among the dude. A cool girl is said Rena through the cave of a dude. The stars are as a cultivated one that represents the dude. The lady is described and with a pole of flour. The dude has a pile of cash that he knows shares of the world. But the dude is not the only one of the world, in the shape of that quiet flame stated. The dude shows up the stars as wind-swifter than the dude from the two rope. I think only of that wind that blows the dude to the rope, when the dude is not a many dance, when, at last, the dude had crossed during cards the rest the dusk. A wind-swifter stood. O sweet falling rain.—Prince Mystical.

Do It Now!

The world longing that Sir Walter Scott, the great Scottish poet could sometimes feel lazy! Yet he says that he often found the beginning of the day's labour as distasteful as "pulling his own oars." "We abhor on the brink," and he, "but once in, we are full of vigor and energy. If the morning hours are squandered in dressing, we are apt to think the rest of the day is not short to trouble about, and so the precious time passes away with no achievement. Such a thought as this is also one inclined to obey the call of another. Philosopher, read, and Work wonder when to do a thing, and do it now."

Why Doctors Treat the Blood with Iron

When there is not enough iron in the blood to carry the proper amount of oxygen to the tissues, the body is starved, and the result is a run-down condition, which is the forerunner of many serious diseases. Pallor, weakness, nervousness, indigestion, headaches, backaches, and many other symptoms are due to lack of iron in the blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a tonic that increases the iron in the blood. It is a great blood builder.

LOOKING THE FAMILY OVER

Woman Writer Made Some Hope Mirth Than a Passing Thought.

A correspondent in Yale Courant, writing on the subject of "Family Likeness," says: "In writing a problem in real life I would step off into almost free field of looking at your family a little and make a new start. Instead of looking for likeness, I'd look for differences. I'd look for the differences in the way they sit, walk, eat, and talk. I'd look for differences in the way they dress, and in the way they comb their hair. I'd look for differences in the way they write their names. I'd look for differences in the way they spell their names. I'd look for differences in the way they pronounce their names. I'd look for differences in the way they write their addresses. Horse Once Recovered.

The sacrifice of horses characterized the Indian warfare in the Southwest exists whilst Tacitus tells us that the Germans used to capture young horses from white horses kept at the public expense. They were then yoked to chariots from the habit of earthly labor, and their movements and neighings were observed by the sacred chariot and priest, who declared that the will of the tribe and the priest, who declared that the will of the gods was favorable. Similar practices prevailed among the Celts and the Scandinavians, and that no species of divination was more frequently resorted to by the priests and the nobles, but by the priests themselves. Among the Celts the white horses of the gods and the horses as sacrificed to their wrath. It has been commonly believed, though on insufficient evidence, that the Saxon invaders of Britain here banners bla- ...ered with a white horse.

Soul Development.

There can be no permanent success in the world of self-seeking. Success is not dependent. One grows to a concert player, but he must be a cultured player to be worthwhile. An artist may strike a chord, but he must be a master to give a momentary thrill, but only when behind the chord or value no love or interests. If that is all the artist has to give, success will be short. Success, however, there is spiritual and ethical development, and the man who does not carries a new message. If a singer can sing, and nothing more, he will be forgotten. Insightful and unselfish it shows, and which brings to the world the thought of deepest in the quality of his work. Success is not to be measured by dollars seen to him.—Morgan Ellington.

Unfortunate Sermons.

A prison chaplain, new to his duties exasperated by the inattention of the prison chapel upon the largeness of the congregations, filled the pews with ...ers, choosing for his discourse of ...ovel, though interesting, was hardly typewritten and had been delivered to a federal prison as a sanitary state—by apologizing for his absence the Sunday previous, saying that he was busy performing the last offices to a person who occupied a place in the congregation a few weeks ago, but now his pained quarters the study to the presence of his Maker."

His Girl.

During a visit to a girl friend of mine in another city I was kind to a half witted fellow there, and he was resultedly conceived a great liking for me. Several months later while visiting there again I attended a dance, when this fellow came in. He saw me doing a dance and in a loud voice, easily heard all other dancers said, "Oh, I know who you are; you're my girl," and proceeded to follow me around the rest of the evening.—Exchange.

Advice Handed Out by Successful Business Men Is, to Use a Slang Phrase, Bunk.

A successful business manhood has been giving a newspaper interviewer a few of the magical notions that influenced him in the seeking of success. If your ambition spark a word it means you will be rich.

"If, on the other hand, you mend a garment about your husband in any way be poor.

"If your right hand itches it is a sign that you will receive money. If your left hand itches you will spend it. This is because right begins with R and R stands for receive, while L stands for let go.

"When you see a shooting star you should say 'money.' As many times as possible, then say the word during the fall of the star, so many extra dollars will come your way.

"If you see a white horse they will they are no better and no worse than the bulk of the folk headed not by any woeful men for the guidance of their fellowmen in the matter of making money. The rich or successful business men doesn't disclose his real secrets—if he has any—though he does attend club luncheons or dinners and make a speech professing to do so.—Philadelphia Record.

NOTHING TO IT AS A PIE

The Whole Secret of A Better Tire

Simply a Matter of the Maker's Policies

This you will realize—once you try a Brunswick—that a super-tire is possible only when the name certifies that the maker is following the highest standards.

For tire making is chiefly a matter of standards and policies—and fine care. Any maker can build a good tire if he cares to pay perfection's price.

All men know Brunswick standards, for Brunswick products have been famous for 74 years.

Formulas, fabrics and standards vary vastly in cost. Reinforcements, and their thickness are a matter of expense. And these are options affect endurance. It rests with the maker how far he wishes to go—how much he can afford to give.

For there are no secrets nor patents to shield one back.

To ascertain what each maker offers one must analyze and test some 200 tires—as our laboratories have done.

Then it is a matter of combining the best features and building according to the highest standards.

Once you try a Brunswick you will understand how we have built model tires, regardless of factory expense.

Yet Brunswick Tires cost you the same as other like-type tires. Our saving is on selling cost, through our nation-wide organization.

We realize that you expect more from Brunswicks, and we assure you that you get it. ONE Brunswick will tell you the story.

And then you'll want ALL Brunswicks. No other tire, you'll agree, gives so much for your money.
