FARMERS DISCOVER CO-OPERATIVE HAULING OF PRODUCE PAYS WELL

Dismissing Harrow at Farmer's Gate—Harrow was Ordered by "Phone a Few Feet" From Farm to County Improvement Office—Will Will Be Placed Under the Same Time and Taker in Market.

A recently increasing number of farmers are looking toward the market for the solution of their transportation problems. In former years, the farmer would haul his produce to the market on his own horse-drawn wagon, but now he is turning to the county improvement office for a more efficient method.

The farmer's problem is a common one. He has a large amount of produce to haul to the market, and he is faced with the expense of fuel and the wear and tear on his own wagon. The county improvement office offers a solution in the form of a public haulage system.

The public haulage system is a service provided by the county improvement office. It consists of a fleet of motor trucks that haul the farmer's produce to the market for a fixed fee. This system is much more economical than the farmer's own wagon, and it saves the farmer a great deal of time and trouble.
