Coal Structure Being Studied

Bureau of Mines Conducting Microscopic Investigation at Pittsburgh Station.

OLD TESTS ARE UNRELIABLE

Re-charged Thresher, Research Chemist, Says Scientists of the Past Only Had a Vague Idea of the Composition of Coal.

Washington.—Investigation of the chemical structure of coal, which is being conducted by scientists in the fuel technologic laboratory of the bureau of mines at the Pittsburgh station, is the most important work ever undertaken by the government in the field of coal research, according to Dr. Thomas Thresher, chief chemist of the bureau of mines, who has charge of the investigations and the laboratory. Dr. Thresher has been in the government service for 20 years and has established under the bureau of mines the present fuel laboratory. He has been engaged in the study of coal for the greater part of his career. He is the author of a great many publications on the subject of coal and its constituents.

Dr. Thresher explained that the present investigations are for the purpose of finding out the exact composition of coal and the relation of its various constituents to each other. Heretofore, he said, the chemical analysis of coal has been made by the proximate method, which consists of determining the percentage of moisture, volatile matter, fixed carbon and ash. This method, he explained, was developed by Dr. Frank Clarke, chief chemist of the United States geological survey, and was adopted by the government chemists. It has been used for many years, but is now considered unsatisfactory.

WIFE TAKES HUSBANDS ADVICE

And Is Made Well Again by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Springfield, Mass.—"The doctor told my husband that I had to have an operation before I could get well, but I was a woman and couldn't leave my home and three children on account of my husband being away, so I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to see if it would not help me. After the first four months I could do my work as I had to do it all the time, was nervous and could eat hardly anything, but my husband was so encouraging to me to take the Vegetable Compound, which I did. Of my eight children the last one was the easiest birth of all and I was up in a few days. I have recommended it to my friends when I hear them complaining about their ills."—Mrs. M. NATALE, 72 Fremont St., Springfield, Mass.

When a woman has an unhappy home, and after reading Mrs. Natale's letter above, is sick and ailing, she should write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for advice. It is free and will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence. Many letters from sick women state they have been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after doctors had given them up. Why not you?
