Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Washington.—It is announced that all Americans remaining in Russia will have an opportunity to leave that country if they desire was offered by Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet representative at a conference with Walter L. Brown, assistant director of the American Relief Administration, regarding the question of American relief for famine-stricken Russia. This offer was made after the American representative had inquired what the Soviet Government's intentions were regarding the freeing of the Americans in Russia other than its men of American nationality, who have just been released from Soviet confinement and reached Reval, Esthonia.

It was understood that Director Brown had made it a condition of opening the Russian relief that all Americans in Russia receive a chance to leave that country. The six Americans released by Soviet authorities were Vincent Kilpatrick, Weston B. Perkins, William C. B. Richardson, Lt. Jo Mace and Russell Partridge. All are said to be fairly good health and appeared to be delighted with their freedom.

Paris.—George Harvey, United States Ambassador to Great Britain, and America's representative on the Allied Supreme Council, agreed to present to the council full details of the Russian relief plans of Herbert Hoover, head of the American Relief Administration, in order to facilitate the immediate relief of certain districts in Russia.

Maxim Litvinoff, Russian Soviet President, has telegraphed a request to Premier Lloyd George, British newspaper Humanite announces. The message, it is said, asks Premier Lloyd George to use his influence with the Allied governments to bring about the immediate recognition of the Soviet government and the establishment of commercial relations between Russia and other countries.

The offers, directors and individual members of the Baltimore city council in connection with the charges of making a monopoly through a combination or agreement are $2 prices.
