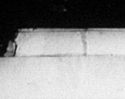
WOMEN WHO CANNOT WORK

Read Mrs. Corley's Letter and Benefit by Her Experience



Edmond, S.C.—"I was run down with nervousness and female weakness. I suffered every month, was not able to do any work and tried a doctor's medicine but got no relief. I saw your medicine advertised in a little book that was thrown in my door and got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before I had used one bottle I could see a change for the better. I continued its use for three months and can truthfully say it has done me more for me than any doctor. I have not paid enough to tell you how much it has done for me and for my family. I cannot praise it too highly. I will say, 'Thank you.'"—Mrs. ELEANOR C. CORLEY, care of A. P. Corley, Edmond, S. C.

Ability to stand the strain of work is the privilege of the strong and healthy. Thousands of weak, nervous, run-down and sickly women struggling with their daily rounds of household duties, with backaches, headaches, nervousness and almost every movement brings a new pain, will find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which for over forty years has been publishing convincing proof to women that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help them just as surely as it did Mrs. Corley!

Discriminating.

At a church tawn social, at which some of the ramdies consisted of home-made fudge given by the ladies, a certain little girl, after having difficulty in getting her teeth through a piece of candy to complete her purchase. She mournfully wailed to her mother to decide, inquired if she would like some—"of this nice, white fudge?" The little girl gave one look at it, and said: "Oh, no, I believe my mamma made that."

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND SWAMP-ROOT

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable success sustained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

It is a physician's prescription.

Swamp-Root is a scientific, yet mild and prompt aid to kidneys, liver and bladder in the work taxed beyond their strength.

Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. It is sold by all druggists on its merit and it should help you. No other kidney medicine has so many friends.

Start treating your kidneys and start treatment at once.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation and free vou Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure to mention this paper.—Advertisement.

"LETS BE FRIENDS!"

Scorpion—Found Carlos Wilmerton Dale, or "Bill Dale," as he is known to his friends, in eastern Tennessee, and, after a brief conference with a mysterious stranger, determined to "help Dale" Lilliefoot, typical mountaineer, is the first big character of the story. Dale has been a student at Wilmerton's home. Mormond Hall, and is the only son of the old feud enemy of the Lilliefoots. Because of the killing of his brother, David Lilliefoot, the aged son, owner of rich coal deposits, has sworn vengeance on the Dales. Dale's mother was the sister of Duke Dale, leader of the Dale clan. Dale is chosen by the mysterious stranger to lead the Dales in the war against the Lilliefoots. Dale's father, Jim Dale, is chosen to be the first shot. Dale, however, is unable to shoot Lilliefoot, as he is the Mormond son of the old feud enemy. Lilliefoot is killed by a friend and companion, Wilmerton. The fight stops and Dale is taken to the Lilliefoot home, where he is nursed back to health by Lilliefoot's daughter, Jessica. Dale's father admits to Dale that he killed Lilliefoot. Dale tells Jessica of his feelings and goes home to his own people. Wilmerton, Dale's friend, is wounded. Henderson Goff, a coal baron, is killed.

He didn't want a reply, but turned away with Ky Bell. He knew that Dale had been chosen by the clan to have his fortune told—really, to get his character. He was curious to see him, but her inborn sport of how to keep a secret held him back. Besides, he was glad that she was not present with him when Dale was told a couple of cribs in the future.

Dale said Major Bradley and John Merriart of that which Goff had to do him at the gate. The major supplemented by telling that he got to the man; it couldn't possibly do and there was not a chance that he would be wanted in the assembly of Goffs to-night.

In Dale went.

Goff was already there, waiting. He was sitting on a stone on the Mormond side of the river, facing the gate. When he saw Dale approaching, he stood up and put his hand on the handle of his knife.

Dale made no move to get for that reason. He stopped and said:

"Hello, Goff!" Dale began. "If your folks didn't tell you, I'm Dale."

But no shyster price is going to interfere with me."

Goff frowned unevenly.

"I don't know how you are, Mr. Dale. You don't know the business of skinning folks as well as I do, evidently. Thousands of men have gone busted trying to do that. I'm not going to be one of them. There's a big chance, too, that I'll be one of the corpses that is put on the surface. You'd better take a chance on that yourself, and get out of the country. I'll give you five thousand dollars cash."

Dale shook his head. "I will have to be sweeter than that, y'know, if you get me to leave the country."

Goff frowned unevenly.

"I don't know how you are, Mr. Dale. You don't know the business of skinning folks as well as I do, evidently. Thousands of men have gone busted trying to do that. I'm not going to be one of them. There's a big chance, too, that I'll be one of the corpses that is put on the surface. You'd better take a chance on that yourself, and get out of the country. I'll give you five thousand dollars cash."

Dale shook his head. "I will have to be sweeter than that, y'know, if you get me to leave the country."

Dale laughed a low, queer laugh that was not pleasant to hear. "It seems to me you've missed your call in life, Goff," he said. "You'd be a million you'd make in melodrama! You don't know me, and you don't know Jessica to be just your natural self. And I'm not going to leave the country. I'm on the square with the Mormonds, and I'm going to stay there, see that?"

The corners of the shyster coal man's mouth came down.

"Well, I guess one that sticks to her stuff. Everybody has their price, Dale. You've got yours, and I'll give it to you. Five thousand dollars cash, if you'll persuade Jessica to marry me and get out of the country, and nobody'll ever know you got a relation to the Goffs. And the end is worth, that ten thousand dollars."

Dale was of the type that goes pale with anger, and he was pale now. He clenched his hands.

"You've insulted me, but that and get away with it. Goff," he clipped. "We're going to fight, Goff, and I'm going to put a kinking on you that you'll be talking your own words in hell for a month. Get ready!"

Goff took his right hand quickly to a knife sheath at his belt. Dale leaped. Goff ran his right hand quickly to a knife sheath at his belt. Dale leaped. He made a stab-based automatic pistol, and he landed downward toward Bill Dale.

"No easy, friend," Goff said very suspiciously. "There's no use in fighting now. I want the rest, that's all. I'll give it to you. I'll give it to you. I'll give you as much trouble that you'll get well in the end. I'll get in court as another match. It will take me a year to get you out. I'll give you as much trouble that you'll get well in the end. I'll get in court as another match. It will take me a year to get you out. There's a lot of them, too, and they'll get well in the end. Be reasonable. Well, I can't waste time in dickering with you. What do you say?"

"I say," said Dale, and his voice was low and perfect, except you've only one important detail. You've forgotten, I say that you are a coward and a scoundrel, and that you haven't got the insides in you to fight me a fair man's fight. If you'll only pocket that pistol and put your hands down half an acre you can settle them with your body."

The other turned red, then white, and his face became livid. His eyes leaked him lovely. His chin became the hard hard knock, and he began to raise the wicked-looking pistol as though he meant to shoot.

Then there was the sound of a breaking twig behind him, and a voice drawled out:

"Drop it, Mister—drop the thing little gun, or the middle o' Tennessee is you yellow livered."

It was the broadsmiler, Ky Bell. He had crawled, Goff dropped the pistol, then slowly advanced hand and took up the weapon that the broadsmiler had covered. He looked it into the river.

"Now, you've beaten—right! a rag away from here," he ordered. "Get out! Get out before I kill you!"

Goff went away fugitly.

Ky Bell turned to Dale and had anything that would make you vain to Dale.

"Mr. Dale," he said, "I will have to ask you to accompany me to Fire.

CHAPTER IX.

A Signal Victory.

The men at the Mormond gate were waiting at the gate when Dale and Ky Bell arrived. The moonshiners returned to the rabin. Dale was the first to speak. He told briefly of that which had taken place at the river, and ended by saying that the last of it Ky Bell straightened out.

"I be doubtpondt of I hadn't he would have killed me. I'm sure he couldn't caught at" men got around him to kill me. I'm sure he couldn't. He dropped the rewards you'd have given for me, Ky Bell. I'm sure he couldn't. "Cause men can't be bought. I'm a gentleman, and I'm a right to be a right to be a right to be
