TO THE COUNTRY MERCHANTS OF AMERICA

Sears, Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, and the other mail order houses are in the doldrums.

Their sales have been cut down enormously, because the country folks generally are not spending any more money than is necessary.

They are starting to buy again. Are you going to let them resume spending their big money with the mail order houses, or are you going out for a share of it yourself? You can get it, you give your people as good prices. Why don't you get the business?

Simply because you don't compete with the mail order catalogue. Simply because you don't appreciate the catalogues with your advertising in the local newspapers.

As a matter of fact, the catalogues are real newspapers. When a man has to buy clothes, canned beans, a fiddle, a kitchen stove, or a bunch of dry goods, the pictures and prices of those articles of merchandise are attractive news to him, no matter whether they appear in a mail order catalogue or in a newspaper. Sears - Roebuck and Montgomery Ward fill their catalogues with pictures, descriptions and prices of merchandise that American humanity needs, and wants to buy, and so American humanity sends for their catalogue, and spends its cash when it is printed only once every six months.

Take advantage of the weekly catalogue that you have at your own door. Advertise big, and interestingly and appealingly every week.

Make your ad doubly gripping with smart pictures; those that do what draws in the mail order catalogue, just exactly as the pictures of blooming plants draws the amateur gardener. Keen he gets his eyes to a seed house catalogue. Forget the utter foolishness that picture take up valuable print space; they pay you back with compounded interest, compound interest every single one of them.

Put in brief descriptions and at the end of fifty-two weeks you will have presented a catalogue to your neighboring folks that will compete successfully with those coming, pounded by foreign mail order houses.

This is the way to back up your local editor's "Trade at Home" appeals.

The cost? Oh, that's nothing to what will flow back to you, good people.—American Press, New York City.

MRS. STEWART DECLARES ILLITERACY IS DOOMED

"Illiteracy is on the run and the Federal census of 1930 should not record one American as unable to read and write," Mrs. Cora Stewart, of Frankfort, chairman of the Illiteracy commission of the National Educational Association, said in an address at the Illiteracy Conference of Southern States, in Birmingham, Ala.

She asserts that the 100,000,000 educated people in the United States "could redeem the 2,000,000 illiterates before the next census day would."

"The public school teachers of America are on the war path," she said, "and will never reveal until they have swept the fee-adult illiteracy from the land."

A GOOD FRIEND

A good friend stands by you when in need. Carlisle people tell how Doan's Kidney Pills have stood the test. John W. Myers, retired blacksmith of Tarentum Ave., Sharpsburg, Pa., declares eight years ago and again confirms the story. Could you ask for more convincing testimony?

"My ears hardly ever without Doan's Kidney Pills in our home," says Mr. Myers. They are fine. My kidneys were weak and the action was irregular. The secretions contained sediment and my back ached. I heard about Doan's Kidney Pills and used them. They did the work and I have had no trouble since." (Statement given January 18, 1912.)

On November 15, 1920 Mr. Myers said: "The statement I gave recommending Doan's Kidney Pills holds good. I use Doan's now and then when I need a kidney tonic and they always bring the best results. They tone up my system wherever I use them."

A FEW FACTS ABOUT THE SOUTH

(Massachusetts Record)

The South is the nation's greatest asset. It has about one-third of the total area and population of the United States. It has three-quarters of the coast line of the country and produces more than nine-tenths of the cotton raised in the United States and about 60 per cent of the world's supply. The South produces about three-fourths of the world's naval stores and the bulk of the world's phosphates.

The South has about three-fourths of the coking coal area of the country, and its total coal area is twice as great as that of all Europe, and five times as great as that of France excluding Russia. The extent of its iron ore will be in keeping with the magnitude of its coal supply.

The South has water-power resources sufficient to develop approximately 9,000,000, horse-power.

In addition to its enormous agricultural output, the South has raw materials for the widest diversity of manufacturing. The South is now producing:

About 100 per cent of the country's turpentine and rosin.

About 30 per cent of the country's sulphur.

About 29 per cent of the country's phosphate rock.

About 57 per cent of the country's petroleum.

About 51 per cent of the country's mica.

About 50 per cent of the country's quartz.

About 49 per cent of the country's umber.

About 46 per cent of the country's asbestos.

About 33 per cent of the country's pyrites.

About 33 per cent of the country's talc and soapstone.

About 18 per cent of the country's cement.

About 18 per cent of the country's stone.

Surely a Genius.

A man in a small town had a son who returned home from dental college and opened an office for practice. At the end of a week the neighbors told one another that "practice" was behind the proper word; and one of them even went so far as to suggest to the young dentist's feed father that a man should be of a mechanical turn of mind in order to be a successful dentist.

"Why," exclaimed the father, "Jim is a genius! One day last summer I saw him trying to cultivate the orchard, and a cultivator tooth caught under a root and uncouple the boy took his pocket knife and tried to cut the root off. But finding it slow work, he hammered his knife into the root with a rock and so broke the blade. Then a bright thought came to him. Getting a stick he whipped the stone until the cultivator broke and he was free."—Youth's Companion.

Fear of Old Ideals.

The future is a blank on which every man may write his own name as large as he likes; the past I find already covered with illegible scribbles, such as Plato, Isaiah, Shakespeare, Michael Angelo, Napoleon. I can make the future as narrow as my self; the past is obliged to be as broad and universal as humanity, and the upshot of this modern attitude is really this: That our most new ideals become the dare not attempt old ideals. They look forward with enthusiasm, because they are afraid to look back.—G. K. Chesterton.

FIND PLEASURE IN PAINTING

Almost Every One Has at Some Time of Life Been Fond of Handling Bright Colors.

Nearly everybody likes to paint. We like to feel the paint flow from the brush and to see the dull, dirty surface we are painting covered with a smooth, brightly colored coating. It is not only hands beauty to it, but protects it as well against the destructive influences of the weather and the contact of anything that may be thrown at it. Perhaps the most universal pleasure found in the whole universal trait, commonly attributed to us through the centuries by our savage forefathers, who mixed pigment with fat or grease and smeared their bodies and faces with it. Paint is no modern invention; even white lead was known and used by the Romans. A New York Sun writer. The story is told of the wife of the famous Greek general, Xenophon, who had the habit of smearing white lead on her face and wearing high heels until her husband told her he thought her pretty enough as she was without the application of artificial aids to beauty.

There is a reference traced back as far as the Seventh century A. D., which is the first recorded instance of the use of paint to cover a wooden carriage, very much in the manner prevalent today. There are earlier historical references to the use of paint, but these refer more to sizes, such as glue, and special paints such as those made with oil and used by the Egyptians in coloring their glue to paint their ships of war. The Egyptians used glue sizes and paints. The masonry ranks in numerous buildings of the world probably forms the earliest examples of varnished articles in use.

USED "DOG-OIL" AS MEDICINE

Fearful and Wonderful Combination Recommended for the Treatment of Gunshot Wounds.

The great surgeon, Ambroise Pare, wrote the following about the year 1545:

"When I was at Turin I found a surgeon famed exceedingly for his treatment of gunshot wounds, into whose favor I found a way to insinuate myself, that I might have the recipe of his balm as he called it, wherewith he dressed those wounds. And he made me pay my court to him for two years, before I could possibly get it from him, and that by many denials to try his gifts and presents, he gave it me at last, which was this, to boil down, in oil of lilies, young whelps just born, and entirely unfeathered, with turpentine. Then was I joyful and my heart made merry, for I had learned his remedy."

And the London Pharmacopoeia for the year 1650 contained a recipe for "dog oil," with the following ingredients: "Boiled oil, two puppy dogs newly whelped, earthworms washed in white wine and cypress turpentine and spirit of wine."—Exchange.

New England's "Amphitheatre."

One of the oddest mannered trees to be found in the New England countryside is the wayfaring tree, or hobble bush. The name is especially applicable, for the trees sprawls out a branch till it touches the ground, then takes root right from the branch. The limbs of the hobblebush are most effective, scores of lovely whaels grow side by side, giving stunning masses of color. White is the spring blossoming, almost as soon as the snow has melted. Then these blossoms are brilliant green, and are very large. In autumn they turn a gorgeous garnet red, while where the lovely spring blossoms were appear clusters of apple-shaped berries, blackish crimson in hue. So you see the hobblebush, despite its queer name and strange habits, is really very beautiful almost the whole year round.—Christian Science Monitor.

Proceedings Against Beetles.

The "Memoires de la Societe Royal Arcdemique de Savoie" give a curious account of proceedings taken against beetles in 1445 and 1487. They had committed great havoc in the vines of Julian vineyards. Having listened to counsel on either side, the judge suggested that the vinegrowers should write to the defendants and tell them they could live without trespassing on the vineyards; otherwise he advised that the vineyards should be respected by the beetles under certain penalties. The beetles' lawyer protested that the land was barren, and the court appointed assessors to survey it. They reported favorably, and the court rendered a legal quibble and so it went that what the upshot was is not known, owing to the destruction of the document.

Unwitting Criticism.

There are some well-intentioned persons who write letters to the press of certain town with pales, displaying large sheet placards, on which are printed texts and religious exhorta tions.

The other afternoon one of them took for his pitch a place just in front of a certain shop and his placard ran the affrighting query:

"Are you prepared to meet your God?"

Underneath and in a line with it ran the potato mill announcement: "We fry in the best beef dripping."—London Answers.

MUST LET THE WORLD KNOW

The Many Expert Others to Be Conversant With Their Secret Hopes and Aspirations.

The surest person in the world is the one who knows what he really wants.

And if you don't know yourself, how can you expect others to know?

Two young people went off and got married in the most casual, Bohemian fashion, informing nobody.

One of their friends asked them around to dinner now and then, accepting the invitation in the equally casual fashion.

They did not, years later, that they were deeply in love, and that they had missed some bride-and-groom dinners given for them.

But how could anyone have known that?

If independence is your aim and an adventurous life are what you really want, don't expect people to declare it from the fact that you are married and have several small children.

If you are a professional person, and have decided early in your career that you must make money above all things don't be hurt and surprised when you are forty if you are not widely known as a distinguished scientific expert.

And if you have given up your life to research, don't be surprised if you haven't made a lot of money.

Be sure you know what you're doing. Now you are dismayed that it did not go into your heart and understand what it was that you really wanted.

Do not pity prize cats pin their faith on the old idea that the world will honor or love best a path to their doors.—Marion McLeod, in The Digest.

ADAM AND EVE GO SHOPPING

Highly Imaginative Picture of Our First Parents Strolling Through a Department Store.

(By Associated Charities.)

Let us imagine our arrangements contemplating an 11 o'clock stroll down Fifth avenue. Accompanied by Ellen Burns Sherman writes in the Christian Science Monitor.

Can we not hear the tense ejaculations of our first mother before the mountains of unknown things, wools, satins, silks, chiffons, velvets, enamelines, piled ceiling-high before her? Even Adam, who has been accustomed as a matter of things, might well drop his jaw in astonishment at the display for sons in same dainty form of a fig leaf. Dear, innocent Eve! Only in an out of soundings. I can find myself in sympathy with the poor woman. It would be much prettier than fig leaves for a start.

Differ Concerning Appetites.

An appetition in dazzling white appeared above the altar at Dromore on Sunday, according to priests of the Benedictine order right from the founder. The idea is credited to Belmont abbey. One of the priests was dressed in white and at the altar when the apparition appeared in Ivory white to the saving knowledge. He are also reported to have seen the apparition. The priest who was at the ceremony said: "Then coming I was in the grounds closing my breviary, I saw a figure of a woman, dressed in his ordinary habit. Another time I heard footsteps behind me and on someone passing a hand over my heart. Starting up, I saw the apparition, just as the returned spirit of a dead priest," added the bishop of Dromore. "I forget to be frank with you. Of course you know that I've been considering you and Mandy both for general manager of the mine department, and I'm mind telling you that the odds were in favor of you, Tom. You are a bit young, you know, still somewhat inexperienced, however—" A whimsical expression passed over his face. "I've had orders from higher up, but that little bunch of wood announcement ruined the race. I found it over there; when I got home last night there was a magazine cover. Is his own eyes—"you couldn't know, but you've got every mind."

The upshot of it is that: She insists that a man of such breeding, time and thoughtfulness is just the man for that vacant position. Another thing. Your uncle made a great hit with her. Shake again, boy, you graduate, you! And, now, you're going run home and tell Mrs. Lucas and the rest of them. And, say, I needn't report for your new job until next Monday."

In a daze Jack left the office.

"The exchange rate of atonement and yellow roses," he was thinking, "is just about equal in this case, I should say."

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

Difficulties Confronting Those Who Would Learn to Play.

Music is a universal language, but it is not universally understood. Many people who would like to learn to play a musical instrument are deterred by the difficulties confronting them. Some of these difficulties are real, others are imaginary
