Novel Bible Exhibition

At the South Kensington Natural History museum, in London, there is a special exhibit of the plants, birds and animals mentioned in the Bible, which is in exchange. From the descriptive handbook pertaining to this exhibit it appears that the common owl is not mentioned in the Old Testament, having probably been introduced into Palestine after the Roman conquest; that the "unicorn" of the Old Testament was probably the now extinct Syrian aurochs; that the "taves" mentioned in the New Testament were darnel grasses, whose seeds are poisonous, and that the "rose" of the Bible was probably the narcissus.

Finishing Slate.

Wooden slats, even if they are made of very good wood, can be very effectively treated with a reliable floor paint. Two coats are necessary, and the second coat with sandpaper to make a smooth, velvety surface. The slats can then be applied evenly with shellac, care being taken to follow the grain of the wood. A coat of shellac finishes application, allowing a few days' drying between coats, they will recommend to the best of polished oak and be most effective. BOVINE TUBERCULOSIS YIELDS TO ACTIVE TESTING CAMPAIGN

According a Herd as Free From Tuberculosis Increases Its Value to the Owner and Community.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

For many years after the agitation regarding bovine tuberculosis began there were very few people who entertained the belief that it would ultimately be eradicated. Now, after many years of effort, first cooperative tests now giving great promise of success in the work, and the number of persons who entertain the belief that this disease of live stock will be conquered.

Tuberculosis May Be Banished.

This change of attitude has been brought about largely by the efforts of the bureau of animal industry of the United States department of agriculture, co-operating with the various state officials, which have been so successful that within a period of four years, during which the work has been directed toward ultimate elimination, the number of counties in which it has been attacked as being free from the disease has increased from twelve areas in different states scattered practically in every section of the country.

Effective tests of cattle in one of the herds in Hancock county, Ind., have been made available, and the owner is now in a position to be able to have to pay a city license fee, it was announced by Mayor Hoover. He has called a meeting of the city officials, merchants, bankers and other traffic men to discuss the proposition and to see if the business can be put on industrially free to city people, for the benefit of the city.

Tuberculosis of cattle is one of the few diseases which can be entirely eradicated from a herd. Cattle are the only animals which are known to be affected with tuberculosis to any great extent. Hogs are subject to it, but the disease is much easier to get the supply of necessary milk. This classification with a country-wide program against tuberculosis. The work is progressing in the country are of the utmost importance, and the results of the plan of free regressing nothing more than the benefits.

Insurance Feature Appeals.

There are more than three-fourths of cattle in the country north nearly practically free from tuberculosis. This aspect of the problem, the insurance feature, appeals to the owner of pure-bred cattle and to the owner of grade cattle as a necessary measure for the protection of his herd.

At the present time various state and federal officials are engaged in testing 250,000 cattle a month and eliminating those that are found to be tuberculous, but it is expected that in the next few years this number will be greatly augmented monthly by the combined forces of the state and federal governments. The great goal is the eradication of the disease, and the plague, for the advantage of the cattle industry, and for the benefit of the human race. When the work is completed, it will be a matter of history that the United States led in cleaning up individual herds and then in cleaning up the country as a whole.

Any herd in which a tuberculous animal is found is quarantined by the federal authorities, and the owner is given full compensation for the animal destroyed. The state authorities also co-operate in this work by paying a certain proportion of the loss. The owner of the herd is also required to clean and disinfect the premises and to follow other directions given by the federal and state officials.

BURY DEAD ANIMALS DEEP IN QUICKLIME

Many Outbreaks of Infectious Diseases Preventable.

Hog Cholera Is Most Dreaded Scourge of Swine Herds—Serum Production—Old Metal Wheel Use.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

All farm animals that die from unknown causes should be promptly buried deep in quicklime. Many outbreaks of infectious diseases of unknown origin to carnivores which were allowed to consume the carcasses. Dogs should not be fed the offal from animals that have lots to which other animals had access. Specialists in the bureau of animal industry of the United States department of Agriculture advises every farmer to bury promptly deep in quicklime all animals that die from unknown causes. Many outbreaks of infectious diseases of unknown origin to carnivores which were allowed to consume the carcasses. Dogs should not be fed the offal from animals that have died of infectious diseases. They think their plan is a good one, and they will put it into effect.

Hogs, next to poultry, are usually the cheapest meat that the farmer has on the average farm, and as hog cholera is the most dreaded scourge which prospects the porker population, it is the duty of every owner of swine to do everything from unknown causes should be buried deep in quicklime. WATER FOR COWS IN WINTER

If Possible It Should Be 15 or 20 Degrees Above Freezing Point—Steam Boiler Is Handy.

During the winter, when cows are stabled constantly, it is important that they should be watered two or three times a day. Many dairymen prefer to have cows to keep water from freezing in the stalls, but this is not always possible. Cows will drink more water if it is warm, but a trifle. If a boiler is used to warm the water, it should be heated to wash and sterilize the milking pails, and is certainly and cheaply be used to warm the drinking water.

AVOID ROUP BY VENTILATION

Good Plan Not to Use Muslin Curtains at Any Time Except to Keep Out Rain and Snow.

Roup is largely a question of ventilation, and properly ventilated chicken houses rarely contain chickens that have roup. In the openings in the walls of the poultry house, whether they be glass or muslin curtains, there should be plenty of the year except to keep out snow and rain.—C. H. Vickell, Ohio State University.

Getting Winter Eggs.

To be most profitable a flock must produce eggs the year around, in winter for an egg will command a better price than in summer eggs, but when they are high in price the greatest gains there is a handsome profit in them.

Green Feed Essential.

Green feed is especially important in the ration for all ages of poultry, but is not necessary for the hens, but is beneficial for growing stock and for the breeders.

Clean Nests.

Clean nests and litter in the laying house are one of the largest single factors affecting egg prices during the fall, winter and spring months.

Save Heifer Calves.

Save all heifer calves from the best producing cows in the herd for replacing the unprofitable cows.

Starvation Insurance.

Save the soil. It is our one insurance against future starvation.

TOBACCO GROWERS SEEK NEW LAWS

KENTUCKY SOLONS GATHER IN SESSION AT FRANKFORT—TAX SIFTING CHIEF ISSUE

Efforts to Amend the Constitution of the State Meeting With Rebuff—Income Tax Graded in Steps of $10,000 is Being Proposed.

Frankfort.—The new year came in here with a rush of politicians and the general legislative hangers-on in preparation for the opening of the new members of the Kentucky State Legislature. There are numerous conferences but outside of selection of minor employees all is quiet. Speaker Bell is reported to be settled definitely.

All efforts early comers were directed toward harmony within the Democratic ranks, based on the belief that their chief concern was to prevent any action that might lead toward a party split or toward exerting legislation that might reflect upon the administration platform two years hence.

Most of the early arrivals were members of the House, few Senators arriving in advance of the convening of the first tide of legislation will be the bill to amend the constitution to permit the taxation of intangibles in the hands of Representative John E. Swain, of Shelby county. The bill, being couches being put on it at a conference with Judge O'Rear, it is reported. The measure already has the necessary number of signatures that the Legislature will act promptly upon it.

Income Tax Proposed

Increasing in the future, however, the Tax Commission thinks it has found a way to get considerable of the farmers—that the real source of much needed revenue. A farmer is paying too much, and that taxes all property alike. The Tax Commission are proposing an income tax, to be applied to all businesses with incomes of more than $10,000 a year. The bill is graded in steps of $10,000 each, beginning with $1,000 and ending with $50,000 and over. Under circumstances as present, the Tax Commission will be acknowledgment of his mistake in the matter, and that he will be sorry for having done so. The parties was represented by Attorneys Berta Martin L. Galvin, of Covington, and Judge Charles Kinkead, of the Campbell circuit court, but he declines to have anything to say in the case. He has become known as a man of few words and has put his case upon the true identity. When he was asked if he would not like to see his prison card, "Hell for a certainty," was the reply. "I am not in connection with a penalties fighter."

Frankfort.—The first report of Kentucky Educational Commission received by the 1920 General Assembly shows there were in the state 10,000 white and 2,000 colored children of school age. Of this number 7,000 white and 1,000 colored children are not attending school. Of the 12,000 white teachers 3,000 are not high school graduates and 1,000 colored teachers are not high school graduates. The report says that 32 per cent of all the elementary teachers of Kentucky are failing to meet the high school training and 21 per cent have not even gone beyond the elementary school.

Frankfort.—The Court of Appeals in the opinion rendered in the case of the action of the Boston Circuit Court in the condemnation proceedings by the capital of the Hatfield Chattaroy feud, has affirmed the action of the lower court in the matter of compelling the court to set the damages at $1,000 each, of which the company was guilty and which was held by the jury in order to show which was true and therefore the jury rendered a verdict for the company.

Frankfort.—There are at present approximately 1,000 persons in the Kentucky State Reformatory, according to statement made by Ed. Howard Morris in making a strength report to Governor Morrow. Governor Morris is taking instructed the officers of each jail in Kentucky to report the names of all of the officers and enlisted men, having in fact that they be sent to the state reformatory. Governor Morris is being recruited while others are being discharged. Governor Morris is also in the present to way just how many men are in the service of the Kentucky National Guard but hopes to have the matter cleared up in the near future.

Mt. Sterling.—Mrs. Mary Chatterton, 70, and J. A. Scott, chairman of the State Tax Commission, returned from Washington, D. C., where they had been attending the annual meeting of bank and members of Congress regarding a measure which will be introduced which might exempt national bank stock from taxation. The measure was resulted in Attorney General Daugherty's office here and it is thought an agreement will be reached which will be satisfactory to all concerned and on the same basis as stock of state banks.

Oil Production

The State of Kentucky produced 4,781,546 barrels of oil during the year 1921, according to figures given out by Joseph D. Jillson, director of the Kentucky Geological Survey. Production of the State from Pool was estimated by Mr. Jillson at about 1,000,000 barrels. This represents decrease for 1922 from 1921 production in his estimation that the Big Sinking pool of Lee County, heretofore the most important of the state, has shown a certain decline in production during 1921, which is likely to fall in production further during the coming year, and that the new pools of Johnson, Magoffin, Lawrence and Warren counties reached their zenith of production in the year 1921, Mr. Jillson's figures show that the Big Sinking pool's production for the year of 1921 amounted to 4,124,007 barrels as against 2,000,000 it had dropped to 1,000,000 barrels.

The total known petroleum production from 1860 to 1921 amounted to 44,536,300 barrels, and the total value of the same is $46,291,752. Jillson estimates that the total known petroleum production from 1922 to 1960 will amount to 94,000,000 barrels. The value of which is placed at $100,000,000.

In January of this year the Johnson county pool produced 11,136 barrels, the Magoffin County wells, 19,815 barrels; the Lawrence county pools, 22,474 barrels, and the Warren county pools, 21,232 barrels.

In November of this year the Johnson county pool production had increased to 21,736; the Magoffin County production to 20,766; the Lawrence county production to 29,765, and the Warren county pool to 27,100 barrels.

The total crude oil production for the year 1921 was produced 11,136 barrels.

January, 741,078; February, 680,518; March, 760,749; April, 770,531; May, 826,156; June, 725,603; July, 715,550; August, 641,102; September, 709,350; October, 714,275; November, 705,176; December, [illegible] estimated to be a monthly average of 731,000 barrels.

To Sift State Case

The investigation of the State case by the General Assembly is progressing slowly, but it is understood that the committee has been over nineteen hundred pages of testimony, and that a number of witnesses will be called before the committee. Members under circumstances so positive that the committee has decided to postpone the taking of testimony for the present. The committee will prepare a report and submit it to the General Assembly when it convenes in January.

A new set of letter Bill called an income tax bill, but not a graduated income tax, but one seemed to be satisfactory to the Democratic members of the House. The bill is paying too much, and that taxes all property alike. The Tax Commission are proposing an income tax, to be applied to all businesses with incomes of more than $10,000 a year. The bill is graded in steps of $10,000 each, beginning with $1,000 and ending with $50,000 and over. Frankfort.—The first report of Kentucky Educational Commission received by the 1920 General Assembly shows there were in the state 10,000 white and 2,000 colored children of school age. Of this number 7,000 white and 1,000 colored children are not attending school. Of the 12,000 white teachers 3,000 are not high school graduates and 1,000 colored teachers are not high school graduates. The report says that 32 per cent of all the elementary teachers of Kentucky are failing to meet the high school training and 21 per cent have not even gone beyond the elementary school.

Frankfort.—The Court of Appeals in the opinion rendered in the case of the action of the Boston Circuit Court in the condemnation proceedings by the capital of the Hatfield Chattaroy feud, has affirmed the action of the lower court in the matter of compelling the court to set the damages at $1,000 each, of which the company was guilty and which was held by the jury in order to show which was true and therefore the jury rendered a verdict for the company.

Lexington.—The bank tax suit brought by Nelle Breathitt, widow of the late Hon. Bill Price Heller, against the state board of assessment and taxation, and Auditor of Public Accounts Edward C. Reed, and Assistant Attorney General Morris in making a strength report to Governor Morrow. Governor Morris is taking instructed the officers of each jail in Kentucky to report the names of all of the officers and enlisted men, having in fact that they be sent to the state reformatory. Governor Morris is being recruited while others are being discharged. Governor Morris is also in the present to way just how many men are in the service of the Kentucky National Guard but hopes to have the matter cleared up in the near future.

Mt. Sterling.—Mrs. Mary Chatterton, 70, and J. A. Scott, chairman of the State Tax Commission, returned from Washington, D. C., where they had been attending the annual meeting of bank and members of Congress regarding a measure which will be introduced which might exempt national bank stock from taxation. The measure was resulted in Attorney General Daugherty's office here and it is thought an agreement will be reached which will be satisfactory to all concerned and on the same basis as stock of state banks.

Change in Tax Laws

The State Tax Commission has been in session here for the purpose of the tax laws which it will recommend to the legislature. The tax laws are unsatisfactory to all taxing agencies, and the commission will attempt to remedy the defects in the present laws. It is reported that the commission will recommend the repeal of the present law requiring it to sell the property of delinquent taxpayers to the state and 15 cents to individuals. The commission is also in favor of repealing the law requiring it to sell the property of delinquent taxpayers to the state and 15 cents to individuals. The commission is also in favor of repealing the law requiring it to sell the property of delinquent taxpayers to the state and 15 cents to individuals. The commission is also in favor of repealing the law requiring it to sell the property of delinquent taxpayers to the state and 15 cents to individuals.

Treaty Arrived in Time

National guard troops arrived in Louisville in time to end the riot, and of time, according to a written report made by Col. Jacob Bickel, Jacob Norris from Frankfort, and Adjutant General Henry Berry, to Governor Morrow. Colonel Bickel met the Louisville Herald and was pronounced to be the greatest success. Following the National hanging place and with the exception of a few disorders there is no doubt reason why the legislators should not be back in their homes.

School Legislation

Members of the legislative committee of the Kentucky Educational Association met here with Governor Morrow and Superintendent of Public Instruction Barksdale Hamlett to discuss legislative measures to come before the General Assembly. In addition to the members of the legislative committee, Mr. Hamlett invited a number of prominent educationists from all parts of the state to attend the conference.

Collars on Capes and Coats.

Collars on evening capes and coats are puffy affairs of fur, velvet or silk, and are sometimes evolved from the same materials. Again, they may be of the fur that trims the garment, others, though, are of velvet and for neven together.

Train for Evening Fresh.

A black evening frock has a great train consisting of a panel attached at the shoulders, right into two parts, each ending in a long point finished with a jet comet on the front and caught in at the waist with a jet girdle.

Would Like to Join Him.

"You're busy," I said, noticing it, as I forced in the doctor's hand. "I'll just take a little stroll about the village until this affair is over." "Yes, gosh," came the restful voice from the bed, "and if you meet a guy with a freckle-faced kid set gingerly fingering a session jaw, "If said I could go along with ya."—Chicago Tribune.

Unselfishness of Helen

By JANE OSBORN

"Your Bill." It's bad enough to be laid up in the hospital with a strained knee, a sprained ankle and a dislocated shoulder blade, but to get a letter from the doctor's wife that begins "Your Bill" is more than I can stand. Of course I'll pay the bill, but I'll be darned if I'll pay it without telling Helen Nellie-Dean a piece of my mind. Helen Nellie-Dean, indeed! I've known her ever since she was a baby and I've always called her Nellie—Nellie Dean. I'll say I will pay the bill, and I'll say it with a vengeance, too. I'll tell her that little
