LOSS OF CONTROLS FATAL

Survivor Makes Report to Captain Doyle—Hallmer Gas Bag Would Have Averted Disaster.

Washington, Feb. 21.—Admiral D. A. Moffett, chief of the bureau of aeronautics of the Navy department, received a telephone message shortly after the accident to the Roma from Capt. S. H. R. Doyle, in command of the naval air station at Hampton Roads. This message said Captain Doyle had just talked with a survivor of the Roma.

The survivor, whose name was not given, told Captain Doyle that the accident had been caused by the vertical controls having been carried away. The airship then was fast in high tension wire and was ignited. The fire that the majority was burned might have escaped.

As high officials, he refused to be quoted, observed that if helium gas had been employed the inflation the accident would have been averted.

OLD MASTERS OF PROSE

Go here and set thy breast in pitch Or thou shalt with pup thy wine, for thy work please God. All those be thy clothes white, and oil from thy head fall not. Perfectly use fifth the wife that thou lovest, all the days of the life of thine unsubstantial that been given to thee under sun, in all the time of thy vanity; for this is thy part in life, and in thy travail that thou travailest under sun.—Ecclesiastes's version of Ecclesiastes 9.

THE NOBLEST CLASSIC

The translation of the Bible is the remarkable and interesting event in the history of translations; it is as a lustrous monument of the age, the nation, the language; it is, properly speaking, less a translation than an original, having most of the merit of the former as to style, and all the superiority of the latter as to truth. It is the noblest, best, most finished classic of the English tongue.—T. B. Grimke.

TEXT BOOK BILL PASSED BY HOUSE

COUNTY BOARDS OF EDUCATION TO BE GIVEN AUTHORITY IN CHOICE

Certification By Counties of School Teachers Who Have Not Had a High School Training Authorized—Illiterates And Blind Measure Passed By Senate.

Frankfort—Passage of two measures affecting education in the state and a number of Senate resolutions and minor House bills featured the session of the House of Representatives. One of the educational bills provides that county boards of education shall select the text books for the schools in the county from a list of ten text books to be selected by the State Book Commission and the other allows the certification by examination of school teachers who have not had at least a high school training.

The text book bill was originally introduced by R. E. Adams, of Kenton County, but the Committee on Education, to which it was referred, made amendments and reported substitutes which were adopted. The bill, sponsored on the floor, Charges and explained the changes of the influence of the large text book companies, which, it is said, shall be placed with dealers on contract.

The bill requires that publishers shall furnish to the state book commission a list of text books for which they will be willing to contract to furnish exchange books for a period of not less than four years. The list is to be furnished by the publishers on or before January 1 of the year in which the contract is to be made. The bill provides that the contracts shall be sign
