Vessels are the Messengers, the Servants and the Builders of Trade
 By E. O. PRINSTER, U. S. Shipping Board Commissioner

"These are the messengers, the servants and the builders of trade. They are almost as essential to the development of a nation as the land and the air. They are the messengers of the world, and they are the builders of the world. They are the messengers of the world, and they are the builders of the world. They are the messengers of the world, and they are the builders of the world."

The development of a nation is almost entirely dependent upon the character of its shipping. The shipping is the messenger of the world, and it is the builder of the world. The shipping is the messenger of the world, and it is the builder of the world. The shipping is the messenger of the world, and it is the builder of the world.
