What Does Your Family Think of You?

The real test of a man's religion is how he acts at home. Are you kind, amiable and sweet in your family circle? Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ," is the teaching of Christianity.

We can follow Christ's teachings without going to church, but we thus deprive ourselves many opportunities to help others. Help the church exert the influence in the community that it ought. Link your effort with the energies of those who are trying to build up the best things in town. Come to church Sunday.

A Town's Solid Citizens

Church membership does not insure a man's honesty, integrity or kind-heartedness. But in every town the people who are relied upon to support the best interests of the community are usually those who are found in the church of their choice regularly on Sunday morning.

Go to Church Every Sunday

Why not emulate Christ's example and yourself go to church —not only this Sunday, but every Sunday. Bring your children to Sunday school. Learn what the Bible teaches about your relation to others. It will mean a happier household and a pleasanter life. The people of our town who make the greatest contribution to the culture of the community go to church.

A QUEEN ANNE

By ANNIE COLE, R. N.

© 1922, by Northern Newspaper Syndicate.

Connie had caught the "society bug"—there was no doubt about it, in Joe's mind. And she had caught it from his own brother's wife, which made it a great deal worse. Every evening when Joe came home, he was met by Connie's praises of some of Martha—her ability to design and embroider her own gowns, run an apartment on $— a week, attend what clubs, entertain, and keep a maid—all on her husband's moderate salary.

"We're going to visit there this week end, Joe," said Connie, enthusiastically, "so don't make any engagements for tomorrow. Oh, dear, don't you think we could afford an apartment if we had this place?"

"I thought if we wanted to mortgage my salary for the rest of our lives we could afford an apartment if we had this place?" and you know what a horror I have of debt, Connie. I have eyes very reproachful."

"Well, we're going there for Saturday anyhow. I think Martha's awfully clever and I'm going to try to be just like her."

Joe grunted, and betook himself to bed.

The Saturday night dinner at his brother Jim's was apparently a success, though Joe did not seem to enjoy it. In the morning he couldn't get up. In terror Connie called a doctor, who pronounced the trouble pneumonia, forbade meeting the patient, and advised a trained nurse.

Martha was very penitent, plans were made, the nurse engaged, and Connie donned a bungalow apron, prepared for a long siege. Everything went smoothly until Monday morning. Debora Martin at the breakfast table, Connie tipped on her bedroom door and, not going to get up this morning," her sister-in-law informed her. "Tell him breakfast is hot."

The door soon rang, and Connie answered it. A dapper little man stood in the hallway.

"Mrs. Barker?"

"Yes."

"I am from Leon's, the furrier's. We want you should pay something on this bill for a table coat, or we will start to sue you."

"Oh—you mean the other Mrs. Barker," said Connie. "She's sick in bed."

"Well, I'll call next week," he said, and bowed himself away.

"Ice!" roared the ice man. "Twenty cents, please. I am ordered to collect cash in this house, every time! Thank you."

Another man appeared in the doorway, as if by magic.

"Who are you?" demanded Connie.

"I'm the milkman. I'm collecting a dollar a week on this old bill—she owes me just four dollars and I'm going to collect it to the cluttered kitchen and subsided on the utility maid.

"Mary, how will the nurse and I have lunch if these duplos are not soon washed?"

"I don't know, and I don't care," that young person exploded. "When Mrs Barker's here alone we don't have lunch. I've got the three lodgers' rooms to look after—"

"Lodgers!" gasped Connie, bewildered.

"Sure," explained Mary, and then she added maliciously: "D'yes think she could live in a swell apartment if somebody didn't help her pay the rent?"

So this was how Martha managed! An agonizing row to borrow from Peter to pay Paul, accompanied by sleepless eyes and frenzied nerves. The nurse, on the way to the kitchen for a glass of water, said:

"Your husband seems very much better today, Mrs. Barker—I don't think you'll need me tomorrow."

"Oh, impossible!"

"Well, we'll see what Dr. Kendall says tonight."

The doctor's verdict was a pleasant surprise.

"Enough" he observed, "they fortunate young man. What we call an acute attack, clears up suddenly, for apparently no reason. You can dismiss your nurse, and take your husband home in a taxi tomorrow—if you wish."

If he wished! She could hardly wait till they had gone to tell Joe how glad she'd be to get home and to hug him, regardless of germs.

"Connie," he said, a little weakly, from the bed, "I was talking to Jim Saturday night, and he says there's an apartment downstairs to rent if you think we could manage—"

"Not on your life!" exploded his wife, emphatically. "My day fat is good enough for me! I've heard on expensive somehow that Joe fits this place, Joe. It's this: 'Mary a Queen Anne front hides a Mary Ann back.' I'm going to take you home!"

Tired

"I was weak and run-down," writes Mrs. Ruth Burnett, of Dalton, Ga. "I was thin and had feel tired, all the time. I didn't rest well. I wasn't ever hungry. I knew, by this, I needed a tonic, and as there is none better than—

CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

". . . I began using Cardui," continued Mrs. Burnett, "after my first bottle, I slept better and ate better. I took four bottles. Now I'm well, and just fine, eat and sleep, my skin is clear and I have gained and sure feel that Cardui is the best tonic ever made."

Thousands of other women have found Cardui just as Mrs. Burnett did. It should help you.

In a Cose Like That.

A family that moved recently to a new home on Prospect avenue, well out south, was visited at once by a bustling young merchant. He presented himself at the kitchen, a little fellow, one dirty hand continually taking a pencil from behind an ear and then replacing it.

"Want to take milk from us?" he inquired, sure that everyone knew "ma." The housewife said she didn't mind. Out came a scrubby pad of paper, which was handed over, with a request:

"Sign here."

"When can we have milk?" the housewife inquired, with an eye for working plans on the next meal.

"Why, I'll have to see the purchasing department before I can tell you definitely," was the evasive reply, "but I'll come around morning and evening, 'cause that's the only time our cows give it."—Kansas City Star.

Troubles.

If you cannot get rid of your troubles you can get help enough to make them seem as if you were living under their tyranny. They are a never-ending threat for the near future. Fear them, and they will crush you. Look on and even from them, and they will overtake you. Face them, and they will cower and even vanish.

No one ever yet rid himself of an enemy by hating him. Hatred only brings him from the outer life to the inner, and gives him lodging and power to work greater mischief than ever.

It is possible to be so intent on good manners that we attain nothing else. Even manners need a heart to make them of much real worth, and sincerity, however polite, it still insincere.

A Liberal Education.

Next to the study of language the study of good literature should be natural. To read good books—the best books to read first, not always with the attendant forthrightness which Mr. Rinkin makes, but slowly and carefully, getting the full force of every sentence, and the full significance of every page and every book. Illustration—this is a great aid to understanding. Let the author's thought work out in the reader's mind with the action of the strongest and brightest minds; with the choicest and most telling forms of utterance; and this familiarity is itself a liberal education.—Washington Gladden.
