POOLERS WILL REVIVE MORE THAN 3,000 POOLERS

E. T. Fuller, writing in the February issue of "My Old Kentucky Home" Magazine gives the following comprehensive outline of the tobacco situation in Kentucky:

I figure the burley crop will be about 260,000 acres, and about 220,000,000 pounds for the 1922 crop, at $30.20 per 100 pounds will bring $66,440,000. The burley tobacco and white burley will bring about $16,800,000 more, making a total of $83,240,000 for the burley tobacco crop, almost far ahead of any other crop or combination of the State.

I think there will be 112,000,000 in the Pool, 100,000,000 pounds of burley, other grades and resolved will be taken off. The average price will be around 30 cents. If other years are as it has been, selling will average around 35 cents. Some will sell for 50 cents and some for 20 cents, but there will be about 112,000,000 pounds at an average $35.2. The other 100,000,000 pounds of the pool bring $7.25 per pound. This is a wonderful showing for the pool. After deductions and other expenses are taken out, the growers will get about $40 for the acre—$2,240. Everybody will appreciate more and better stock, better seed, better soil, better methods, better crops, better stock and better homes; have been made with average crops.

The difference in farms at the end of the pool will be that there will be about two hundred families the more than there are now, or looking at it another way, there will be about two hundred less farms. Some of the present farms will be cut up into small tracts, and some will be added to other farms.

On the 1921 tobacco crop average price on burley, Fayette County, Indiana, few counties in Ohio, Virginia and Tennessee, the average price for unstripped primers and lugs was 12.5 cents per lb. The average price for unstripped leaves was $20.00 on 120,000,000 — $12.50 per hundred pounds. The average price of the pool being 2.5 cents per lb. The average price for unstripped leaves compared with the average price of the 1921 crop with similar grades, was from 1920 crop $12.50 per hundred, $12.28 per hundred. Average of unstripped leaves 1921 crop $7.50 per 100 pounds, 1920 crop $29.34 per hundred.

The average price received $7.66 per hundred pounds for the 1921 crop, and we would have received if there had been a pool, but there were only 225,000,000 pounds raised and the supply was short. The 1920 crop was 400,000,000 pounds and sold at 14.6 cents per lb. The 1919 crop was 500,000,000 pounds and sold at 22.5 cents per lb. The value of the crop will amount to $66,000,000 for the 1922 crop. The 1921 crop will amount to $42,000,000. The 1920 crop will amount to $58,000,000. The 1919 crop will amount to $112,500,000. Two hundred and thirty millions of the two hundred and thirty-five millions of the 1919 crop will amount to $46,000,000 more than the 1921 crop. The 1920 crop will amount to $16,000,000 more than the 1921 crop. The 1919 crop will amount to $66,500,000 more than the 1921 crop. The 1920 crop will amount to $12,000,000 more than the 1919 crop. The 1919 crop will bring $66,500,000 more than the 1921 crop. The 1920 crop will bring $12,000,000 more than the 1919 crop. The 1919 crop will bring $66,500,000 more than the 1921 crop. The 1920 crop will bring $12,000,000 more than the 1919 crop.

COUNTRY CORRESPONDENTS CAN HELP AGRICULTURE

In a recent issue of the American Agriculturist, Professor Thomas H. J. Batchelor, of the Iowa State College, gives some pointers to country correspondents in newspaper-dom. It followed out, would be interesting and helpful to the farmers of Nicholas county. Mercurite's articles are as follows:

Country correspondents can render a service to agriculture second to no other agency in the country. Sympathy to the neighborhood items of personal items, which in all rightly be left out, but the writer calls attention to a vast field of exploitation, which can be done without any extra effort and which is the part of the ordinary correspondent.

Every farmer is interested, and especially this section, and anything of interest to the farmer is of interest to the correspondent. It is a wonderful field for exploitation. Every farmer in the neighborhood is interested in the success of agriculture in the community, and any farming interest is of interest to the correspondent. Not only is it of interest to him, but in giving the people in the community information about farming he is helping the farmer. Every community has a few farmers who are leaders in thought. Some of the correspondents help to give this a trial and see how much interest will be taken in the articles about farming in their correspondence. The chief difficulty will be to get the farmers to write the correspondence, every one would read it.

SLANG OF "GOOD OLD DAYS"

Great-Grandfather Enlightens Fine Points of Meaning of Some Terms of Long Ago.

"It's a good job!" barked the dapper young man.

"It's a good job!" echoed his grandfather, who had overheard the remark.

"Yes," answered the old man, "that's a good job! I remember when that was slang. I thought it was mighty fine slang, too. Used to say it myself. Now I'm glad to hear it's out of date. Slang's all right in its place, but that place is not in the mouth of a young man. Slang is the mark of a shallow mind. Slang is the refuge of the man who has no command of English for her major subject and no time to learn it. Slang is the mark of a lazy pleasing personality. Slang is the mark of a fool. Slang is the mark of a man who is not to be taken seriously. Slang is the mark of a man who is not to be taken seriously. Slang is the mark of a man who is not to be taken seriously
