What Is The Coal Situation Going To Be This Winter?

ANSWER—If we have no mine or railway troubles,
If the mines have plenty of cars,
If the railroads are able to handle the heavy freight traffic they usually have in the late fall,
If we do not have a severe WINTER,
If general winter conditions are different from recent years.

THEN—There will be no coal shortage.

BUT

If conditions are the same as they have been in recent years we may reasonably expect a shortage of coal during the winter. You can help prevent a car shortage and consequent coal shortage, also render a distinct service to yourself and community by BUYING NOW! At present we are able to furnish the highest grade of GENUINE JELLICO RED ASH, Elkhorn and Hazard coals at the most reasonable prices. Each different coal is handled in a bin to itself and you get the coal you buy. It will pay you to look our coals over for we are sure we can give you the coal best suited for the purpose you intend its use for the least money.

W. F. TUNE, Prop.

The Fordell plan allowed another plan for candy, but it was so easy Nettie to decide upon the variety. Its liability had to be considered, as well as cost. Furthermore, the more expensive, the higher the prize, and the more valuable the box of candy. Lettie pondered and down before the long counter of heaped-up candies came to the conclusion which would be most prized. Undeniably they represented the best values. The obliget would please greater numbers, but plain mixed would savvy most; less equally and therefore give longer entertainment to the consumer. Ultimately chocolate nougat was on plain's tiered.

The other purchasers required little selection and were speedily made. They consisted of a basket of plain, good paper for one diner; two packages of marshmallows, one for each of the remaining guests; and a stick of pink-and-white candy, one end. The latter would help decorate the cake and also serve as a gift for Enid.

Trotting all these treasures into Mrs. Fordell had been merely an attentive bit of background, but in the course of a few minutes she was called upon to take an active stand. It proved to be no simple matter to get Miss Lettie out of the latter's house, and once she had been in the purchases on her lap for the ride home, it would be extremely problematic to get her out at all. Miss Lettie was not a fussy person, but now that her responsibility was over and four cash customers had turned a fascinating eye upon tables and counters of alluring delicacies, she might endure if forced to meet society with a frosty or indifferent face. But Mrs. Fordell, who had started this luncheon party with the intention of getting Miss Lettie safely home, was not to be balked by any such trifle as a mere social error. She had invited the spinster to meet Mrs. Fordell's well known, hospitality, and meet Mrs. Fordell's well known, hospitality, and meet Mrs. Fordell's well known, hospitality, and
