Mrs. John T. Moose

Cambridge, Ohio—"Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery did me more good than any other medicine I have ever taken. I had become all run-down, was so weak I could scarcely walk. I had no appetite, could not sleep and felt very much alone, and had a lasting cough, which annoyed me. I was a physical wreck when I began taking the 'Discovery.' Soon after I began using the medicine conditions put me on my feet; my cough stopped, I could eat well and felt well and strong. It gave me such wonderful help that I feel it my duty to write and tell others who are ailing as I was."—Mrs. John T. Moose, 37 Steubenville Ave.

It Depends.

Doctor (Optimist) says that people are in better health when they are well dressed than they look their best. Brush high and inhale more freely. Nevertheless, a woman would rather look worse when dressed than better when undressed. Which only goes to show that the better they are dressed the more they look like a million dollars.

A NEW GALE

SYNOPSIS—Striking gold in Arizona, Jim Cleve's party prospectors, forms a partnership with an unknown man whom he later learns is Lassiter, a notorious outlaw. A split among Cleve's men and Lassiter's gang follows. Lassiter and Cleve's party separate. Taking refuge from a storm in a cave, Cleve finds Lassiter wounded, but not dead, and decides to care for him. Lassiter, on recovering consciousness, tells Cleve of a rich mine of gold, and persuades him to go with him to the place. Meanwhile, Andrew Jackson Stone, Mormon bishop of Snake Gorge, Utah, determines to send his son Metcalfe to Arizona, to look after his interests in the Lassiter mine. Metcalfe, Stone's favorite son, is a wild, reckless youth. Arriving at Snake Gorge, Metcalfe meets Naomi Wood, Stone's ward. A mule colt from Naomi's herd has been stolen by Metcalfe. He leaves Mormon town and Naomi behind him. Metcalfe, Lassiter and Cleve meet at Jim Lash, settler in valley at a spring. Lassiter tells Metcalfe of the location of the mine. Metcalfe and Lassiter ride to Buckhorn Ranch, Lassiter's home, where Metcalfe's wife and sweetheart, Isobel Burton, flash, with Lassiter's wife, Ruth. Lassiter, Metcalfe and Isobel ride to Cleve's camp, finding the cause of his being a prospector a misunderstanding with his former partner.

CHAPTER V

A Duel.

When Metcalfe threw that night he was up early, and, after a hasty breakfast, he saddled and led out one of the horses. He was in a hurry to get away from Snake Gorge, and intended to waylay Naomi and soon fell to thinking of her.

It was right when he awoke, but strange brightness and keenness of mind seemed likewise upon him. He was not sleepy, but he felt as though he needed to sit down and think exactly, and then he had to make an effort to keep his mind on what he wanted to do. He was a man of reckless face. She gave him one really good look, and then her eyes fell, and she half averted, and the hand had it away with flaming color. Metcalfe was not, surely, ashamed, and Naomi, with that strange, speaking flash of eyes remained to haunt and torment Gale. It was indescribable, and provocative of thoughts that he believed were still without words.

"Hello, Dick! Good News and Bad!"

It dawned upon him that for the first time in his life he had had cool eyes and had not lost her eyebrow. It was a strange, disturbing thought, and he could not fathom it.

Next day Dick believed he was well enough to resume his journey, but Mrs. Fielding would not permit him to do so. She was kind, motherly, sympathetic, and she was always coming in with something to his comfort, yet Dick felt that the Fieldings were manifesting a curiosity about him that was not to be satisfied by his answers to their questions. He was thankful when Mrs. Fielding left him alone for a while, for then he could rest and ponder over his acute situation. Mrs. Fielding would not permit him to do anything around the house, and Dick, to discover what he could do, asked Jim for some chores. Jim gave him a few, and Dick found them hard work, but he stuck to them. He
