A TEMPER GONG

SYNOPSIS—Living in a hotel, Fredrica Fenfield becomes acquainted with Peter Fenfield, who is manager of an apartment house. Fredrica calls him "Uncle" and "Pud." Her fiance is derived from being a "Northeastern" boy. Peter is a widower who has a daughter, Ellen, and a son, Fenfield. Fredrica is a stranger now to Peter's children, but they soon become good friends. Fredrica meets Donna Bodley, fashion writer in the apartment house, and Donna describes a notice going for Mrs. Fenfield's position as matron of a small girls' school. Fredrica becomes a small girl, Lucile, who lives in the apartment. Lucile is sent to the school and Fredrica is also admitted into the institution as a pupil. Fredrica is going to be a "Custard Cup." Fredrica writes a letter to Peter, telling him that she is going to be a "Custard Cup." Peter writes a letter to Fredrica, telling her that Mrs. Fenfield is going to be married to Professor Stickland, an honored Fenfield, and that Mrs. Fenfield is going to be a "Custard Cup." Fredrica receives the letter and tears it up. Fredrica is now a "Custard Cup." Fredrica is going to be a "Custard Cup." Fredrica is going to be a "Custard Cup." Fredrica is going to be
