THEY SEE THE HANDWRITING ON THE WALL

Mr. Dunbar and his party begin to sense defeat in November. Unable to camouflage the sorry failure of the Morrow administration into a semblance of the success their platform has proclaimed it to be, they begin to cast about for a weapon wherewith to combat the growing popularity of the Democratic candidate.

As witness The Lexington Leader in the publication of a cartoon, showing a crippled soldier, a mother with babe at breast and a most patriotically garnet gentleman of color being relieved the ballot by Mr. Fields, being welcomed, yea three welcomed by Charley Dawson to cast their vote for him.

Why the cartoon, Leader? What can be the fly in your ointment? Do you see in the young mothers-to-be ranks with our colored population the matter of illiteracy, in your opinion? Is picture appealing to race prejudice in one way to insure racial solidarity at the polls, no doubt. Should, we fear, one, deplore your lack of taste, to say nothing of your apparent lack of political perspicacity in publishing a cartoon, showing a crippled, white, rough-boy, a young white mother and a negro so typifying those whom in politics to read or write would deprive of the ballot.

The Mercury would not misjudge the intentions of a newspaper nor of a political party, but if this cartoon be not an appeal, albeit a clumsy one, to the race prejudice of the negro, that his zeal for his "election time" friends may be augmented, then it is either the fault par. of an over zealous "artist," or it is altogether a meaningless.

In the last presidential campaign the Democratic party and the Democratic press were berated by the Republicans for "dragging in the race issue." And now look, everybody, please! See what the Leader has dragged in!

They sense defeat; they see the handwriting on the wall and so Dunbar need be called to read for them. The Morrow administration is "weighed in the balance and found wanting." They know it, else why should they drag in an issue which gives them the "horrors", when referred to by the Democratic press?

FIELDS A SURE WINNER

The address delivered by Mr. Fields at Madisonville Saturday of last week opened the eyes of a great many people. The Post has to hesitation in describing it as the strongest and most constructive public speech that has been made in Kentucky during this calendar year. If there is anyone who doubts this, the Post invites such a person to purchase a copy of this paper of date of September 22, and read that speech through carefully. Mr. Fields' address was that of a man who has determined to do for Kentucky the things that Kentucky has so long needed. Mr. Fields, if elected governor, will not be a candidate for any other office during his term. He will give his whole attention to the needs of the State. He takes a forward looking position concerning every public question before the State. He will pardon no criminals. He will support the merit system in the administration of the prisons and asylums. He will give exactly the right kind of support to public education. He will name for the new board of highways boards of taxation and assessments two best qualified men in Kentucky.

Mr. Fields has made himself the leader of the progressive thought of the people of Kentucky. He is the hope and the expectancy of those who have for so long wished for a public man who would do something in Kentucky for Kentucky. His election is now assured, but his majority should be no common majority. The Post expects to see Mr. Fields elected by a majority in excess of 50,000, and it should go as high as 100,000.—The Louisville Post.

BOYS GET THE MONEY

"Boys, get the money," was the slogan of the Republican campaign in 1920, and evidently after 1920 the good old rule was followed, says the Louisville Post.

The Democratic national committee has made public the text of a letter written in 1921 by Mr. [illegible] to a representative in congress, and now secretary to President Coolidge. That letter, written on Mr. Sleepy's official stationery, reads as follows:

December 19, 1921

Dear Son—We have a real route matter at Meadows of Dan, in Patrick county, that I want to try and work out in a way that we can get something out of it.

The eligibles are Alvin M. Barnard, Edmund B. Clarkson and John L. Bassett, all Democrats. They are ex-service men and we have to appoint one of them. The question is, Can we get the one we appoint to put up some cash? I know you can do it if any one can.

It would be immaterial which one we appoint. My recommendation is to work it through Arch Hughes as to not get into any bubble that might burst. If you can agree to get out of the three to do something we can't do under the appointment at once.

You had better not use my name as Mr. Sleepy have authority to make any recommendation that will go. I would like very much to get this matter settled one way or the other without involving me in this connection. See what you can do and let me know. Get all the facts you can.

Your father,
L. D. HOWARD.

Secretary Howard then adds this postscript in long hand:

P. S.—Be sure and destroy his letter after you are through with it.

We have nothing to add to this charming document. It shows pretty clearly what kind of a man Warren G. Coolidge has named as his secretary. The Post concludes.

KENTUCKY'S GOVERNING COST

(Anderson News)

In an editorial which appeared in the New York World some weeks ago in which the cost of state government was dismissed, it was said that Kentucky was there is an outstanding example of admonished by the extravagance in the administering of the affairs of the commonwealth. Expressed in figures the per capita expenditure in Kentucky during the last four years has been from $4.55 to $7.71.

In this speech at Madisonville last week, Congressman W. J. Fields, the Democratic candidate for Governor, called attention to the fact that in 1910, the last year for which a Democratic administration was responsible for expenditures, that the total revenue received into the state treasury was $12,243,629.93 and the expenditures were $11,243,829.96, disclosing that $1,073,799.03 less by actual figures Kentucky than was received from taxation sources.

In 1922, the last year for which full figures are available, under the administration of Governor Morrow, who pledged to reduce expenditures and who overburdened taxpaying people, the money paid into the state treasury totaled $17,108,936.31 and that year there was expended by the government of Kentucky $18,922,954.58, or $1,814,018.27 more than was taken in other words $1,814,018.27 more was spent for conducting the affairs of the commonwealth than was collected from the taxpayers, although the total receipts from all sources were $4,785,- 215.38 greater than they were the last year affairs were administered by a Democratic administration. In brief, the Morrow administration expended during the fiscal year ending June, 1922, $6,751,124.65 more than was spent during the last year of the Stanley regime.

There would not be such a great road objection to the vast difference in the cost of a half million dollars in governing cost if we had anything to show for the money. Since the system of public highways is little improved, and the educational institutions remain inadequate and the University of Kentucky still functions as crowded quarters and on a miserly appropriation, one can but wonder why the tremendous increase in government costs. We should like to know, Mr. Taxpayer, do you consider that it is worth six and a half million dollars a year more of your money to be governed by a Republican administration than to have the affairs of the state conducted by a Democratic regime?

MR. DAWSON'S MISTAKE

(Louisville Post)

If Mr. Fields has won the confidence of the State by his announcement of the appointment of Mr. W. H. Thacker, of Montgomery, of Elizabethtown, as chairman of the State Highway Commission in the event of his election, Mr. Thacker, Mr. Fields' Republican opponent, has committed himself to a policy in road building that should win the earnest opposition of all interested in road improvement.

Mr. Dawson has made public four names for appointment to the State Highway Commission in the event the board remains of that size, and those names are unsatisfactory. We cannot make this point too emphatic. If Mr. Dawson is elected, and if the Highway Commission is to continue to consist of four members, the four gentlemen designated by Mr. Dawson will be unsatisfactory. But the joker in Mr. Dawson's road policy is contained in the statement that he proposes, if elected, to have the road law amended so as to substitute for a small, efficient commission of four men a faithful and necessarily inefficient commission of eleven—one from each of the Congressional districts. Here we have—at least on the Post Democratic ticket—Mr. Dawson's road program, and it is a bad program.

The road system in Kentucky should be handled as a whole, and all plans for road building should be made with the needs of the whole State in mind. A small commission of four can do this; a commission of eleven cannot do it. Four men on a highway commission will necessarily divide according to local demands. No commissioner would represent the whole State; each commissioner would represent a single district. No matter how earnest the personnel, the commission would specific divide according to itself. There could be a majority faction and a minority faction. There would be combinations and log rollings and trading, and hundreds of thousands of dollars might easily be unwisely spent.

The policy announced by Mr. Dawson indicts the lamest ability to be governor of Kentucky.

DEMOCRATS MUST HELP TO WIN THE RACE

(Wilmore Enterprise)

Approval of the selection of Carlisle Fiscal Court Clerk, instead of the Democratic ticket carried by a large majority throughout the State. His nomination is a guarantee to the entire ticket and explain that there can be no doubt as to the wisdom of the Executive Board in uniting on him for the proper race for the majority of votes) could not call. Space does not permit quoting of the many laudatory comments from state editors that have come to this office through our exchanges. Suffice to say that they are unanimous in their commendation of the Democratic action and indeed there is every reason why they should be. The nomination of Carlisle is a wise one in every way, and places in the field a candidate who has been closely identified with every worthy movement for the betterment of Kentucky.

There is much of hope and encouragement in the action of the Democrats gathered with renewed zest for the fray. Harmony in the ranks of the party has been healed all sores, that may have been left over after the primary, and he has a united and hopeful Democracy behind him. The prospects a majority in November to up to the Democratic notches. It remains for Democrats, as they should, it will be elected.

And we give a warning here. Indifference on election day, as compared with the polls by the democrats on primary day, will spell defeat. The Democratic idea that he will be elected without effort by the people will easily defeat him. Every citizen who is entitled to be considered a loyal Democrat should vote. Democratic victory is no longer to be considered a matter of course. Several years of recent years has been overwhelmingly defeated before concerted action and united support to win. With their united party is assured. Without them defeat is easily possible. Taste this in your mouth for a while.

The Republican forces are well organized and hopeful. They are in with a compact party back of their candidate and they will put forth their every effort. They are counting on a well organized and aggressive campaign for their side. They are also counting on the indifference of many Democrats at the polls. It has been successful before. It can be again.

Therefore it behooves all democrats to be alert and on their guard. The race can win easily if they will. But they must have the will and they must back the will with their presence and action.

GEN. DENHARDT AND THE LABOR UNION

The State Federation of Labor recently passed unfavorable resolutions concerning the candidacy of Gen. Henry H. Denhardt, who is the Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor. The action was based upon the vigorous opposition the General Denhardt in suppressing disorder which existed extensively in the Kentucky coal fields in 1919. Gen. Denhardt in command of the National Guard which was ordered to Newport by Governor Edwin P. Morrow. He was supported by him as he sought to restore order, at [illegible] was in compliance with orders given him by Governor Morrow. He did not deny of a soldier is to obey and carry out orders. This he did and he should be commended rather than condemned for the suppression of lack consigned him by the governor of Kentucky. If the Newport officials can not handle the situation and disorder exists which threatens the peace, our Morrow from whom emanated the orders which General Denhardt carried out.—Anderson News.

PREDICTIONS OF BAD WEATHER

Weather is a matter of daily concern. Changes from its averages through the seasons have an enormous bearing upon the success of the crops, out of season rains have an equally disastrous effect upon the success of the sun's heat during the summer months, declined 2-6 per cent—the greatest decline ever recorded in the established records of that decline have been declining steadily ever since. In the last four months, the general mean temperature of the earth, as well as, scientists are busy over what they call "sun-spots" which affect the sun's heat. Whether these sun-spots are the cause of the cool weather which has been prevalent this summer is a matter of conjecture. He has no entangling alliances and no reason to make promises and has made no promises to any party. As for his standing as a citizen and a representative, he is one of the most highly respected men in the state and his standing as a citizen and a representative, his record in congress and his course after term with every increasing majorities, is his best voucher.

There is much of hope and encouragement in the action of the Democrats gathered with renewed zest for the fray. Harmony in the ranks of the party has been healed all sores, that may have been left over after the primary, and he has a united and hopeful Democracy behind him. The prospects a majority in November to up to the Democratic notches. It remains for Democrats, as they should, it will be elected.

Weather experts have studied temperatures in western Europe and the United States. England, France and Italy have had the driest summer on record, and in Switzerland years, with black in Switzerland, snow in Germany, England, snow in Austria and France, and frosts in July. Then with July and early August, all records for heat in growing areas, all records for heat in the summer months were broken, says a Washington correspondent of the Boston Transcript.

Going back for geometric more than a century, the Washington weather experts find present conditions strikingly similar to those in the year immediately preceding 1816, known as the year without a summer. They are counting on a well organized and aggressive campaign for their side. They are also counting on the indifference of many Democrats at the polls. It has been successful before. It can be again.

Therefore it behooves all democrats to be alert and on their guard. The race can win easily if they will. But they must have the will and they must back the will with their presence and action.

REPUBLICAN PANIC OF 1921

There is an interesting and important statement in the latest report of the Republican Comptroller of Internal Revenue. Here it is:

"The decrease in revenue from income and profits taxes for the first half of the fiscal year 1923 is due principally to the depression of business in 1921 and to some extent to changes in the law."

This is an official acknowledgement by an officer of the Republican administration that there was "a depression" in 1921—the first year of the term of the present Federal regime. And it was this Republican panic and not any significant reduction in the rates of taxation that explains the decrease in collections. The Republican Comptroller of Internal Revenue says the increase in tax rates were responsible only "to some extent" for the reduction in receipts.

Republican newspapers and prominent candidates have been attributing this to the volume of revenues to the changes made in the tax laws in 1921. The fact is—and the Comptroller of Internal Revenue concedes the point—that the profits of 1921 and the thousands of their income, they didn't pick up taxes because they didn't earn nor income nor profits upon which to pay.

THEY READ ADVERTISEMENTS

In a recent report published in which the Comptroller of the Currency reference as obtained by Dun & Bradstreet Advertising Chart, it is shown that ninety-four per cent of newspaper readers read advertisements and eighty-eight per cent have faith in the statements. These results were received on a questionnaire answered by 600 shoppers at Des Moines.

Ninety-six per cent of those who replied thought newspaper advertising was reliable. Truthful news and clearness are the most appealing elements in an advertisement, attractiveness next, and the appetite for bargains was mentioned by only seventy to the answers. The department store was mentioned in the greatest number of instances in the answers, personal or society news, and sports. Women represented two-thirds of those who filled out the questionnaires.

KENTUCKY TO HAVE HOME COMING JUNE NEXT YEAR

Kentucky will play host to more than 100,000 of its native sons and daughters and their descendants during June of next year when a home coming celebration will be held in Louisville during the week of June 8 which will be followed "by reunions and parties to be held in the individual counties during the week following.

For the time being the efforts of the home coming headquarters established at Louisville will be to obtain the names and addresses of former Kentuckians now living elsewhere and also the names and addresses of Kentuckians who were born in other counties of the state, but who have since left Kentucky. Such names and addresses will be used in making up invitations lists and forming cooperative societies.

PROGRAM

Tonight, Thursday, comes Theodore Roberts and Florence Vidor, in "Hail the Woman." If you want to see a more enough good picture, don't fail to see this one. It is one of the best on the screen today.

Friday — "Speed," serial, Pathe Weekly and a good comedy with Harold Lloyd, "The Reporter."

Saturday—Jimmy John Gilbert, in "A California Romance." This is a western picture, and full of it.

Monday—Conway Glenn Swanson, in "Husband's Flight Wife." Don't fail to see this as a mummy show in life after years in the movies' state. Now, what is worrying us is how Swanson managed eight wives when we poor fellows can't manage one. You will have to come and see if he did it. We will sure keep our eye on this picture and all of the above program at the [illegible].
