A PRODIGY

Louisville has had a prodigy the past few days in the person of Haywood Thompson whose mental workings were disarranged in the late war when he was wounded. Among the strange things done by Thompson is driving an automobile through the most congested traffic section while securely blind-folded. He also under similar conditions goes into the base-ball field and catches "flies" and "liners" without apparent trouble. The strange intuition which enables him to do these tricks is unexplainable.

Capite Florem

By THOMAS A. CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

When I were in Denver, Nancy and I, when I saw a beautiful picture in a shop window. I wanted to get it and buy it at once—the price was cheap beyond belief; I wanted it but Nancy urged delay. I yielded as all well-trained husbands do, and though I have been to Houston several times since and have walked many elsewhere and peered in eagerly at Windows, I have never found a picture quite so much to my liking; I should have bought the one which Nancy did not.

An old metaphor of mine had long looked forward to a visit to California and the Northwest. It came, but not because he could not afford the trip, but simply because he found the next year conditions would be more favorable, or he could get it more easily, or he would enjoy it more. He is hopeful; I am not so much so, but he is hopeless; I am a pessimist. He will never have been able to do what he could easily have been able to do if he will now to enjoy the retrospect of life.

We waste many precious hours in the contemplation of future recreations and enjoyments which may never come to us, when we might be getting happiness from the opportunities that are immediately around us. We delude ourselves with the hope that sometime in the future we shall have more time or be in better position for the enjoyment of the finer things—when we are through college, when we have a good job, when the children are grown, when we have more money—forgetting that those people who have most money and most leisure are frequently the most discontented and unhappy.

We shall none of us be in a better position to enjoy ourselves than we are today—few of us as long as we keep our strength and our faculties, at least, will ever have as much leisure for enjoyment or as great opportunity for happiness as we have now.

I have always admired the courage of a dear friend of mine. She had for years reached a handsome set of her bounty during every summer, and being in moderate circumstances did not feel that she could quite afford to throw away the entire amount but only a part of it. She was left a little money and instead of putting it out at interest, as perhaps she should have done, she bought the handsome set of bounty which she had so desired. She died within a year, and I've always been glad that she had those months of happiness and satisfaction in her purchase.

It is the part of wisdom, of course, to look forward to the future and to prepare for it; most of us have too little thought for the morrow, but the thought of happiness and enjoyment are about us every day; we do not need to wait for the distant future to pick them. If we refuse them today they may be like my picture—we may never have a chance at them again.

ASPIRIN WILL KEEP CUT FLOWERS FRESH

Cut flowers may be prevented from fading by giving them an aspirin tablet because D. Keefer, pharmacist at the state sanitarium at Mont Alto Pa., states that by this method he has not only preserved flowers several days beyond the time when they would ordinarily fade, but has revived them when wilted.

The experiments were conducted with chrysanthemums. Some of them were put into water to which an aspirin tablet had been added; the others were put into plain water. Keps under conditions otherwise the same, the dragged blooms outlasted the others by three days. In another case, flowers which had stood in a hot room over night and were badly wilted, were given fresh water to which an aspirin tablet had been added. They revived in two hours, looking as fresh as they did when picked the day before. The leaves, however, remained wilted.

The explanation of the action of the aspirin is that it acts as an antiseptic, interfering with the enzyme, which normally causes the clogging of the vessels of the stem at the cut surface.

EYE STRAIN OF CHILDREN

Dr. Matthias Nicoll, Jr., State Commissioner of Health of the New York State Department in discussing Eye strain and its Prevention, said: "Few of us give much head to the eyes or to their care until our attention is called to them by lessened ability to see things clearly, at a distance, by difficulty in reading fine type or by headaches, reddened eye balls or eye lids.

"Examinations which have been made of the eyes of large numbers of industrial workers and school children indicate that perfect vision is rare. It has usually been found that whenever groups of persons have their eyes examined, nearly two-thirds show some form of imperfect vision. To be sure, many of these defects are slight and can be corrected easily by glasses or by proper treatment or perhaps correct lighting or variety in the work to which the eyes are put will help many who are suffering from eye strain.

"Children should be watched especially for any sign of eye strain. In the ordinary school yard test inspection this condition may be easily overlooked, for the child by tremendous effort of the eyes may overcome the defect for the moment. It is therefore advisable, if your child appears backward, sleepy or dull during school hours, to have an examination made to see if glasses are needed. Such a test should be brought to the attention of an oculist as soon as possible.

"Make sure that your child's eyes now, so that they may continue to serve them well when he is older."

Question: How often is it necessary to have children's eyes examined?

Answer: Eye-sight changes with age. Glasses that fitted a few years ago may be harmful to a child now. Headaches, reddened lids or blood-shot eyes usually indicate that the eyes should be rested or that the glasses need to be readjusted.—Baby Health Talks by Dr. Josnia McF. Jennings, Assistant Director, Bureau of Child Hygiene, State Board of Health, Louisville, Ky.

MADAM SCHUMANN-HEINK COMING

Central Kentucky is to have the opportunity to hear one more exponent of music week as Madam Schumann-Heink has agreed to consent to sing in Lexington the evening of May 2, according to a letter to the Woodland Auditorium under the management of Miss Anna Chandler Goff of the Lexington College of Music.

Madam America says of the great artist:

"I'm the ever interesting discussion as to what should be the ideal of an artist with regard to the character of the work presented, Mathis Schumann Heink recently told the writer on the stage she is Schumann-Heink, standing erect in her beautiful costume, singing to the world. Elsewhere, she is just plain Mother Schumann, as she will now agree by preference, with her hands out and the door wide open. She finds herself particularly happy when she is at Coronado in California, where she calls the beauty spot of the universe that almost makes you forget your troubles.

"It is perhaps the intense human sympathy which the great artist and noble woman has developed which enables her even at her age to put into her singing an appeal that is absolutely irresistible. She takes on sale now at the Lexington College of Music at $11.65, $2.20, $2.75, war tax included.

Frank Cordell, private detective of Indianapolis, was sentenced to sixty days in jail for his part in an alleged kidnapping plot with Richard Hacken in which William Hale was taken to a "torture house" in Lexington and kept prisoner for several days, making his escape by slaying Heaton.

CARLISLE
Your Town and My Town

Did you who live here in Carlisle ever stop to think that we have one of the best small towns in this section of Kentucky? Has it ever struck you that we are highly located with reference to cities? Lexington is not so close as to overshadow us. Yet we are accessible to the Blue Grass metropolis. Our main roads are good and there is a fine system of pikes.

We have a $200,000 graded and high school building. We are now at work on and will soon complete a $20,000 gymnasium, which will be modern and well equipped in every particular. We have a young health system in keeping with our school, which has proven a model for other and larger towns to follow.

We are one of the healthiest communities in the State. Last year we ranked second in this regard, being beat by Lexington. It is most probable that through the efforts of our recently organized Board of Commerce, a tobacco receiving plant will be secured for Carlisle. This will improve our tobacco market. Carlisle is the center of the best tobacco section in Central Kentucky. We have a co-operative livestock market, now being successfully operated and capable of growing to be a much larger sales organization. Our local soft drink bottling plant, bottles over 30,000 cases a day.

Carlisle is furnished with light and power by the Kentucky Utilities Company. In 1925, the enormous plant at Dix river will be furnishing electric current for our use. We own our own water works and our own city building.

Our streets are well paved. Our business buildings are brick and well constructed. As a result of our fire zone ordinance, our central business district is free from conflagration and approximates as to decredit to a town many times as large.

We have three modern and prosperous banks and a building and savings association. Our five churches are alive and active. We have a Chamber of Commerce, with a professional Secretary. A Riverbier company of the National Guard has recently been mustered in here. An armory is in prospect. We have a Carlisle Band, of twelve pieces.

Altogether your town and my town—Carlisle—is a good place in which to live. Co-operation—"pulling together"—will make it a better town. And as the town grows and prospers, as its advantages increase, so will the county prosper.

The business men who are contributing this advertisement, believe in Carlisle and in its future. We want you, who read this, because boosters are your town. Unwise or blind, and Brawn in a long and strong pull all together will accomplish results.

Let's Get Better Acquainted.

In Pioneer Days Brawn guided by Brains blazed the trails through the wilderness and laid the foundation for our present-day civilization. It is the same today--Brains and Brawn working together build communities. We have plenty of both--Let's use them.

Our community is a good place to live, but co-operation will make it a much better place.

Our community is a good place to trade-- and the more we trade at home the better it will be.

Pulling together means greater prosperity for all.

SUCH IS LIFE
