WORLD HAVE STATE PUT ON CLEAN-UP CAMPAIGN

The clean-up campaign that originated in Campbell county promises to become statewide, if the plans of several Newport millionaires materialize. Gov. W. J. Fields is to be requested to call a conference of all the mayors and sheriffs in Kentucky for the purpose of discussing the provisions of the state prohibition law.

"It is our purpose to urge enforcement of the state law as vigorously as the national dry law is being enforced," said the Rev. W. J. Gregory of the Grace M. E. Church, Newport. His call to would consult with the governor over the long distance telephone.

WANTS TO "BE IN ON" OUR CHRISTMAS TREE

R. O. Dorsey, enclosing his check for $1.00 as a contribution to the Community Christmas Tree, says:

Louisville, Ky.
December 24th, 1924

Mr. P. D. Darnall,
Carlisle, Ky.
Dear Paul,

I noticed in the Mercury that Carlisle is to have a Community Tree and I would like to be in on it, and am enclosing herewith a small check with a wish for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to all.

Yours very truly,
R. O. Dorsey.

WAREHOUSE ACT UPHELD IN KENTON COUNTY

Judge M. L. Harbeson, in Kenton County Court at Covington Monday handed down a decision upholding the constitutionality of the act requiring auction tobacco warehouses to post the name and addresses of tobacco growers selling tobacco over their floors and refused the injunction sought by the Kenton Loose Leaf Warehouse Company against Commonwealth's Attorney Otto S. Ware and County Attorney Edward J. Tracy to restrain them from enforcing the law, which was passed at the 1924 session of the Kentucky legislature.

The Kenton warehouse, through its president, W. B. Whiteman, averred in its petition for an injunction that most of the business of such warehouses comes from dealers who buy and commingle the tobacco purchased by them and that they are unable to furnish the names and addresses of the producers from whom they purchased such tobacco and that the new law was a violation of the bill of rights of the Kentucky constitution.

The purpose of the law was declared in those suits to be to prevent the tobacco associations an unfair advantage in Kentucky, but the court evidently did not see it that way. At the time the law was enacted some warehouses, particularly in Lexington and Richmond, had been selling tobacco over their floors by numbers and in the name of that historic personage, John Doe, and the proponents of the law declared that its purpose was solely to prevent the fraudulent sale of tobacco in Kentucky.

GIN SENG GROWING

For a long number of years "seng" has been a highly profitable product of the Kentucky mountains! "Seng" parties used to be organized and folks would spend weeks in the mountains digging it. There was a "seng" mill, or rather clearing house, near Whitesburg, where folks brought their product. It was dried and shipped by wagon to Ashlapdon, Va., for most of "seng" is the prized product. The plant is something like a weed. It is supposed to have marvelous medicinal qualities and cures all ills, according to the belief of the Chinese. Most of the "seng" is sent to New York and from there shipped to China. For many centuries the Chinese have believed in the healing qualities of "seng." Now some of the producers in Letcher have "seng" beds and some have made small fortunes in this business. We cite Editor Webb as the authority for the statement that gin-seng will bring $7 or $8 a pound.—Hazard Leader.

BLOW RESTORES MEMORY

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 22.—A football's blow two weeks ago jolted the cloud from the brain of William Robert Gillispie, 20, and he has come back to his family.

Gillispie, missing 20 months, Sunday morning entered the home of his father, Lee L. Gillispie, here. The father believed his son dead.

He told of wandering through four states and how a bandit felled him two weeks ago and caused his memory to return. Now he will spend his first Christmas with Sam Pavie, Lillian and Eula Hunter, Thelma Ward, Chas. Keaton and Bill Bradley Keaton.

PRAISING THE RABBIT

The eagle may be the soaring emblem of American sovereignty and the turkey her exemplar of victorious Thanksgiving and Christmas spirit of joy, but the meek and lowly rabbit is her national game bird, always here without diminishing, always ready for the hunt, sought allies by the arboreatic sportsman with his $200 gun and the freckle-faced boy with his dog. A true democrat he is who draws no difference between the sagely-equipped sport and the lowly hound. But whom his fleet heels impartially to either and gives the proper thrills to both. Other game may come and go, may be hunted to the point of extermination, but the rabbit, like the brook, goes on forever, seemingly thriving on persecutions and keeping up his numbers year after year.—Wilmore Enterprise.

CAN'T RAISE SHEEP AND DOGS, TOO

With only about a half dozen dogs licensed as "for" kind out for 1925 at the Clerks Office, the outlook for paying accumulated sheep claims of $1,500 to $2,000 in Fleming county is anything but promising.

At present there are claims on file extending back a year and right now it looks that the dog license collections for 1925, if indeed there are going to be any collections of consequence, are not going to pay the accumulated claims, anything like, to say nothing of the claims that are sure to come in during the coming year.—Flemingsburg Gazette.

SHIPS WALNUT KERNELS

Eight two-bushel bags of walnut kernels were shipped by express from this city the other day to a Baltimore house. The weight of the eight bags was approximately 400 pounds, and the shipment was made by John Sapp, of the Merrimac section.—Lebanon Enterprise.

KENTUCKY TOMATOES

(Courier-Journal.)

Tomatoes will be substituted for tobacco by farmers of the Mc Brayer section of Anderson County the Anderson News advises. On hundred acres already have been pledged and provided twenty-five or fifty acres more are available a cannery at the town of McBrayer, idle for eight years past, will be opened. A market already is assured.

The McBrayer farmers now are demonstrating their sound judgment. They may not eliminate tobacco altogether, but the setting apart of a percentage of their acreage for tomatoes makes it certain that the Burley production will be materially reduced. It is recalled that the cannery at McBrayer which was built by a stock company of farmers a number of years ago, closed down when the price of tobacco became so high that everyone went in for leaf production. Now, since there is a surplus, the McBrayer men take the lead in Anderson in cutting down their 1925 crop.

The Anderson County farmers, consciously or not, are taking a leaf from the book of Breckinridge Countians who, under the leadership of Father J. T. Kuse, abandoned of tobacco for cucumbers and tomatoes which for some years have sold to Louisville canning factories at a handsome profit. The instance of one boy in Hardinsburg last year will be recalled. He had time to set out and tend an acre each of cucumbers and tomatoes. From the cucumbers he realized $128 and from the tomatoes $240.

The land around McBrayer is said to be capable of producing from 400 to 600 bushels per acre which, at the selling price promised—40 cents a ton of thirty-three bushels—should bring the growers about $2oo. The tomato-growing industry has been carried on with success in Bath County, and wherever there are canneries within short shipping distance the crop has been found to pay.

Gold to the extent of $10,000,000 is used every year in jewelry, gilding, teeth fillings and other similar purposes.

LIZZIES MUST RUN

"There goes no-and-no with a sack of flour, and I bet he ain't got a drop of whiskey in the house" used to be a common saying back in the ashes days.

Recently a man walked into a Jonathan grocery store and wanted to buy some gasoline on credit. He was told that it couldn't be sold on credit. Then he said he would take a side of bacon. This was sold—on credit.

The man left the store and in a few minutes returned without the bacon and bought some gasoline, paying cash for it. Investigation proved he had taken the bacon to another grocery store and sold it for the cash to buy gasoline.

But, then, gasoline makes the lizzies go just as money used to make the mare go.—Cynthiana Democrat.

CHRISTMAS

We thank Thee Lord, for the Christmas Star.
That brought the wise men from afar,
To find the Holy Babe that lay
In the manger-bed of fragrant hay.

We thank Thee Lord, for the joyful song,
The shepherds heard from the angel throng,
As when by night they watched their sheep,
While Bethlehem town lay fast asleep.

The Christ-child came for you as me,
That we from sin might be made free,
Then "Peace on Earth" should be our plea,
And that we help another's need
Let all glad this Christmas Day
Our Holy Babe in the manger lay,
For the tender shepherd or us, His sheep.
From sin and wrong He came to keep.

The Christmas Star! The Christmas Song!
Will guide us all life's way along,
And when on earth our course is run,
May we each one hear a glad "Well done."

MONSTER PUMPKIN

S. J. Harney had on exhibition at the Harrison Deposit Bank a pumpkin which he raised that weighed 42 pounds in the altogether. The monster has been presented by Mr. Harney to the Harrison Memorial Hospital, where it will make a rare display in the center of the lobby. The bottom of which is just above the bracket fund of a person five feet 2in 10 inches.

If portable candlesticks are used, or if bracket fixtures are fastened to the wall, the center of the light bracket fixture, or candle socket, should be of the double or duplex type mounted in the wall 36 inches above the floor. This also makes it easy to attach a curling iron or other appliance. A convenience panel will also be needed on the wall of the bed for a boudoir lamp or reading lamp. This will give plenty of light.

SERVANTS' ROOMS

Good lighting for servants' rooms may be provided from a ceiling fixture in which a 50-watt bulb is placed in a suitable shade and a bracket fixture in which a 25-watt shaded 25 or 40-watt bulb. If the room is very small, the ceiling fixture may not be needed, only a pair of bracket fixtures may be used. A small portable table lamp will do much to make the room more comfortable, but it is not essential. Whether it is used or not, a floor receptacle should be provided for electric appliances.

Mindful of the pleasant associations I have enjoyed with the good people of Nicholas county during my three years as your County Clerk, I wish to take this opportunity to thank you, one and all, for your unfailing kindness to me and to wish you a Merry Christmas.

The following is the 7th of a series of 9 lessons on "The Proper Use of Light." Don't fail to read each lesson, as they are highly instructive.

LESSON NO. 7

LIGHTING THE BEDROOMS

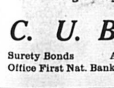
There are three or four different purposes for which we require bed lighting in a bedroom. At times we need a soft flood of light all over the room; when dressing, we need proper lighting of the mirror; a boudoir lamp on a small table at the head of the bed, or a bracket lamp on the bed itself serves very well for reading; and for a large room there may be need for a floor lamp beside a comfortable chair for reading.

THE CEILING FIXTURE

The fixture that is selected for the center of the ceiling should provide enough general lighting all over the room for ordinary use of the room. To protect the eyes, the shade of the bulb in such a fixture should be of a type that the eyes of a person lying in bed cannot see the bright bulb which furnishes the light. If a shade is used which is open at the bottom, the opening should be narrow. A total of from 50 to 100 watts will give plenty of light in this fixture.

LIGHTING THE MIRROR

We see objects by the light that falls on them and is reflected to the eye. We see our faces in the mirror by the reflection of our face, which is illuminated by the light falls upon our face which reflects a part of the light to the mirror; the mirror, in turn, reflects a part of the light back to our eye, and we have soon an image of our own face.



Now it is easy to understand that the light should fall upon the face itself instead of lighting the back of the head. The best way to get this result is to have the light in front of the face. And since the face is not a flat surface it can be best lighted from two directions, so that the shadow cast upon one side will light up the shadow cast from the features of the face by the light from the other side.

To get this lighting, then, in front of the mirror, there should be two bracket fixtures, one at each side of the mirror. These fixtures are just at the level of the eyes, and the light from them will cause eye-strain unless we are careful to have the bracket fixture so arranged that the bottom of which is just above the bracket fixture and is from 20 to 40 watts.

If portable candlesticks are used, or if bracket fixtures are fastened to the wall, the center of the light bracket fixture, or candle socket, should be of the double or duplex type mounted in the wall 36 inches above the floor. This also makes it easy to attach a curling iron or other appliance. A convenience panel will also be needed on the wall of the bed for a boudoir lamp or reading lamp. This will give plenty of light.

SERVANTS' ROOMS

Good lighting for servants' rooms may be provided from a ceiling fixture in which a 50-watt bulb is placed in a suitable shade and a bracket fixture in which a 25-watt shaded 25 or 40-watt bulb. If the room is very small, the ceiling fixture may not be needed, only a pair of bracket fixtures may be used. A small portable table lamp will do much to make the room more comfortable, but it is not essential. Whether it is used or not, a floor receptacle should be provided for electric appliances.

SINNERS IN HEAVEN

Next the blazing fire stood Croft. His hands hung loosely at his sides; his face was flushed and his eyes alive. At the sound of the girl's hurrying steps, he looked quickly. "A child?" he announced briefly. "I don't recognize it."

Slowly they looked at each other; the two faces, so strangely alike, gazing and unclasping her hands, her lips a little unsteady. In the eyes of her emotions, she sank upon the floor at his feet, and buried her head in her hands.

Croft looked at her, his own feelings in much the same chaotic state. The one sure point amidst the general upset among his fellowmen—deer to a man of active self-control—had been unhesitatingly destroyed at the very moment of attaining it. He had looked and dashed almost simultaneously. But in that moment he forced the full knowledge of what all this Eldorado existence meant to him—the enormity of his increasing hopes, bitterness in their shortcomings, and, as the flames ascended, he faced abruptly the fact that nothing was worth while for protection against glare. The one thing that he had wanted of a person he from 20 to 40 watts.

Turned and Fled Into the Hut.

she turned, and, without a word, fled into the hut.

Hugh stood still for a minute; then he drew a quick unsteady breath, and followed. In the entire history of his existence, he had never before been at a loss for words, but now he found himself mentally tongue-tied. He realized clearly that she and this new man had slipped from all the safety of other human companionship, all the restraints of civilization, with this terrible, eternal attraction now mounting them. Escape from it was impossible. He understood now the nature of the abyss opening below the precipice which had threatened her of late. This new knowledge blanched the past, even to the strange magnetic attraction, half-fear, in the early days of their acquaintance. It terrified her, shaking her confidence. Her one shield was the presence in all they had faced now appeared in the light of the enemy against whose she had no ally!

When she remembered the close clasp of his hands, the pressure of his head against her breast, her pulse throbbed and her face burned. It must go, she told herself desperately; this delightful, impossible tenderness between them must be stopped at once. She must resolutely hide his woman mind, shutting nothing but the actions ourselves!

She went on the soft light of dawn had entered the room, she rose. Taking a step forward, she looked through the other handle of the long thick bolt, wasting no regard for the splendid and tremendous piling round her into fragments.

So far, so good! But it happened that Barbara's keen eyes caught a glimpse of his set, with all its natural tendency to look well. When the hair was cut short to her neck, she hesitated; picked up the distinctive scissors and let it down; picked up the scissors; hesitated again—then laid them down, and gave her head a vehement shake. The short waves and curls, free from all restraint, followed their own sweet will, waving gloriously around her small head, clustering about her ears.

Also stood by the window gazing, watching a bird preening its bright plumage on a tree. When the hair was cut short to her neck, she hesitated; picked up the distinctive scissors; laid
