Achilles Leaves His Tent.

The newspaper which voters any opinion at all necessarily has its detractors. We get used to lambasting and become somewhat impervious to the ordinary run of criticism and abuse. But when we have an unusual epithet slung at us, and that by another newspaper, it jes natchally ellyvates us, and if we do not forget the original injunction to "turn the other cheek," it is a consolation to remember that we have had two cheeks to turn.

Now Mr. Bingham's Courier-Journal and Mr. Bingham's Louisville Times have enabled us to experience a real sizzling down of the frost. Following close on the heels of the Courier-Journal's editorial page, with an unkind belief, but no one will be misled, the four well-written editorials, in which The Courier-Journal is now editorially assisted the Louisville Times and against the Democratic nominee for governor. This is their privilege, and The Mercury, for one, has no desire to impugn their motives. Yet we cannot resent the fact that they impugn the motives of those of us who honestly differ with them upon the opinion that it best for the people to be permitted to vote on the question. We are put in the position of favoring a "crooked election," according to the Courier-Journal, by which the voters would be counted in regardless of the loudest magistrate against them." We are not so flattered. We are having our faith in the honesty and the intelligence of the voters restored each year we live. The Courier-Journal would have us believe that the voters of Kentucky are credulous nincompoops. Naturally the interest is drawn from Louisville and the state at large to the "back seats" of its city. That a newspaper should be so deeply interested in the result of a local contest may be drawn from particulars in instances of political corruption in the city of Louisville, but not in the general run of state contests. Mr. Bingham's Courier-Journal and Louisville Times have always been guilty of this practice, and we have never before known it to be so flagrant as in the present campaign. Now, The Mercury has no desire to be drawn into any local quarrel, but it will not be fair to it to be misunderstood. We have no political ambition to satisfy, and we are making political people mad. We have never before had so many people to tell us what they intended to do with their votes, and we will not be in the least surprised if we have a few more before election. We have no desire to be misunderstood, and it will remain a fact of politics in Kentucky, if held in abeyance, it may never be in the future, as much as it has been in the past, to be wicked in some quarter. If there is any other purpose to be served by the publication of this question we are not aware of it.

An Indefensably Bad Bill.

A bill is pending before the Legislature to require the State Board of Charities to employ an superintendent of our prisons, hospitals for the insane and institutes for the feeble minded only those who have been residents of Kentucky for six years. No one may be employed as doctor, nurse, or interne, except those who have been voters in Kentucky for two years.

Now, here is "political spoilsmanship," brazen and conscienceless. The argument that there are good ex-Confederate, good doctors and competent nurses in Kentucky, are no inducements, good doctors and competent nurses in Kentucky, are to qualify under the requirements of this bill is no argument at all. It is true that those able to fill all of those positions may be found in Kentucky by having lived here six years and having voted in the State for two years, but in the care of our unfortunate children, our insane and our criminals, not only Kentucky, but the world should be our field of selection. There should be no restriction, in this case, either of party or creed; the only question that should be asked is, "Is this man or woman the very best in his or her line that we are able to afford?"

The Mercury is a Democrat, but it most assuredly has no stomach for a spoils system of its own party or any other, which, as the Louisville Post aptly puts it, would "wade through the tears of little children" to accomplish its object.

The bill is indefensable and should not be allowed to pass.

A Puzzling Argument.

The Lexington Leader takes issue with The Mercury on the question of submitting the proposed $75,000,000 bond issue to the voters. The Leader thinks the proposition is very much one indeed, so bad that a vote of the people on the subject should not be risked. The Mercury, while it is willing to state frankly that it is far from being converted to the plan to bond the state for the amount honestly believes that the very best way to settle the question is to go to the voters with it. It seems to The Mercury that the present indications at least, that the plan will be rejected. If so, it will have been decided more definitely than it is possible for a state legislature to decide it. The proponents of the measure and its opponents will have had their day in court, and far from creating the "bitterness" and "secrecy," which the Leader fears, just that would be avoided, in our opinion.

The Leader writes fairly; those who disagree with it are not dubbed "political spoilsmen," yet we must admit that we are unable to follow its argument in favor of squelching the whole matter in the senate. Be it understood that we do not attempt to argue that the senate has not the "right" to vote as it pleases in the issue of Friday, February 22, an editorial under the caption, "Defeat The Bond Issue," be as follows:

A paragraph in the special correspondence in The Leader from Frankfort says that the vast majority of the Democrats voted against the Governor's $75,000,000 bond issue for the same reason that they voted for the Republican road repeal. Their constituents directed them, and the senators obeyed, to take the decisive vote in favor of the bond issue regardless of what the vote will give them and fight it at the election.

The Senate has the bill before it and if the men who must decide its fate are as fully aware of the ground-swell against it, of the views of the mass of their constituents, and as responsive to public opinion as are the members of the House, the bond issue will be defeated.

From the foregoing it would seem that the Leader believes that a majority of the people are opposed to the bond issue. The constituents of the members of the legislature are, according to it, the voters of Kentucky, and the views of the "mass of their constituents" may reasonably be expected to mean the majority of the voters of the state. So, aside from the fear the Leader feels that the bond issue will be attended with unpleasantness, we are unable to understand the reason for an opponent of the bond issue objecting to its submission, under such conditions. The proponents of the plan would not want such skilled magicians, as to be able to transform a substantial majority into a minority in a few months. And surely the Leader can not believe that a public opinion, thoroughly enough aroused to take the trouble to "direct" their representatives how to vote, will permit those tricksters of either or both parties to steal the election.

But we are rather puzzled, when we come to the last paragraph of the same editorial, which says:

> From every standpoint the Senate has reason to believe that an adverse vote on the bond issue would not only meet with public approval but at the same time would best serve the interests of the State and save the people a vast sum of money in interest which on the pay-as-you-go basis can be invested in permanent improvements.

The senate, by an adverse vote, money in interest, which on the pay-as-you-go basis can be invested in permanent improvements. Which is to say, one may reasonably infer, that if the senate submits the question, it will, every, fee, there you are; you pays your money and you takes your choice. This bond issue question is the dad-burndest thing!

At a meeting of the board of directors of the county Chamber of Commerce, held last Thursday night, officers were chosen for the ensuing year. A committee was appointed to secure a professional secretary and another committee to arrange for a luncheon, which will be given in the basement of the Baptist church on March 4. It is not obligatory upon members to attend this luncheon, but every member should do so. Whatever we go into the Carlisle Chamber of Commerce in personal enthusiasm and co-operation will be the measure of its success.

FIGHT YOUR OWN BATTLES

During the past few weeks The Mercury has received a great number of unsigned communications, all very good, if you have anything to send to the paper, sign your name, not for publication, but to guarantee the authenticity of the article.

We have received complaints from contributors, especially correspondents, because their articles were not printed as sent in. All articles published in The Mercury are edited, not necessarily as a criticism, but in order to make them conform to a certain standard which this paper endeavors to maintain. Often the phraseology is changed in order to make a sentence more explicit. Often two items are omitted from letters of correspondence because they have no interest.

Another annoyance with every newspaper office has to contend is the letter writer who sends in an article to be published in "type" own" with someone. If The Mercury had published every letter of this kind which we have received, the editorial sockets of the fourth in the county would be filled with suits for libel and slander. The person who tries to take advantage of a newspaper to "get even" with his neighbor is the worst kind of a coward. We have repeatedly refused to publish letters of this kind and will continue to do so. If you have a grievance against some one and you feel the only way to "get even" is to tell the world about it, "hire a hall."

WORTH WHILE THINGS

All adults who lived the year around on farms, in their youth, but who are at the present time incarcerated in cities, find that much of the conversation of their contemporaries relating to the stage, pictures, plays, actors and actresses of a decade or two ago, has few associations for them. Sometimes they feel acutely the fact that they were deprived of the glamour and fascination of the theatre.

There were, however, two substitutes for the magical amusement they missed. One of the most wonderful things of life in the farming region circle. On many a winter evening the writer remembers how, kneeling to the father of the family read aloud to the mother who was busily sewing or knitting, and to the children who sat enthralled in the simple farm living room, while Hawthorne and Fyle's stories of Robin Hood or Mary Mapes Dodge's Donald and Dorothy kindled imaginations and made the evening of bed time a crowded event.

The library was a meagre one, but Christmas and birthdays added to its size and the books were so perused and devotedly read that they were "ensaved and worn to the very threads" and glues of their binding, the last of it was that the whole family read and loved the best of book.

Then there was the ride in the straw-filled sleigh, generously supplied with old blankets, to the social entertainment in which the older children took part, and the holiday when were just learning to walk, smiled around at their own sweet will. The pantomime of Maud Muller read aloud, thrilled the audience. How vastly the children applauded the silent performers!

But it was a family reading circle! A family sleigh ride! And the memory of these things on visiting the writer believes this little noted or greatly valued service rendered by farm homes in making it possible for the family to enjoy recreation in common, should be remembered until its practice becomes more nearly universal.—Exchange.

"What town is this?" All tourists had asked the question for hundreds of times. Progressive towns put the name of their city or signs at the city limits, just as they also put "through arrows" to guide the traveler.

"What road is this?" as asked almost as often, especially on the less traveled highways. Main traveled roads are rapidly being marked, so that the visitor from afar is not confused.

"What river is this?" is often a matter of wonder to the motorist, who passes over several branches of the same stream, alongside a lake, or over a bridge without knowing what body of water it is which he passes over.

The League of American Pen Women has asked the Federal Highway Commissions to place suitable markers near these points, for the benefit of the traveling public. It is a laudable work, but why, the tribune wants to know, stop at famous streams? Why not mark all bodies of water on or near any and all roads, so that the traveler may get acquainted with the country through which he passes?

Monterrubian feel it pays to welcome the tourist, to guide him correctly and quickly, to make him feel at home. The "Stop! Ten Minutes and Absorb Local Color" type of sign is disappearing in favor of the "Our speed limit is fifteen miles an hour; we observe it as we make you welcome" type of sign. With the latter goes the courtesy of road markers and steam labels, worthy work for any civic club to take up, that the motorist may be visited with joy and remembered with pleasure.

REFORMERS WOULD PROHIBIT TOBACCO IN ANY FORM

According to the New York Times, plans are being made by the Non-Smokers Protective League for the annual convention of the smokers' parasites. The campaign will open with a drive for legislation that will prohibit the growth, importation and sale of tobacco.

"In view of the fact that fully 75 per cent of the men of this country are a steadily growing proportion of the women smoke, it can be readily perceived that we have a difficult task before us.

"We look for a national revulsion against tobacco. We believe that we will come with the aid of superior standards and a brainpower not to be found anywhere in the world.

"The prohibition of tobacco will come suddenly, just as the prohibition of liquor came. For years there was waged a consistent campaign against liquor, and, while this seemed to make but small inroads at first, it culminated in national prohibition. A total wave of revulsion against tobacco will sweep the proponents of it and will cut root progressive into effect.

"It is quite certain that many no-friend smokers would join in the movement to put a ban on the use of tobacco, but, in addition, we are confident also that the campaign of education is to be waged will result in a powerful factor in winning recruits to the cause.

"We have plans to secure the introduction of anti-tobacco legislation in every state legislature, to make it possible as a preliminary step toward a

CROP ROTATION IN GARDEN

The same crop should not occupy same space in the garden from year to year. There are several reasons for this. One of the chief ones is to avoid perpetuating disease which may have affected some of the vegetables the germs of which may carry over in the soil. The members of the cabbage tribe and the bean and pea family suffer from different diseases to their positions should be switched in order that any such pests may be eliminated.

A good plan is to reverse last year's plan and then change it back again next year thus furnishing a rotation of crops. If this is not done, at least the arrangement should be changed by moving the sections devoted to one vegetable this year to another section of the garden, to remove a few feet at least next year.

A good rule would be to plant the leaf crops such as lettuce and spinach have grown this year or to give the root crops the space next year where the fruiting vegetables were grown. Members of the pea and bean family have their own plot. It will not be a difficult matter to study out this arrangement with a little practice.

Planting the taller growing crops such as corn and tomatoes on one side of the garden one year and then moving them over to the other side the following season will be a convenient method of securing rotation. If rotation cannot be conveniently arranged because of the small size of the plot, the best way is to make up for the deficiency by careful fertilizing and occasional liming of the soil to sweeten it up.
