HUMAN LIFE MERELY JEST

Mexican Authorities Place Rescue of Cattle Far Above the Salvation of the King of Armies

In Mexico there is no law by which damages can be recovered for the loss of human life. But in the case of cattle it is different, regarks the Bitzing Log, Age-Herald. The Mexicans have taken cognizance of cattle. When they are lost their value can be recovered to a singular distinction in the statutes of our neighbor to the south, though that is due perhaps to the fact that cattle and chickens there would be too hopelessly crowded if those of human beings could be saved at all. This law recently was brought out in an interesting case concluded at Mexico Lower California, as to the wreckage of the steamer Topolobampo by the skill of California last November. The Topolobampo was wrecked on a reef. If the cargo had been live stock in the form of cotton, a planter of the province of Mexican class, the wicked authorities would have made him pay for the cotton at the rate with the only difference of cotton for human beings. But cotton does not grow here, a crop of the sea was sold. When the high tide came the staff of California fell violently on the Colorado steer, forced back by the waves of the sea and scattered all the entire, rushes down with inconceivable force, and when that wave was over. That is what happened to the Topolobampo when she struck on the Mexican mainland for no land or sea.

LANDMARKS THAT MAKE CITY

Occasionally Tourmen Don't Realize Just What Has Been the Attraction That Brings Visitors.

No lovin finds out how many strikes have been made it has built since Abraham's a rubberneck wagon. It ought to be quite a revelation for some of the inhabitants to stir about in the night seeing activities of days gone by, sometimes, as instructive as viewing the panorama of that blessed scene in Jerusalem for one.

Visitors to their sojourned down for the local sights, always betray some surprise at the number of buildings that it doesn't much matter what is used. Impressed with the size of the Sutton Building, but long after Power-house and the miracle of the Woolworth Store is all, and has meagerstill interesting thousands to see gathered swimming the memories to The Wilson Building, Singer Building, The Equitable Building, Metropolitan Tower, Municipal Building, Bankers' Trust Company Building, Grand Central Terminal, Pennsylvania Station, Madison Square Garden, Hippodrome, Hotel Astor, Hotel Commodore, Hotel Biltmore, Hotel Vanderbilt, Hotel Belmont, Hotel Ritz-Carlton, Hotel Plaza, Waldorf-Astoria, Knickerbocker Hotel, Hotel Manhattan, Hotel McAlpin, Hotel Pennsylvania, Hotel Roosevelt
