CARLISLE MERCURY

... at the Carlisle Postoffice as second class matter

Shall The Band Die?

Do we want a band here in Carlisle?

The Mercury believes that if the business men of the town give the matter a few moments thought they will answer it in the affirmative.

With the organization of a Community Club a possibility, and a few more extensive campaigns now being projected, a band here would be a necessity. It is now very seldom that a band visits Carlisle, and if it does it is a rather expensive treat for the town. Carlisle has the material for a good band right here at home, and with a little boosting and co-operation on the part of the business men and public, and that spirit of co-operation which is necessary to get things done, a band could be had. It is a mistake to let the matter drop because it has been allowed to do so in the past. Carlisle has grown considerably and city and county affairs are more complex than they were a few years ago. The small band which was good enough for the town then is not adequate now. Carlisle needs a band and should have one. Let's get busy.
