A PRAYER TO THE CITY FATHERS

Our fathers who art in Sturgis, we beseech thee to look down on your helpless children and have mercy until 1925, dog ain't old to date in the alleys of our fair city.

Give ear to our prayers, O Father, hide not Thyselves from our supplications, for we mourn in our complaint and make a noise for our hearts are sore pained within us and the terrors of death fall upon us when we look on the alleys and see the piles of junk rotting there and avoid the stench thereof.

Call unto thee thy handmaidens (the F. T. A.) who, by patient continuance in well doing, have done so much for our city and shall time Chief Priest (Shuck) and let them go into all the people, crying, "Awake! ye people, of Sturgis, gather unto thee thy hoes, rakes and brooms. Rise thineselves into thine alleys and work with thief hands until it shineth with cleanliness, destroying the breeding places for flies an disease germs.

And then that will not harbor unto thy call, let them be gathered unto the Chief Priest and pay unto him shekels amounting unto the five spot.

Now fathers, we have this matter in thine hands hoping thou will be merciful unto us and listen to the plea of thine beloved children.—Selah—Sturgis News-Democrat.

HOW MUCH SHOULD WOMEN'S CLOTHES COST

Various "best minds" have from time to time set out to solve the generally thankless task of laying down the law in the matter of how much a woman should spend for her clothes, but we have had access to some opportune figures on the subject which seem to have been more carefully prepared than most, and which are summarized here for what they may be worth to readers who will welcome any reasonable basis for comparison with their own expenditures. The figures before us indicate that $100 a year is the best a woman can spend on clothing and $200 a year the minimum on which she can maintain a smart appearance. The one-hundred-dollars-a-year person provides $108.52 for outer garments, $26.69 for underwear, $22.60 for hats, $20.81 for shoes and $19.29 for miscellaneous bits of apparel. The proportion of the $200 supporting woman's income which is set aside for clothing ranges from $100 a year for the girl earning $10 a week and $120 a year for one with an income of $20 a week on up to $300 a year for the woman receiving $2,000 a year. In none of these figures is allowance made for the enormous satisfaction enjoyed by the woman who really understands the value of the perfectly dress pattern for home sewing.—The Designer.

"CHARGE IT"—TO THE TAXPAYER

Cost of "private inquiries" for the present fiscal year will have drained off some $125,000 in tax funds of the United States treasury.

The Congressional investigations are becoming a costly business.

Many citizens are asking the simple question: "Why can those enormous expenditures necessary in addition to maintaining governmental departments whose duty it is to attend to the very matters involved in these special investigations?"

WHEN THE GREEN GITS BACK IN THE TREES

In spring, when the green gits back in the trees,
And the sun comes out and stays,
And we hooty gull on with a good right openness,
And you think of per bare-foot days;
When you set to work and you want to not
And you and yer wife agrees
It's time to spade up the garden-lot
When the green gits back in the trees.

What's work in the heart o' my sons,
When the green, you know, gits back in the trees?

Jones just locked the door and went!

Most men, when they're going out for dinner, begin to fuss and fume about 4 p. m. They look at their watches, decide to go as they are, change their minds and go home half an hour early so they can "dress."

But Jones never worries. He knows that a man is always dressed if he wears Clothcraft "2130" suit he got on this morning and will look neat and trim at five o'clock and he knows a serge is right for any occasion.

The model Jones likes—and you will, too—is a three button sack suit, fairly conservative but with a world of character—and it sells for only

TELLS FARMERS HOW TO TREAT VARIOUS DISEASES

Treatment with formalin will cure practically all cases of clover blast cattle Dr. D. L. Healy, pathologist of the Kentucky College of Agriculture. Bloating in cattle may follow the eating of certain foods; a sudden change after the winter season from dry feed to a green, succulent feed of any kind such as alfalfa, and clover, especially the red and white varieties of clover while in the respect: It has been demonstrated that red and white clover, timothy, alfalfa blooms and, in seasons of luxuriant growth, clover leaves, contain sufficient wild yeasts or other microorganisms to cause an active fermentation in the rumen of cattle eating heartily of them.

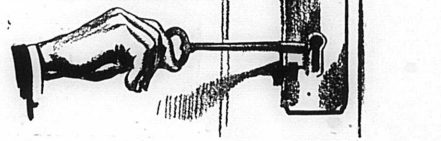
"As a rule the onset of bloating is rather sudden," Dr. Healy says, "the animal is anxious, moves are easily and is distressed. The swelling of the left flank is characteristic and is marked cases the upper portion of the flank rises above the level of the back, and when struck with the finger tips resounds like a drum. The breathing becomes more difficult; the animal reels on walking or standing, and in a short time falls, and if not relieved dies from suffocation.

"To clever bloat, as in many other conditions, an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. When, in the spring, cattle are first turned on clover or other green feed the change should be made gradually, and this is best accomplished by having the cattle graze for twenty to thirty minutes the first day on pasture and increasing this period each day until the digestive organs become accustomed to the green, succulent food. During the early weeks of spring, cattle should not remain in the pasture over night nor be turned on pasture while the dew or frost is on the grass. An excellent practice is to feed cattle a little hay or other dry feed just before turning them on the pasture. Watchfulness during a week or two or early spring will prevent many cases of bloat.

"When bloating does occur it may be promptly and efficiently relieved by drenching the animal with one quart of a one and a half per cent solution of formalin in water, at the same time pumping the mouth open with a block of wood and, if possible, including gentle exercise. Formalin is a trade name for a 40 per cent solution of formaldehyde gas in water, and may be obtained at any drug store. One-half ounce of formalin added to one quart of water makes the proper solution with which to drench the animal. After the animal has recovered, a second drench, composed of one pound of Epsom salts and half an ounce of ground ginger in one pint of tepid water, should be administered.

"In severe cases it becomes necessary to puncture the paunch, and in such cases the paunch should be promptly punctured. The instrument used for this operation is made in two parts, a trocar fitting within a canula, similar to a sword in its scabbard. This instrument is first sterilized by boiling a few minutes in water containing a small quantity of washing soda, or by immersing in 50 per cent alcohol for 5 to 10 minutes. The sterilized instrument is now boldly plunged through the skin of the animal's left side, midway between the last rib and the hip bone, into the paunch, and the trocar withdrawn from the canula. The first remains in position and allows the gas to escape from the paunch. This operation will be less dangerous if the animal has been first drenched with the formalin solution. When the animal is relieved the above spoon salts and ginger drench should be administered.

The Key To Better Business



Unlock the Door to Home Prosperity

Home Trade is the one Key that will fit the lock that holds fast the door opening into vaults guarding the treasure in which we may all share-- Greater Home Prosperity.

Each man, woman and child in this vicinity is part guardian of this key-- each holds within his own grasp a portion of a powerful tool, to do with as he chooses.

By coming to OUR town to supply his needs, no matter how little or how big, he brings with him his share of this key, adding it to the portions his neighbors have already brought, until, lo the key is complete and we can unlock the vault door and let loose the golden stream of home prosperity in which all may share.
