A man's ingress into the world is naked and bare.
His progress through the world is trouble and care;
And lastly, his egress out of the world, is nobody knows where.
If we do well here, we shall do well there;
I can tell you no more if I preach a whole year.

The Mercury's Position In Regard To The 'Cut Out.'

The accuracy of a statement, made in the news columns of The Mercury last week, to the effect that sentiment for and against the proposed "cut out" of the tobacco crop is equally divided in this county, has been questioned by some of our readers, who feel that the disposition of the majority of growers is in favor of eliminating a crop.

Now it is difficult to estimate a sentiment with any degree of accuracy, when one must depend upon conversation of individuals who are more than apt to be prejudiced in favor of one side or the other and as there has been no meeting of growers held in this county, any forecast of the attitude of the tobacco raisers of Nicholas is necessarily a matter of opinion and not infallible because expressed in the columns of a newspaper.

The Mercury makes this statement, in justice to itself, that it may not be accused of attempting to color the news in the much-discussed matter of "passing a crop." Our opinion, as expressed some weeks ago, is that a cut out should be entered into only after the most serious thought, for it is most assuredly a serious matter to the tobacco grower. That it would prove ruinous to the association is quite probable; that the possibilities of its success would be contingent to a large degree on the exertion of lawless force is likely, that it would increase the growing of tobacco in other states is sure and that it would accomplish the desired end of raising the price is, of course, dependent upon the area covered in the cut out agreement. For we all must admit that no more can Central Kentucky control the light burley market.

Our fear of the possible untoward consequences of eliminating a crop just now may be a groundless fear. We hope it is, but it is our honest opinion that it won't work and that it will mean the end of the association.

However that may be, we are not attempting any propaganda, in our news columns, for or against action on the part of the growers of Nicholas county. We hope that they will meet and discuss the matter and that whatever action they take will be after calm deliberation.

Good Fair News.

Of Anderson county's first Agricultural Fair, held at Lawrenceburg last November, the Anderson News says:

Last November, as a result of generous contributions from the business men of Lawrenceburg the Chamber of Commerce succeeded in staging a free Agricultural Fair. The success which attended this event surpassed the expectations of the most sanguine. A variety of agricultural products such as had never been seen on display in Anderson County was entered in competition for the prize money. The corn, tobacco and poultry show alone was a revelation. More than 5,000 people thronged the tobacco warehouse during the exhibit. A greater degree of success could not have attended the initial effort of so large a community enterprise. It was acclaimed an enthusiastic success.

The Mercury makes the prediction that Nicholas County's first Agricultural Fair, to be held here October 16th and 11th, will prove equally as successful as did that of Anderson county. We are hoping too, that it will demonstrate the possibility of our having a profitable County Fair in this county next year.

Party Responsibility.

John W. Davis states the "issue" of this campaign, as The Mercury sees it, at least, with clearness and fairness. In his speech at Elkhart, Indiana, last week, he said:

"We are insisting that no longer in this government by parties shall as it is and as it must remain, for we have no other machinery by which we may express our will—as long as it is a government by parties, parties as a whole must be responsible, and that it is not enough to point to this man who is honest, or to that man who is well intentioned, or to this man who promises to do better, but we must take the record of the party we trust with power and say to them: 'We renew your commission,' or 'It is unsatisfactory' and execution somewhere else for serving and for aid. The real issue in this campaign, my friends, comes down to that—the naked question of party responsibility in the American government."

One of the extraordinary things about this campaign is the way some Republican newspapers throw up their hands in horror, so to speak, and cry, 'lese majesty,' whenever Tangel Dems in mention out-and-out criticism of the party we trust with power and say to them: 'We renew your commission,' or 'It is unsatisfactory' and execution somewhere else for serving and for aid. The real issue in this campaign, my friends, comes down to that—the naked question of party responsibility in the American government."

One of the extraordinary things about this campaign is the way some Republican newspapers throw up their hands in horror, so to speak, and cry, 'lese majesty,' whenever Tangel Dems in mention criticism, or 'lese majesty,' whenever Democrats and Republican news, papers alike express the opinion that Mr. Coolidge is an honest man. That he may lack decision and force; that he is a rather pale and colorless personality, given a certain dig lustre by a kindly press, is quite another matter. We are not able to remember having read a single line from the most partisan Democratic newspaper, in which was questioned the character of Mr. Coolidge was made.

Shouting that Coolidge is an honest man and that by reason of the fact we should regard Teapot Dome and its shameful disclosures as "ephemeral," is an attempt to muddy the waters. Mr. Davis clarifies matters by pointing out the indisputable truth that parties as well as individuals are responsible to the American Government.

Tobacco And Common Sense.

The Mercury is republishing below an editorial on the tobacco situation by Mr. A. A. Bowmar, editor of the Woodford Sun, which we think will present a new phase of the much-discussed question of the "cut out" to our readers. We are indebted to believe that Mr. Bowmar is right in his contention that the Burley Association should not be handled as a "pool," but as a marketing association. The average farmer, he says, "is not financially able to gamble and a pool is a gambling association." Mr. Bowmar does not believe in holding large accumulations of tobacco for long periods, the effect being to increase production outside the association and in other states. And the Sun is convinced that the day when the European region had a practical monopoly on light burley tobacco is gone forever.

The Sun editorial follows:

It is quite certain that the same general laws of trade which govern, in a measure, the profits of the production and sale of tobacco.

The association should not be handled as a pool. The average farmer is not financially able to gamble and a pool is a gambling scheme. The association should be used entirely as a marketing association and that means that very heavy accumulations of one crop upon another, should not be held for more than comparatively short periods. The effect of holding large accumulations of tobacco for long periods is to increase the production of the weed in states outside of the association and to increase the production of tobacco by Independents everywhere. It is impossible to doubt this. Man may get and hold a monopoly for a considerable time, as was once patented invention but he cannot hold a monopoly on things grown out of the ground, because Nature will not let him. Even the Standard Oil Company, the most ably managed corporation in America, could not hold a monopoly on oil because the generosity of Nature would not permit it. There was a time when the Blue Grass region had a practical monopoly on light burley tobacco, because the manufacturers could not have run a year without buying some of our product. In those days we threw that advantage away and let the buyers take our tobacco from us at what price they pleased. We haven't that kind of monopoly now, because the long holding of tobacco under the old burley pool made a market which greatly increased production, and the long holding of tobacco under the present association has still further increased production. The only way to hold the production of tobacco down to the needs of the manufacturers is to sell enough tobacco at psychological moments to cool the ardor of those, both inside and outside of the pool, who will set out every plant they can find room for as long as there is a good market. The only alternative is to develop a sufficient foreign market to absorb the surplus. The idea of holding tobacco until it reaches a given price, and of doing this regardless of what the production may be, is a dream which will always result in ultimate disaster.

Unless we can get our minds away from the idea that the Kentucky light burley belt can control the tobacco situation for all time to come, we are going to injure ourselves for the benefit of other states and will realize it too late.

If I am wrong, I will be glad to be shown, but will those who answer me please answer my proposition? Don't answer by telling me that we must stand by the association and that the men who are running it know more than we do, and I should not waste time to talk up the association. It is quite impossible I think, that any newspaper in Kentucky has urged the growers to stand by the association more strongly than the Sun has and I consider it open ruin for them to do anything else than to stand by it. And most assuredly the only way you can stand by the association is to stand by its management. Of the high ability and sincerity of that management I have no question and don't have to question that. But if the pool principle is not correct, neither James B. Duke nor John D. Rockefeller could work the thing out on that line.

I think that the Interior Journal, in likening active plans for association management to interference with the officers of a bank misses the point. This association was framed on the principle of the California fruit associations. With them, there could not be a piling of one crop on another, unless the growers preserved their own product by canning, or dried it in other words, by manufacturing it. The proposition of piling up one crop on top of another would be like having parts of three crops unsold in the warehouses at one time. California would take care of the crop of 1904 and have parts of three crops unsold in the warehouses at one time. This is what is practically operated as a pool. This is not the fault of President James C. Stone nor the board of directors. It is the idea. I think, of a good many of the growers that this tobacco must be made to bring a certain price. If the principle is wrong, the principle should be abandoned and pray how can the management change unless ideas of the pool are changed. The management should, and I believe does, carry out the ideas of the majority of the growers.

Is Life Too Strong For Us?

Mrs. Sally Teal came in Saturday to tell us of the pleasant surprise party given her by friends and relatives on the occasion of her 81th birthday. It was her first "birthday surprise" she said and her pleasure was as genuine as though the event had come on the completion of her eighth year. Her father lived to be 86, she said, and his mother died at the age of 102 years. She was a bit worried that her "memory for names" was not so good as it used to be.

How many of us, we wonder, will have either health or memory left to us at four score and eight? And why not? "We live too fast," says our oldest emphasis, himself drawing close to three score and ten. Perhaps we do; or perhaps we don't live fast enough.

One is reminded of the epitaph of Lucinda Matlock in Edgar Lee Masters' "Spoon River Anthology":

We were married and lived together for seventy years.
Enjoying, working, raising the twelve children,
Eight of whom we lost
Ere I had reached the age of sixty.
I spun, I wove, I kept the house, I nursed the sick,
I made the garden, and for holiday
Rambled over the fields where sang the larks,
And by Spoon River gathering
many a shell
And many a flower and medicinal weed—
Shouting to the wooded hills, singing to the green valleys.
At ninety-six I had lived enough,
that is all,
And passed to a sweet repose.
What is this I hear of sorrow and weariness,
Anger, discontent and drooping
hopes?
Degenerate sons and daughters,
Life is too strong for you—
It takes life to love Life.

Someone has called Keen Johnson's Anderson News a "two-by-four newspaper." That bird got the wrong table of measurement. The News is "all wool and a yard wide," and measured by any standard can qualify as one of the most ably edited country newspapers in Kentucky. After all, News is every-by-four" is a mighty useful piece of lumber.

"I defy any of the recently exhorts of those g-r-e-r-r, bolsmarckian blasting and sacrifice shrine' scoundrels' to answer my unanswerable !!#$ sniffwyp arguments' he take that! and that*! dare your hide! Not a pi-line or two— just trying our hand at the manner of distinguished speakers, pro and con.

Governor Fields, whatever his faults may be, and one supposes that he has a number, is as few o the rest of us, can hardly be blamed for the change in text-books by those who don't like the change. Mr. Fields did not appoint the Text Book Commission.

As Illinois preacher confessed to poisoning his wife, "to get her out of her path." It was a bad "thrill" murder and now is added an "altruistic" murder.

What Means means takes rank with "How old is Anne" and no doubt is just about as important.

The Elizabethtown News allows that they don't like the change Mr. Fields did not appoint the Text Book Commission.

THE $75,000,000.00 ROAD BOND ISSUE

It may be of interest to Nicholas county people to know that the records at our Court House show that on April 6, 1915, we bonded a road debt of $125,000.00, that on May 15, 1920, we paid on this bond issue $9,000.00, leaving still unpaid on this bond issue, the little sum of $116,000.00, which we still owe.

Our annual interest rate on these bonds is 6% per cent, and our interest payments to this date seem to have been the small and insignificant sum of $49,225, and our annual interest payment on the $116,000 appears to be $4,725.

The other week we have already paid in interest and principal $49,225, and we still owe $116,000 on which we are paying an annual interest of $4,725.

I believe everybody will agree that the roads which this bond money shall have been rebuilt once or more since originally built from the proceeds of the bond, but otherwords we borrowed money with which to buy an apple; we ate the apple, then bought another apple and bought it, but we still owe the money for the first apple.

If things work this way in bond issues how long will it take to pay a bond issue of seventy-five million dollars?

What Is The Value of the Railroads

In order that the reader may have a clearer idea as to the real value of the railroads, and whether or not legislation should be enacted which would reduce their valuation, to the great detriment of the carriers, the following figures are presented:

There are approximately 250,000 miles of road, including switches and sidings. If we average cost per mile for the entire system at $40,000 a mile, the cost to build the railroads of the country would be $10,000,000,000

There are approximately 2,000,000 cars, valued at $1,200 each. If we average cost of a freight car to-day is about $1,000 each, the cost of such equipment bought at the present time would be 2,100,000,000

There are nearly 60,000 passenger cars, which, valued at $15,000 each, the average cost of a freight car to-day is about $15,000 each, the cost of such equipment bought at the present time would be 2,850,000,000

There are over 60,000 passenger cars, which, valued at only $15,000 each, the cost of such passenger cars now would be 900,000,000

These four items of railroad and equipment give us an estimated aggregate valuation of $15,850,000,000. Yet they do not include terminals, many important items, the cost of which are at present unknown.

Value of terminal yards, often located on highly valuable city property and at stations, together with the cost of buildings, such as passenger stations, freight houses, roundhouses, machine shops and other buildings—of all necessary and important character—which are required for the proper operation of railroads, and which would be necessary in the event of a vast quantity of current supplies needed in the operation of the railroads were destroyed, would increase the total value of these conditions items would amount to at least 4,150,000,000

Bringing the total valuation to not less than $20,000,000,000

The tentative valuation of the railroads, at the end of 1918, was found by the Interstate Commerce Commission to be $18,900,000,000. This valuation was based on cost and not on earning power. Experience has taught us to use big inflation of values. The subsequent investment of nearly $1,000,000,000 makes the valuation for ratemaking purposes more than $20,000,000,000.

With the above figures before you, do you consider a reduction by $13,000,000,000 in the valuation of American railroads, as has been suggested by certain interests, would be conducive to the best interests of the country? Or a denial to the railroads of their chief means of keeping pace with the development of the country?

The warrant for his arrest was sworn to by Will Lail, who claimed he purchased a half pint of moonshine liquor from Reed. Reed was returned Wednesday afternoon by Sheriff James Gannon and Marshal Ernest Ellis.

In circuit court Tuesday, Bettie Rogers, colored, charged with malicious shooting, was fined by a jury. Ed Dunnie, colored, charged with having a still in his home also was fined not guilty. The trial of Ed Bowles, charged with selling liquor, was unable to reach a verdict. Court adjourned Tuesday afternoon until Tuesday, October 4, when the remainder of the criminal docket will be tried. The grand jury is still in session.

PERSONAL

A BOY'S BEST RULE

Be honest, but, in word and deed, In all you say and do;
Treat others in your walk of life As you'd have them treat you!
Don't steal another's precious time, Or bolt a spurious name—
You may not think that stealing, Dishonest just the same.

Be brave—don't be afraid to stand By holding to the right,
And evil firmly to oppose With all your fearless might!
For real courage only fears What it is wrong to do—
To live a brave life, my lad, Be honest, brave and true!
