To be engaged in opposing wrong affords, under the conditions of our mental constitution, but a slender guarantee for being right.—Gladstone.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

This is "Be Kind to Animals" week, a week that should be observed fifty-two times during the year. Animals by reason of their inability to speak, most of necessity suffer many tortures of which man is not cognizant, but there is much needless suffering which a little kindly thought may prevent. Alexander Pope's poor Indian, "whose untutored mind sees God in clouds and hears him in the wind," has this to his credit, that he thinks "admitted to that equal sky, his faithful dog shall bear him company." And one who has known the superb loyalty, the unending faithfulness of a dog, wonders if the Indian may not be right, after all.

Burglar and bootleggers in New York, we are told may file income tax returns, "with the assurance that the information will be treated as confidential." How powerful is the dollar! You may bargle and you may bootleg and reap rich profits and so long as you are not caught by the proper federal lacunae of the particular machinery of State, county or city having charge of the prevention of such acts, you are safe—if you pay your income tax. Perhaps, after all, it is something beside jealousy which causes Europe to sneer at us "as nouveau gazillions. In theory, money may be the root of all evil, but in practice it seems to "cover a multitude of sins" at these United States.

An editorial writer in the East informs us that those who sit in the seats of the financial mighty are growing pale grey, painful grey, when the subject of Coolex's policy of strict economy is mentioned. Having last year's suit and hat sent to the cleaner, though it may "take off" not in the pretty, encourages a possible emulation that augurs ill for the woolen mills. Free spenders make "good business" say those who dispense wampum, woolen-cotton and cotton manufacturers are woolens and good business being the consummation devoutly to be wished by the hot boys for whom the protective tariff was invented, the jingle of the money being the brand of music to which they eager, Uncle Cal's economy act is failing to get a "hand." And the drift of it is that this quiet Vermonter seems to have a head as hard as the granite of his native State, now that he sits in the drivers seat. Those who do not like his speed may get off and walk, seems that is he "indicates" that they may "light and take they feet in they hand. However the rumbles of discontent begin to come from the drawing-room passengers, the extra-fare boys in the observation car. We shall see what we shall see.

The action of the Tennessee legislature in prohibiting the teaching of the theory of evolution in forbidding a bit of editorial copy for most of our exchanges. The Elizabethtown News takes the position that "if the theory of evolution is right it ought to be taught and if it is wrong it certainly should not be taught." It seems to us that if the theory is wrong, that is to say, untrue, no action of any law-making body can prove its truth. If it be right, that is to say a true theory, no act of any legislature will render it less true, nor can it prevent its dissemination.

"Trash crushed to earth shall rise again."

In the meantime, there is fishing as a consolation. One may sit quietly on the bank of a stream and listen to the ceaseless, soothing murmur of the water as it ripples over nearby shallows. Upping blooms on the slope of the grassy bank at your side, the cool of the meadow lark, "pour-boy-sat-t-see-me," comes to you from the fields; a red bird whistles from the woodland and many voices of feathered folk join in the paean of joy in Nature's awakening. The gay little cork, seen through dreaming eyes, becomes a symbol of Hope, to be watched fondly as it bobs with a premonitory dip. But it is a false alarm and again it floats placidly. A veritable bean brunnel in his coat of brown with beautifully mottled vest, the brown thrasher perches on the topmost branch of a nearby tree and gives you his entire repertoire. Love, joy of life, humorous raillery, a hint of accusory in the rosenert of this talented singer. And now you gulvanize into life. Your cork is gone! and—you miss—you miss him. Oh, well, catching fish is only half of the joy of angling "Cheer-up, cheer-up, cheer-up, cheer!" says our old friend Cock Robin, who has just found an especially nice worm, and with that familiar note there come back the April twilights of childhood, the smell of freshly turned earth, the feel of the blue grass sod to feet newly bared, the plaintive cry of a lamb and the gruff but tender maternal answer, the sound of a caress of supper cooking and the anticipatory nosing of a freshen from stuffy school rooms soon to come. How easy is dream, soothing by Nature's harmonies. Politics! How petty in comparison the struggles, for what? Here is entertainment for you, here a candidate for your favor, who "speaks a various language."

For his gayer hours
She has a vein of gladness and a smile,
An eloquence of beauty, and she glides
Into his darker musings
With a mild and healing sympathy,
That steals away their sharpness, Ere he is aware.

She does not seek to win you by playing upon your prejudices, by exacting and bunkum. She enthralls you with beauty, soothing melody, quiet peace and as she weaves her magic spell, man and his petty concerns and ambitions shrink into nothingness as the consciousness comes to you that here is a something real, here is life, reborn in the beauty of youth after countless thousands of rebirths, to which thought there is hope, a sense of security, a feeling of peace.

POEMS THAT WE LIKE.

If——

(Kipling)

If you can keep your head when all about you
Are losing theirs and blaming it on you,
If you can trust yourself when all men doubt you,
But make allowance for their doubting too;
If you can wait and not be tired by waiting,
Or being lied about, don't deal in lies,
Or being hated don't give away to hating,
And yet don't look too good, nor talk too wise:

If you can dream—and not make dreams your master;
If you can think—and not make thoughts your aim,
If you can meet with Triumph and Disaster
And treat those two impostors just the same—

If you can bear to hear the truth you've spoken
Twisted by knaves to make a trap for fools,
Or watch the things you gave your life to, broken,
And stoop and build 'em up with worn-out tools:

If you can make one heap of all your winnings
And risk it on one turn of pitch-and-toss,
And lose, and start again at your beginnings
And never breathe a word about your loss:

If you can force your heart and nerve and sinew
To serve your turn long after they are gone,
And so hold on when there is nothing in you
Except the Will which says to them: "Hold on!"

If you can talk with crowds and keep your virtue,
Or walk with Kings—nor lose the common touch,
If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you,
If all men count with you, but none too much:

If you can fill the unforgiving minute
With sixty seconds' worth of distance run,
Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it,
And—which is more—you'll be a Man, my son!

Dorothy Ann Louise, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter D. Poulos, born at Stanford hospital March 5.

More to come

The addendum "More to come" is placed after a story by the linotype operator to signify that he has more of the same stuff to follow. Sometimes the make-up man neglects to remove the 8'1 line e' type and the sense of the item is distorted thereby as in the above gem.—Hopkinsville New Era.

OUR FEATHERED FRIENDS

THE BALTIMORE ORIOLE

(By Stella Wignot, Agricultural Extension Department, International Harvester Company)

One poet has called this bird "A bit of sunset descended with a voice."

No exception can be taken to its fond praise. Eighty-four per cent of its entire food consists of insects, and only four per cent of their insects are ants. Test caterpillars, cankerworms, flower beetles, leaf-eating beetles, wasps, ants and scale insects are the bill of fare.

The orioles are especially useful in the orchard if the golden bird is loyal, for they migrate over the entire fruit belt when the larvae of the boll weevil are doing their greatest damage.

The excellent food habits of this bird, its cheery whistle, bright color, and interesting family ways endear it to the hearts of all.

The Baltimore oriole is the best nest builder we have. Its hanging nest is made from the bulb branch of a tree. Grasses, horsehair, bits of string, shreds of silk, and sometimes brilliantly colored yarns are skillfully woven.

The orchard oriole is smaller and colored differently. The male Baltimore oriole is orange and black, the female dull yellow in color and conspicuous when compared to her mate. The young male orchard oriole is strikingly colored—bright green and yellow.

The nest of the orchard oriole is made of long grasses, and is very soft, but it is made entirely of green grass blades and stems and is always fastened to growing branches instead of hanging from horizontal ones.

PURE BRED LIVE STOCK PAYS

(Appleseed Saint)

The fact that it pays to raise purebred cattle was demonstrated the past week when two carloads of Hereford cattle were bought in the Louisville market, one load bringing $140.00 per hundred, a new record for the year, and the other a close second at $0.50 per hundred.

The campaign being waged in Kentucky to eradicate bovine tb is most commendable one. There is nothing that will increase the market of quality in live stock as quickly as the eradication of tb. Especially is this true if high-class dams are used. The cattle that are responding promptly prove true, that the rest of the herd can be made to give their profits for their time and labor and the heartbreaking of their owners in the same operation. The time is now a little early for them to raise something besides tobacco. He must be a defender of the industry of a few inch class cows and a few purebred blood sires, together with the proper crop rotation, will all but make the farmer rich in a few years, so to speak, and bring happiness and contentment to every home in our country. Why not start Now?

WHAT IS MAY DAY?

Child Health Talks by Dr. Josephine Baker, Director of Child Hygiene, New York City.

A message has come forth at last that on May Day the nation turns aside momentarily from the fierce struggle for existence to pay their tribute of reverence to childhood. Why it should be so is not clear, but it is a most welcome bit of new custom. Only it should be made a little more definite. Why not have a child's day? Why not have a child's day every month? Why not have a child's day every week? Why not have a child's day every day? Why not have every day a child's day and everybody's opportunity to be a child?

No one in this country who has had heart the good of children can well withhold his support from this celebration. Each effort, no matter how small, linked to those of forts will help to make the chain stronger. We have been many national days, but usually they have been days of backward looking, of memorializing what has been. May Day is a day of looking forward, of remembering what shall be." It is a day dedicated to which we can, the land can object, the defense of the rights of children, upon whom, more than upon any other class of people, the future depends. Let us make a day that shall be memorable in accomplishment, that will leave their stamp upon the future, helping to make it more secure and upward.

In every county in the State Chairmen have been appointed to work with the local clubs for the May program as outlined by the Bureau of Child Health. Schools will have health parades and health plays, shop windows will be decorated with articles pertaining to childhood, Mayors and Men Clubs will have speakers on child health during May Day week and groups will gather to listen to the radio program sent out on May Day afternoon by the Louisville WHAS Broadcasting Station. Better Health for the apparently normal children will be the slogan for Child Health week.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 9th day of April, 1925.

Jimmie Hersey, Notary Public.

My commission expires Jan. 17, 1926.

Explosion of aerial fireworks bombs blew a man working in the shed at Stanford, Conn., forty feet and when picked up he were only a shoe.

THE other day I was a guest at the home of a friend. I took delight in watching the great pains to which both host and hostess went in making me comfortable. Not because it meant so much to me, which it did, but because I saw in it the kindlish spirit of people putting forth earnest effort to please someone.

When I say that this is the spirit of our store, I mean that this is the very thing we are trying to do, day in and day out, for every one who crosses our threshold.

When one of our men suggested a Davenport Bed to a lady in this very spirit the other day, she wondered whether he was merely trying to make a sale, but she has become convinced since buying it, that her interests were uppermost in his mind.

We believe in that sort of thing. We try to practice it.

Have You This Habit?

JOHN BALL

JOHN BALL crept out of the district office about three o'clock. "A year's real and a dollar's worth of experience," he told the verdict. It wasn't that he had been discharged—not exactly—but three. What could a man do with his free time? Everybody else was busy. John had come across several cards handicapped in one way or another, and he knew what disappointments were in the modern race. One acquaintance of his had been thought of as "queer" with a pinky wife; John had met another woman who was all right in every way except that she was a widow, and John had tried to substitute an office for brains, and had been watched him gradually slipping, slipping, slipping behind. Then there was the plucky soul who always lost several months a year through illness, and who, when he was working, always drove so hard on other ones in the keep abreast of the best. It was the tasks of these, and others like them, with warmest hands, that John Ball had in mind when he resigned from the station on his way to his home in the suburbs to break the news to his family, to propose, through sheer caution, to buy a newspaper. Before the stand, which was so big a sky in the station, stood a stocky chap of thirty. The paper must have Ball's voice and at the familiar "Evening Daily, Carlisle," he sang out: "Here's an opportunity and management for a hustler. Ball stepped up to the stand. "Let me have one," said John Ball to himself, that "if you blind" sign that's been hanging there for so long frustrating, so insulting, and, on the other hand, a chance of professional pride that was good to see.

In spite of his proposition Ball passed for a minute and watched. Business asked for a paper of the day before and the blind man had to study and search with his fingers. Then he brought pillow done up neatly to new customers, and he found his way unerringly the right side and there, with a certain assertion that avoided offense, he counted out the correct change. Suddenly John Ball knew that such technique had been learned; that it had taken time and pluck; and that it had come with success, and inspired and in consideration of the obstacles overcome, but absolute and complete. Like another good motto, this one had come to mean more as it persisted day later, light dawned on John Ball. He was a man with a habit—a habit of success, and he was going to keep it. Yes, most acquire the habit of all good workmen, of using and accomplishing of their tools.

6,000 Intelligent Farmers are looking SOUTH!

As the direct result of such advertising as is shown on the left, which is appearing in the big gun farm, poultry and dairy journals of the Nation, more than 6,000 better-class farmers and cattlemen have written to the Immigration and Industrial Department of this Railroad, asking for information about the Southland.

The great territory served by this Railroad is thereby being intelligently builded by the bringing of good farmers from the North to till the better farm lands of the South.

This Railroad does not offer an acre of land for sale, is interested in no real estate companies, and has as its sole object for such work the upbuilding of the territory it serves.

Ask the agent of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad or any passenger car-
